In connection with all exchange advertising in these columns the publishers of the WEEKLY are compelled to require that subscribers establish for themselves the reliability of persons with whom they enter into exchange relations. We have made this statement a number of times and feel compelled to again call the attention of our readers to this matter.

status of these stamps, with a corresponding increase in the value of unused Rhodesian stamps in every collection throughout the world.

Briefly recapitulating our position as regards this important transaction, we may state:—

(1) The entire stock of stamps had to be sold.

(2) It could be purchased either cancelled, or, after demonetisation, in unused condition at less than face value.

(3) That, considering the interests of collectors, we decided that it was best that the matter should be handled by ourselves, in which case we were in a position to safeguard those interests, which were further protected by our decision to have the stamps cancelled.

(4) That the cancellation used was a legitimate cancellation applied by the Company in order to destroy the facial value of the stamps.

(5) That if we had agreed to the alternative mode of disposal and had purchased the stock in unused condition at less than face value, all the stamps of Rhodesia of the issues concerned would have been demonetised, while by purchasing the stock in cancelled condition, demonetisation of existing unused stamps was not necessary.

As the purchase of this stock was in the nature of a wholesale deal, which comes rather outside the scope of our usual business, we re-sold the entire stock to a firm of dealers who are in a position to handle it, and in all probability, with the exception of complete sets to the numbers given above, the majority of the stamps will find the usual markets abroad.

Throughout the whole transaction there has been nothing of a secret nature, nor, indeed, anything to conceal. We have not, however, noticed any marked tendency, nor do we recognise any obligation, on the part of business firms to make the details of their important transactions public to the world. It is only the thought of the uneasiness which may be caused to collectors by the unfounded statements which have been made and the foolish rumours which are in circulation, which has decided us to make this full statement of the details of the sale of the Rhodesian Remainers.

We believe that, bearing in mind the fact that, whether collectors liked it or not, the stamps were coming on the market, philatelists will agree that our action was in the best interests of the collecting fraternity and that nothing has been done which is likely to have any derogatory effect on either the philatelic or market status of the stamps of an extremely interesting and popular country.—Stanley Gibbons Monthly Journal.

THE REBUS RESULTS.

The Pictorial Philatelic Rebus published in the issue of March 24, 1923, the work of Mr. G. A. Hunt, attracted the attention of many of our readers, and fully one hundred answers were received from participants, some of whom said that they enjoyed the puzzle very much. We could give quotations from letters that were received showing that collectors of all ages and of all stations were engrossed in solving it. Several special delivery letters and a number of registered missives showed that some of the solvers were particularly serious in their attentions. About every state in the Union was represented in the list of correspondents, and several foreign readers tried their hand at the game. A number of the devices shown by Mr. Hunt in his picture were particularly elusive, and it is evident that Mr. Hunt drafted his pictures from an old catalogue. The contest was perhaps the most popular of the whole series that Mr. Hunt has supplied and while no answer registered perfection, yet there were a half dozen contributors that barely missed this high mark. In selecting the list of winners, various considerations were given weight, and those who are named for preference may know that they had plenty of opposition. Each entry was gone over carefully, and it is doubtless to be said that no contestant has been slighted. We acknowledge the receipt of a prize from the Fellowship Stamp Agency, Mountain View, California, in the form of a picked set of Far Eastern Republic and Russian stamps with a catalogue value of over $5.00. This firm specializes in these stamps and has a large stock of them. Mr. R. Y. Ellis donates a prize of a block of four of the one shilling Falkland Isles with the local "war stamp" overprint; and an anonymous contributor gives a strip of three of the large $2.00, wine stamp, U. S., of the first issue. Other prizes are awarded by the WEEKLY in accordance with the announcement made at the time the Rebus was published, and so all who are named may expect to win some tangible evidence of their enterprise.

As has been said, many of those who competed expressed themselves as interested in philatelic puzzle work, and even though some of these correspondents did not send in complete sets of answers, yet they said that they enjoyed the hunt for the missing links.

We acknowledge with thanks the interest shown by the numerous entries and trust that those who have not been named in the list of awards will feel that the time spent by them in their attempts to identify the parts of stamps was not wholly in vain. An added general knowledge of stamps is gained by anyone who goes in a competition of this kind.

A TRIBUTE TO J. E. GUEST.

By A. G. ELLIOTT 3rd.

If organized philately ever had a 100% booster it has one in J. E. Guest, of Dallas, Texas, who has for a long time been connected in an executive capacity with the various stamp organizations of this country.

At present and for the past three years he has been sales superintendent of the American Philatelic Society. His work in this department has brought a decided increase in sales, each year, and today the department is the largest of its kind in the world.

Last year there was sold for members thru the department nearly $40,000.00 in stamps and this year the total will exceed that figure.

His efficient and impartial management has made him a host of friends among the patrons of the department and the excellent service he has been giving has attracted many new members to the Society.

It has been said that "the success of a stamp society depends on the success of its sales department" and this is clearly borne out in the recent growth and development of the A. P. S., since Mr. Guest has been in the office of sales superintendent.

The American Philatelic Society is the largest stamp society in this country and has set a goal of 5,000 members within the next year or two. It now has approximately 3,000 members and is well worthy of the support of every collector in this country.

Mr. Guest is assisted in his work by his wife, Elizabeth L. Guest (A. P. S., No. 6124), much of the detail work being handled by her. An ultimate goal $100,000 in sales a year has been set by Mr. Guest for the department, and it is hoped that the incoming Board of Directors will retain him in the office he now holds, so that this may be accomplished.

Mr. Guest has been a regular advertiser in the WEEKLY for several years and attributes his success in recruiting new members for the Society largely due to the replies to his continuous advertising. "J. E." is a born optimist, a likeable kind of a fellow, whose one ambition seems to be to render a real service to the members of the Society and philately at large.

Mr. Guest has been a regular attendant at the annual conventions of the Society for the past several years and will be on hand at the August meeting in Detroit.

If you are not a member of the American Philatelic Society you are invited to become one and join hands with Mr. Guest, and the other officers and members of the Society in putting organized Philately on a more permanent basis in the U. S.

THE PHILATELIC INSTRUCTOR.

By STEPHEN G. RICH.

Comment on "The Philatelic Instructor," Chapter I, by Dr. Francis M. Botelho, in MEKEEL'S WEEKLY, May 26, 1924, by Stephen G. Rich, Ph. D., Box 13, Essex Fells, N. J. (Instructor in Physics, Union Hill High School, Weehawken, N. J.).

I think, first of all, that Dr. Botelho is doing a most useful piece of work in writing this set of articles. There is just one trouble: they are published in a paper that reaches those who are already philatelists. I should like to see them reprinted in other papers; and I suggest that "Education," published by the Palmer Co., 120 Boylston Street, Boston, Mass., might care for them. Possibly the Educational Review, Garden City, N. Y., might also care for them.

I find myself in disagreement with the last paragraph of Dr. Botelho's first article on one or two items. When he talks of "cultivation of orderliness and continuity," he goes on the unwarranted assumption that there are such general qualities or "faculties" of mind, and that cultivation of them in one line of activity carries with it any improvement in them in other lines. During the past fifteen years there have been made a large number of studies of such alleged transfers or spreadings of training, and the net result is to show that the extent and amount of generalized training, spread, or transfer is so little as to be negligible. The evidence in the case is well summarized in two chapters of the book, "Educational Psychology" by D. Starch, published by Macmillan.

The case for philately as a hobby is sufficiently strong without this appeal to non-existent "general training" or "formal discipline." The case is only weakened by the inclusion of such irrelevant and fantastic arguments.

If Dr. Botelho will only look among his philatelic friends he will find that those who have acquired orderliness since coming into philatelic activity do not carry it over into dress, business, bookkeeping, etc. He will find that those who already had it in a few lines only before coming into philatelic activities carry only a small part of it with them into this line, and have to learn it anew in the new field. Those who have it in many other phases of life carry more of it into philately. The same holds true of "continuity"—a term of such vague variety of meaning that its inclusion in the article in question is likely to give rise to as many conflicting interpretations of the sense of the phrase as there are readers.

Transfer or spread of training or habits takes place to a large degree only when consciously and purposely undertaken by the person involved. Its occurrence is so erratic, so unpredictable and usually so small in amount and found in so few persons as to make it unwise to pay attention to it as an outcome to be expected.

UNITED STAMP SOCIETIES.

The 6th Annual Convention of the U. S. S. was held at the American House Boston, Mass., on Sat., May 31, 1924. The following officers were unanimously elected for the ensuing year: Pres., T. H. Ames, Montclair, N. J.; 1st Vice-Pres., F. L. Wood, Worcester, Mass.; 2nd Vice-Pres., H. S. Dunhaupt, Hackensack, N. J.; Sec., E. L. Clark, Lynn, Mass.; Treas., T. H. Boston, Mass. Worcester, Mass., was chosen for the seat of the 1925 convention. T. H. Ames was given a rising vote of thanks for settling the Sales Dept. tangle last year. The convention ratified the constitution as printed in the 1923 year book (additional copies may be secured from the Sec.). The president and Board of Governors were requested to reappoint J. W. Chew, of Philadelphia, Pa., as general sales manager. After the business session the delegates were taken to dinner as guests of the Suburban Stamp and Curio Club of Boston.

COLLECTING ADDS ZEST TO LIFE.

Develops Wariness, Ambition and Perseverance, says Bennett.

Hold Bennett (Woman's Home Companion.)
The collecting instinct is not quite so usual, abnormal, or absurd as those assume who despise deliberate and organized "collecting." Still less is collecting usually a form of madness or mania which entitles its devotees to a place in a lunatic asylum.

Intentional collecting, persistently and scientifically pursued in one direction, simply the harnessing and driving for purposes of pleasure of a great desire common to the bulk of mankind. Some collectors become in course of time addictedly peculiar; they will make inordinate sacrifices for the pastime. But people who are not collectors often come peculiar.

Collecting has various qualities to commend it. For example, it is a wonderful resource for those who cannot play games or do not care for games, and for those who are not amateurs of art or science, and for those who can't or can't travel, and for those who have a special bent towards ownership possessiveness. It is a pastime not governed by any rules; and it can be pursued at any time and does not need a partner.

It develops wariness, ambition, perseverance and the capacity not to be deterred by difficulties. Also it definitely increases knowledge and improves the mind. I doubt whether any form of collecting has been so bitterly condemned the superior as stamp collecting. And nobody can seriously collect stamps without learning a lot about history and geography and economics and transport—not to mention the craft of printing and the craftiness of politicians, monarchs and permanent officials.

Further, collecting more often than it develops the sense of beauty; for most objects searched for by collectors are beautiful in themselves. Not all, however; still, when they have not utility they have at least quaintness and human association.
The collector has always an interest;
a refuge from the tedium of existence.
And what is more, he can generally interest his friends.

ORIGINAL COVERS

For many years the collecting of stamps on original covers was confined chiefly to the United States. Recently however European collectors have come to recognize the wider field for the study of postal markings, routes, rates, etc., offered by covers, only to discover that most early issues are practically "off the market" on cover. Three months careful search through Italian and French cities has resulted in a collection we think it would be hard to duplicate. The lot is particularly strong in Italian States—Two Sicilies, Roman States, Tuscany, Lombardy-Venice—but there are also some fine early Holland, Greece, Roumania, Austria, etc. May we send you a selection? A few sample prices.

THE U. S. POSTAL AGENCY IN SHANGHAI.

By E. G. YOUNG

Professor of Railway Mechanical Engineering, Nanyang University.

III. THE STAMPS.

1. The Unofficial Issues.

From the beginning of its history regular United States stamps were in use at the Shanghai postal agency.
These were sold for U. S. currency (easily procured in Shanghai—it was just four hundred feet to the nearest exchange shop)—or for Chinese money at a rate of exchange which was fixed about once a month. "Enter the villain," in the person of the exchange problem.
China is a silver standard country which has a currency on a non-fiduciary basis:
that is, the coin is only valued for the silver it contains. The Chinese dollar varies in value relative to the gold dollar from day to day, exactly as does the Mexican currency more familiar to most Americans, upon which the Chinese dollar is indeed based. The subsidiary coins, being of varying degrees of fineness, change in value not only with the gold dollar but with the silver dollar as well, hence double exchange lists were required—the value of silver relative to gold, and the value of "small money" relative to the silver dollar. This worked reasonably well as long as the variation in the value ratio was not great. Other offices provided themselves with stamps evaluated in Chinese currency. (French 1907, German 1905, Russian 1917, Italian 1918: note that values of the British stamps are expressed in cents, the Hongkong dollar being almost identical with the China dollar.) The Japanese postoffice sold stamps at the rate of a cent for a sen when the value of the dollar fell below that of the yen; when it was higher, an allowance was made on the exchange.

By 1917 it will be seen that all of the offices except that of the United States were "on the map" philatelically, and there were a considerable number of resident American collectors who had a longing to be on this map too! Finally under the urge of this feeling, Postmaster Darrah brought a small hand press into the office and overprinted a considerable number of values (though of some probably only one sheet) with the words "SHANGHAI CHINA" in two lines in neat sans-serif capitals similar to the 1908 "Congo Belge" surcharge (see current Standard Catalog,
p. 337). The stamps thus overprinted were the perf. 10 series to $1, also the 13c 1902, which was still on sale here.

A rubber stamp reading "SHAI CHINA" in two lines of letters similar to the Guam surcharge but slightly smaller was also applied liberally to parcels post stamps, including the "dues," and there were plenty of fancy varieties—doubles, inverts, etc., available.
The writer has a local cover "franked" with a two-cent parcels-post-due, with the surcharge inverted. Needless to say this action on the part of the postal agent called down sharp censure from the Department. It has not been possible to trace any of these stamps to America, and the writer would very much like to know whether any covers bearing these have been seen at home and if they were taxed on arrival. The local collectors and dealers bought them up eagerly, and such are still floating are held at big prices, the Chinese dealers meanwhile being greatly troubled because they can not be found in the catalog!

2. The Regular Issue.

Early in 1919 the value of the silver dollar began to move erratically after a steady upward climb due to conditions related to the war. As a result the periodic postings of sale prices of the stamps in "Mex" were frequently quite out of line with the hour-by-hour bank exchange quotations. This opened up speculation possibilities, and resulted in big runs on the stamp window when buying conditions were favorable. One old resident tells of at least one day when a gold dollar as such would buy fifty two-cent stamps, but changed into a silver dollar and some "small money" it would buy sixty-one of them! The standard stamp booklets were hawked in places frequented by Americans at a few cents discount. The attempt to sell stamps for U. S. money (i.e., "gold")— even ten-cent pieces being so called—worked so much inconvenience to the casual bona fide patrons of the office that the distinctive stamps became an absolute necessity. The first consignment was put on sale in May, 1919, the issue consisting as is well known of all values (except the 11c) from 1c to $1 surcharged

SHANGHAI
2c
CHINA,

the value in local currency being double the face value in gold. Unsurcharged stamps were also kept on sale for gold only, while the overprinted ones were sold for Chinese money only. When these stamps were issued the value of the silver dollar was about 80c gold—hence the purchaser paid sixty percent, additional for the convenience of buying his stamps in silver. As long as the value of the silver dollar was above fifty cents gold the government derived a big profit off of the exchange—and of course all large users of stamps bought in gold only. Many smaller firms however became alive to the philatelic possibilities, and found that the value of cancelled overprinted stamps was considerably greater than the premium on their purchase, and hence it would be expected that used copies of the higher values should be disproportionately common. When the value of the silver dollar fell below fifty cents gold the overprinted stamps were taken off of sale and only "gold stamps" sold, in order that the former might not be sold below their gold face value. The overprinted stamps remained on sale until September, 1920, when they were taken off of the counter and not returned until October, 1921. After this they continued on sale until the closing of the office except for a brief period in February, 1922.

3. The Second Printing.

When the Philatelic Agency of the Stamp Division was opened in 1922, the Shanghai overprint set was placed on sale there, and collectors who purchased these stamps immediately discovered that a second printing had taken place, slight differences being discernible in every value. In most denominations both printings were necessary for comparison before these differences could be seen, but in the case of the 2c, 3c, 6c, 8c, 12c, and 50c (gold values) they were well marked. The first-named is printed

Want Lists. A Specialised Service

For years I have made a specialty of the execution of Want Lists. Few firms in this country have developed this side of the business to the same extent.

Owing to the great increase in my American business, I have now established a WANTS REGISTER on the basis of Scott's catalogue. Collectors may therefore send me their full want lists and be confident that they will not be side tracked and that they will receive constant attention. Selections will be sent on approval at regular intervals.

I sell stamps in Fine Condition only. My prices average half catalogue, and will bear comparison with any market in the world. I have, at the moment, nothing to offer in old U. S., but have an immense stock of British and French Colonials, Europeans, Asiatics, Africans and South Americans. I stock no common stamps and New European rubbish. In fact, nothing issued after 1912.

Approval selections of any country against references.

in a slightly deeper shade of rose-carmine; the three is much more violet than the original printing; the six in a brighter orange; the eight and twelve are the respective sub-varieties listed by Scott (olive bistre and claret brown in place of olive and brown-carmine) while the fifty is more blue than the original. It has been stated on the best of authority that the stamps placed on sale at Washington were actually returned from Shanghai, but some doubt must be cast upon this by the fact that at various times during the last year there were acute shortages of certain values in the Shanghai Agency and when new supplies arrived they were in every case (with four notable exceptions) replaced with identical stamps of the first printing. Further, it is absolutely certain that no stamps of the denominations most needed (one and two cent gold values) of the second printing had been received in Shanghai until after July 15th, and they had been on sale in Washington previous to this. (This fact is proved by the necessity for the local provisionals.)

The four exceptions to which reference has been made are the one-cent, two-cent, eight-cent and twelve-cent values. The twelve-cent claret brown was placed on sale about August 1st. The eight-cent olive-bistre was placed on sale almost the last day—December 30th, probably, and used copies are very scarce indeed. It will be noted that the catalog does not recognize this variety; there is no possible objection to its legitimacy, for while it could doubtless have been dispensed with, it was really needed and was placed on sale under the regular conditions on the exhaustion of the supply of the stamps of the first printing. The other two values are mentioned in the next section.

4. The Local Provisionals.

Having purchased a set of the second printing from Washington the writer was constantly on the lookout for their appearance here. On July 3rd a casual purchase of a few one's and two's brought a great surprise—surface printed two-cent-stamps with an entirely new overprint, the letters smaller, the work obviously lithography, and the abbreviation "Cts." in place of "c". A very discreet stamp-clerk after much "pumping" admitted that they were an emergency issue locally made, and that only the two values were so treated. Further information was not forthcoming, and the remainder has been secured from Washington: there were two hundred panes of each denomination lithographically surcharged by a native press here in Shanghai; the business was handled through the Chinese compradore of the Consulate and the name of the printer is now unknown. The stones were destroyed immediately. (Note: the day of the finishing of this story, a Chinese dealer has told the writer of being offered obvious "fakes" of the 2c, which is here regarded as much the rarer of the two values. Watch out for them!) The one-cent stamp used for the overprinting was the regular engraved variety, and the following plates have been seen: 10599, 11729, 11787, 11790, and 11792. (Additions to the list gratefully received.) The two cent stamp is the surface printed variety (Die VI), and all are from plate 13129. No errors of any kind have been found; missing letters, doubles and inverts are pleasingly absent. Of course the process of making the overprint would result in minor variations; the most notable of these is in the varied form of the stop after "Cts," which ranges from almost a perfect circle to a rectangle. The variation is not consistent when panes are compared, proving it to be largely in the inking.

The combined philatelic and postal demand cleaned these stamps up very quickly and they were replaced by the regular overprint after about eleven days of currency. But when the new one- and two-cent stamps arrived there was another surprise: the one-cent was the same as the stamp bought from the Washington Agency, but the two cent was neither the same as the first printing or the Agency stamp, but in a new shade of deep carmine with a lake tinge. Whether there was actually a third printing or whether there were two distinct lots of stamps overprinted "4c" in the second printing is unknown, but the latter is probably the case. The fact remains: all of the deep-carmine-lakes came to Shanghai, and all of the rose-carmines went to the Agency in Washington; no Shanghai collector at least ever received the former from Washington and the latter was never on sale in Shanghai.

5. The "Double Dollar."

Some time in October, 1922, the discovery was made by the clerk at stamp-window that the sheet of $1 from which he was selling as new had a clear double surcharge. He was instructed to continue selling the stamps as they were called for, and it is believed that it was an Italian sailor who first appreciated the variety and bought up the remainder of the pane. About a dozen were sold and probably used for the ordinary run of business—most of the remainder came back upon the Shanghai market at decidedly favorable prices. A careful study of the available material has been made by Mr. E. Butler of this city, which was recently summarized in the WEEKLY. It is clear that the movement of the sheet in the trade between the two overprintings was angular only: a number of stamps on the lower right side of the pane scarcely show the doubling at all, while the sheet at the N.W. and S.W. corners is a eighth of an inch. Only one pane was found.

IV. GENERAL NOTES.

Validity of the stamps in America: the writer has seen many covers and parcels prepaid from American mail points with Shanghai overprinted stamps; many of these have been delivered here in Shanghai without extra charge; the writer has several which passed through the New York post-office, obtained by sending a stamped and self-addressed envelope to a bank for the monthly statement.

Covers: From the beginning satisfactory covers were difficult to obtain. Values except the two lowest were frequently removed from the envelopes before delivery: the writer has seen a cover from which the "Shanghai" was removed and an unsurcharged (six-cent) was put in its place and the cancellation clumsily faked. The registry cancellation was very unsatisfactory from philatelic standpoint, the impression usually dirty and the date illegible.

Profit from the sale of surcharged stamps: there were, of course, additions to the postal revenue as a result of the sale of the stamps, but these were a large share of the receipts. This is proved by the fact that the receipts for 1921 (through most of which the stamps

(1.) I made the statement that Shanghai has the largest American colony and this is generally believed here. However, I have recently seen figures indicating that there are a much larger number of temporary residents at least in Paris.

(2.) Re the unofficial surcharges: since writing the notes I have also seen a perf. 12 set with the "SHANGHAI, CHINA" overprint.

(3.) The report of the Director of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing quoted by Mr. Ward in the WEEKLY for Dec. 10th—last complete paragraph on p. 642—confirms my statement that there was a third printing of the 2c, and evidently of the one-cent as well, though the color difference in this was too slight to be noticed.

AGENCY WILL HANDLE ENVELOPES.

W. Irving Glover, Third Assistant Postmaster-General, writes Hon. E. R. Cushman, M. C., on a matter of philatelic interest as follows:—

"On my return to the office today, I read your letter of May 23d, addressed to the Philatelic Agency, in which you close a letter to you from Mr. F. G. Lloyd of Rosindale, Mass., who desires to have the Philatelic Agency offer for sale all current issues of stamped envelopes.

This office has had some correspondence with Mr. Lloyd with respect to his suggestion, and about a year ago he was informed that the Agency would undertake to do this work as soon as sufficiently trained clerks could be obtained, as well as proper storage facilities, to take care of this additional task.

The Agency is now operating to its fullest capacity, by reason of the recent issuance of the Huguenot-Walloon Tercentenary series. However, it is intended to place on sale at the Agency all current issues of stamped envelopes in the very near future. In fact, arrangements are now being made for obtaining storage space to handle the envelopes conveniently. As these envelopes of the current series consist of approximately 90 varieties, it is necessary to secure such storage space that will be easily accessible to the employees in the Agency.

The Philatelic Agent has been instructed to order a supply of all current stamped envelopes as soon as the present emergency is over, and it is believed that Mr. Lloyd, or any other collector, can obtain envelopes of the current series on hand after August 1, 1924.

It is my desire that the Philatelic Agency extend every facility to collectors and this is being done as fast as the appropriations and work will permit."

NEWS GLEANINGS.

Under this heading we desire to publish all the news from the various philatelic centers. Correspondents' names will be given unless prohibited, as we desire to give full credit for services rendered.

—The ballots and proxy blanks of the American Philatelic Society are out. There is one ticket in the field, that headed by P. M. Wolsieffer, and thus, Mr. Wolsieffer and his running mates are assured of election.

—Mr. J. H. Prince of Chicago reported some time ago that he had the current two cent, perforated ten, pre-cancelled Chicago, New York and Waterloo, Iowa.

—The Philadelphia Branch of the American Philatelic Society held its last meeting of the season on June 12th, when Mr. James E. Hughes showed his collection of stamps and rarities on original covers, according to the programme.

—We relay the warning from Stamp Collecting "that some spurious Transjordanian overprinted on Hedjass stamps have found their way from the east."

—The British Philatelic Congress was scheduled for the week of June 2nd at Glasgow and a "crowded week" was anticipated by the collectors who were to attend the meeting, which no doubt accomplish no little serious work of lasting benefit to our pursuit.

—M. C. A.—The address you desire is Philatelic Agency, Washington, D. C. You may remit by certified check, money-order, or by currency in a registered letter.

—We have received from Vahan Moizian a card postmarked May 26. He informs us that the Brussels Exposition opened the previous day with so large a crowd that it was necessary to wait in a long line in order to go in. Besides himself, Messrs. Lichtenstein and Toasperm of New York and J. R. Taylor of Trenton, N. J., are representing the United States.

—At the meeting of Branch 18 of the A. P. S. at Philadelphia held June 12, James E. Hughes exhibited his fine collection of stamps on original covers.

—J. A. Bigelow, 290 Thatcher Ave., River Forest, Ill., would like the address of H. H. Hamilton, formerly located at Galt, Ont., Canada.

—Bryan, the son of the accommodating postmaster of St. Kitts-Nevis, George King, to whom philatelists are indebted for many courtesies, has just won a coveted honor among West Indian students, the Leeward Islands Scholarship for study in English. He is an "honor student."

—Of all the flighty cases, that involving the alleged Graceland Philatelic Club and its sponsor, Archer, seems to be highest in the air. If it were not for the fact that some of the dealers who sent stamps before writing to the "references," the thing would be a farce. It will be interesting to hear if any of the promises made on behalf of Archer are kept. Harry's Music Shop has removed from the premises on North Clark Street that it occupied when Archer received his mail there.

—In Frederick O'Brien's "Mystic Isles of the South Seas," he gives an amusing account of the delivery of mail under difficulties. "The captain added an anecdote to the entertainment (en route from San Francisco to Tahiti). 'Passing from Fiji to Samoa' he said, 'I had to leave the mail at Ninafore in the Tongan Islands. It is a tiny isle three miles long by as wide, an old crater in which is a lagoon, hot springs, and every sign of the devastation of many eruptions. The mail for Ninafore was often only a single letter and a few newspapers. We sealed them in a tin can, and when we met the postmaster at sea, we threw it over. He would be three miles out swimming with a small boy under his arm for support.'

—Fontaine Fox, the newspaper artist, uses one of the oldest of philatelic themes in a recent six picture strip. He shows one boy asking another if he collects stamps and when the innocent victim says that he would like to have the stamp that the inquisitor presumably has for him, the joker stamps on his foot. This is one of the hoariest of stamp jokes but this is the first occasion that it has been made the subject of pictorial mirth by one of the first artists of the land.

—We may now send francs to France for six cents each according to a new conversion table issued by the Post Office Department; and the pound is offered for $4.40.

—From Prof. Young of Peking and Theodore Siddall of Shanghai, we have received specimens of the new six and eight cent of China.

—Mr. H. A. Diamant of St. Louis, passed through Chicago on his return from New York recently.

—The following paragraph appeared recently in Riq's Column in the Chicago Post:

"What's your Alma Mater?" we asked Nefarious.

"Scranton," he proudly replied.

"Ah!" we admired. "But what do you do in the way of attending annual reunions?"

"I get out my stamp album and turn the pages," explained Nefarious.—I. C. S. B.

H. E. HARRIS & CO.
"Service - Quality - Dependability"

Mr. Otto Holstein of Trujillo, Peru, official of a large South American enterprise, wanted to make his son's Christmas a memorable one by the gift of a good stamp collection.

Having heard, even in far-away Peru, of the dependability of H. E. Harris & Co., of the inherent, clear-cut quality of their merchandise, he naturally forwarded his order to this firm.

Due to a miscalculation, the order did not arrive in Boston until 3 P. M. on November 30th—and the last ship to Peru was scheduled to leave New York the next day!

Many would have failed, but Harrisco dependability met the emergency just as it has always done. The completed order was on the train for New York by 5 o'clock—just two hours after receipt. Arriving there, it was rushed by special messenger to the docks, and was on board the S. S. Santa Teresa a few minutes before sailing time.

Read what Mr. Holstein has to say:

December 26, 1924.

Gentlemen:
I have to acknowledge receipt of your very kind letter of the 30th ultimo, together with the stamps and other articles, all of which arrived aboard the S. S. Santa Teresa on December 24th.

You will pardon me for entering into matters that probaly hold no interest for you, but I had expected my son, who goes to school in Lima, to be home for Christmas. As it turned out, he will be a little late, owing to poor steamship service on the coast, but had he arrived—and this is the important thing—the stamps would have been here in the very nick of time and in spite of the delay to my letter and my miscalculations.

Major Edgar Erskine Hume of Washington referred me to your house and informed me that you were good people to do business with. I have written and thanked him for his thoughtfulness and have told him that this experience with your house has justified everything he said about you.

Again expressing my sincere thanks, I am
Yours very truly,

EDITORIAL.

An editorial that we have mentioned that appeared in a number of the papers published in the middle-west under the same management that concluded its sage observations with the statement that stamp collecting "offers little enticement" to the average man, came to us from a number of readers, one of whom took occasion to say, with some bitterness, that philately was yet a long distance from the haven of security. We can understand why a man who has the good of philately at heart would be a little bit discouraged at finding these sentiments in an intelligent newspaper service, and if he were inclined to be pessimistic, he would have a little thread on which to string his pearls. The fact of the matter is the editor of a newspaper pants for inspiration at times, and lacking it, the writing of his daily dole is not carried out with the enthusiasm that may be popularly supposed to permeate the editorialist when he is at work. For all we know the brainy boy who manufactured the editorial in question dictated it to his stenographer while his thoughts were far away on a fishing trip or on the golf links. Then again, his idea of stamp collecting, no doubt, is that held by so many men that it was something for the youth and not for the man of years. It is rather a safe editorial policy to slam any cult or class that seems to be vague and nebulous because it is not likely that there will be a recoil in such a case. We do not wish to be considered irritated by the editorial in question, and its inglorious finishing touch, but we think that the editor who is responsible for it ground it out in a mechanical way without really knowing much of anything about present-day philately. We agree that philately is not for the masses and that it does not appeal to many who are intelligent and proper in every way, but taken as a whole, the stamp collectors are of a class representative of the best in all walks of business and social life. We do not believe that we have anything to fear from a frank discussion in a public way about the reaction of the adult to philately, and philatelists who are in the swim well know that the additions latterly to the ranks of collectors are persons older than the average recruit of some years ago.

It is not to be denied that there are persons who have an affinity for stamps. They take to collecting naturally, and it is not necessary to encourage them to become interested in the pursuit. However, we dare not depend upon these persons to furnish the bulk of the new adherents as they are not met with in mass groups. The most promising field for recruiting is among those who have never had an opportunity to decide whether or not collecting appealed to them. It is only by bringing squarely before these outsiders some evidence of collecting that they will be able to choose the collecting path, if they are inclined toward stamps. It is quite necessary that the collector be willing to speak of stamps on occasion when he may do so without lugging in the subject by the heels. By this means he may introduce philately to some who may become well acquainted with it. These remarks are consequent of an ingenious test that is to be made by a philatelist who is interested in the growth of the pursuit. He says that he is going to see whether any average expectation may be arrived at through his efforts to bring outsiders face to face with stamps. He will discover, he hopes, that there will be a certain percentage of recruits that will follow a presentation of philately to them. If one out of twenty-five strangers to stamps will enlist in the cause, the percentage would be relatively high. If in double that number there would be one recruit, the proportion would be two per cent, and so on up or down the scale. While he is working out his calculations, it would be interesting if other collectors who meet many people in the course of the week or month would likewise try to arrive at some average that could be proved by experimentation with a good number of outsiders. We shall hope to hear that the percentage of possibilities is higher than we anticipate.

In one of his excellent handbooks on elementary stamp collecting, Mr. Fred J. Melville, president of the Junior Philatelic Society, tells of an amusing incident of a fond mother who asked little Gussie to show Mr. Melville, who had made his appearance as a guest, his stamp collection. Thereupon it is represented that Gussie "staggered into the room a few minutes later under the weight of a thumping big book which might well have broken the back of Atlas." Evidently the collection that needed a book as big as a dictionary to house it would be one well into the thousands, but it seems that the 470 varieties that Gussie proudly claimed title to were lost on the stretch of pages in the big volume. It is incongruous to find a $10.00 collection in a $5.00 album, and it is very much better for the beginner to go slow on the album proposition. It is certain that the owner of a few hundred stamps that are scattered through a large number of pages must soon get tired of looking for what, relatively, is a needle in the haystack, and nothing more tedious could be imagined for a non-philatelic onlooker to be cornered to see the stamp collection. The inference is that it is a mistake to start the beginner or the young collector with a pretentious album. There is a discord between a fine album and a handful of stamps that are selected by one having only a rudimentary knowledge of the rules of collecting, and it is far better to have a lot of stamps that are worthier a better habitation than is given them than to have stamps that are not worthy the fittings with which they are surrounded. If the attention of the boy is to be sustained, it is necessary that the specimens be arranged closely enough to make the story that is told by the stamps one that is practically uninterrupted. It is mistaken kindness for a parent or patron of a young collector to give him an expensive album at first; it is far better that the amount spent for a costly stamp book be expended on stamps, in the beginning.

One of our adult collectors makes complaint that the common stamp is neglected and that its praises as a unit in the collecting scheme have not been sung sufficiently. In fact, he becomes quite eloquent over the humble stamp and says that in the economy of philately it occupies a place as worthily as does the great rarity. He maintains that the appearance of commonness that is the result of familiarity with its design is greatly lessened by perfect condition. In other words, he repeats in a somewhat romantic way what we have at different times alleged, and that is that a collection of cheap stamps with each specimen in fine condition is as impressive in many respects as a collection of rarities. We do not seem to grasp any reason for the exploitation of one stamp over another, but it is to be admitted that rarity in a stamp is a distinct attribute, and the specimen that has it is entitled to more consideration than the one that lacks it. Outside of the one question of value, all stamps are equal in an abstract sense, although not a few stamps rise superior to their fellows by reason of qualities of design and production. We are not reluctant to indulge in a panegyric on the stamp that is without market value. It is entitled to respect, and when it is in perfect condition it makes an impression on the outsider every whit as deep as that of the stamps worth very much more. We believe that collectors have no grudge against the common stamp, and we cannot believe that it is under any disadvantage by reason of the fact that it is met on every hand. One consolation of the present day with its new issues is that they increase the number of stamps available, practically without cost, to a number that will allow one who cares to spend little or nothing on his collection to make a good representation of the stamp issues of the world in his album. About the only recommendation to be made is that collectors be as exacting in their demands for approximately perfection in condition of the stamp as they are when the greatest of rarities is under scrutiny.

MARKET IN MODERN COLONIALS.

Hebrides.—In this out-of-the-way or the condominium still drags on, though not always very smoothly. The fish-speaking population of Euro-origins is very small, and their grievances are not always heard. One of the complaints was that they were not to buy at their own post-office ade-stocks of the provisionals issued in and previous year. The fact was, were only overprinted in sufficient ers to meet the estimated normal ements when the shortage occurred, at when about 4000 of a 1d. provi-l stamp was the total printed, it was natural that orders for 1000 from duals usually purchasing in dozens refused, whilst European dealers practically unable to get any first from the post-office, and have had y on certain holders in Port Villa managed, despite restrictions, to get y hundred together. trying to realize on stocks of these issues recently, unless they have been something very much out of the ordinary, will have realized the truth of this with some force, as the prices generally fetched in an open market are quite small for collections, often hardly repaying the time and materials used in their collection and storage, let alone interest on the sum originally spent. It is also worth studying the official quotations of the exchanges before buying, as the rates current in London for some of the recently established so-called "gold currencies" are often rather instructive. Followers of the Exchanges will also notice that the rupee has been rising slightly and is now nearer 1/6 and that whilst many newspaper quotations give the par value as 154d, others still give the war-time figure of 2sh, at which point it was attempted to stabilize it when silver was so dear.

Dies and Papers.—The existence of two dies of certain K. George stamps does not seem to be making very much difference to the prices realized for these as such, collectors probably being content in the main to collect on the lines of definite shades and rejecting the multiplication of minor varieties unless to elucidate obscure points.

Coloured papers continue popular, although different shades seem to be the ones most sought after from time to time. First the white backs, then the emeralds, and now the buffs. These latter generally had only a short life and are quite distinct in daylight. Amongst the stamps worth picking up on this paper are the 3d stamps of Caymans, Leewards, Malta and other small colonies.

The lemon papers are also scarce, although not always so readily distinguished. In some cases they may be priced at the same figure as the ordinary yellow paper, although in reality much scarcer.

A good example of this is in the Jamaica 1st War Local, which exists on yellow, lemon and white-backed papers. The lemon is much scarcer than the yellow, although both are priced at the same figure, 2s6d, contrasting with 6s6d for the white-backed variety.

Condition.—A recent edition of the famous Yvert & Tellier catalogue gives particulars of the relative value of different conditions of stamps from superb copies to poor or slightly damaged ones, and gives definitions of the former as to perforation (or margins), centering and postmark. It is noteworthy, however, that defective or repaired stamps are more frequently offered and more readily saleable on the Continent than here; and probably the ratios of the values given err on the low side, particularly with the old imperis., which are difficult to sell for as much as 1/5th catalogue if in poor condition.

It is also noticeable that certain popular stamps, such as Triangular Capes, and high values like early 5sh stamps of Barbados and Trinidad, are much more readily saleable if only poor than other varieties really just as scarce.

There are far fewer fine shades of distinction in Modern Colonials as to the condition, and the values therefore much less valuable, but it should be borne in mind that very heavily cancelled and smudgy copies of even modern high values are very difficult to dispose of.

S. W. Africa.—A country well worth watching is S. W. Africa. There are going to be, by all appearances, some very scarce values here, and all collectors of Modern Colonials should keep an eye open on these, not to miss more than they can help.

It is too early yet and information too meagre as to relative numbers printed, with the different overprints, to decide which are going to be the best, but there does not seem to have been many large stocks laid down by speculators, and with the increasing demand shortly, when it is realized how good some of them really are, it seems safe to predict some relatively high-priced varieties appearing.

A fatal mistake some collectors make is to be possessed with the "get-rich-quick" idea and to possess no depth of vision. These only buy if they see an immediate profit. This would in time prove fatal to Philately. If the giants in the past, who bought the set of 4 Cape Triangulars for 2s6d, had had these ideas, they would never have collected stamps at all, and our hobby would never have passed beyond a schoolboy craze.

Now that it is prospering and going ahead so splendidly, study, work for and win the gentle Goddess of Philately, oh collectors! Do not do anything to set it back, such as by an exaggerated niggardliness or a suspicion of other collectors in general and dealers in particular. The latter are not out to do the collector, but properly supported will prove the collector's best friend; support also the scribes who cater so generously with such useful handbooks and publications, and you will reap a harvest of pleasure and fascination, as well as a solid investment, out of all proportion to your outlay, and lay the foundations of Security and Stability without which true Progress and Advancement are so difficult.—Philatelic Magazine.

FIVE-YEAR HONOR CLUB.

J. P. Whitworth, Sydney, N. S. W.

L. O. Philbrick, Haverhill, Mass.

R. W. Robinson, Oak Park, Ill.

It is rather unusual for us to receive applications for membership in the Honor Club from our subscribers across the seas. We note an exception in the case of J. P. Whitworth, who sends us his renewal from Sydney, New South Wales, announcing his early removal to Hobart, Tasmania, where he will be located with the Cadbury-Fry-Pascall Co. Ltd. He asks us whether "Early Low Values Specialized" is to be reprinted in booklet form and we are compelled to give a negative answer. We welcome Mr. Whitworth to the charmed circle.

Our Rotarian friend Len Philbrick of Haverhill, Mass., takes out his membership in the Honor Club with this observation: "Knowing that a cancelled check is often like a cancelled stamp, in that it has proven to be genuine, and also to forestall any possibility of my subscription expiring some night when I am asleep, I enclose enough to keep my name on your lists for a few weeks longer."

Thanks, Len.

Through Mr. Severn at our Chicago office we have received an application for membership in our Five-Year Honor Club from R. W. Robinson, Oak Park, Ill. Mr. Robinson is an active member of the Chicago Philatelic Society and while a relatively young man he has had a wide experience in stamps, some of which was gained while he was an assistant in the shop of the late F. W. Michael of Chicago.

UNITED STATES ERROR, 1919-1921
ROTARY PRESS IMPERF. HORIZONTALLY

A few years back the 1c and 2c of our former design were found in New York imperforated horizontally, and perforated 10 vertically. These stamps were from the coil waste and should have been perforated 11 the other way, giving us our well known rotary compound. These stamps inadvertently reached the New York post office and the variety has always been most desirable. Scott lists the two stamps as Nos. 538a and 539b, and lists them at 75c per stamp, that is, $1.50 a pair, or $3.00 a block. You will no doubt see the advance sheets pricing the variety at $4.00 a block or $8.00 for the two blocks, for the available supply is gradually diminishing, and like all stamps, increase in value as the dealer's stock becomes exhausted.

At the present time, I can offer magnificent mint pairs of the above two varieties at $2.00 or blocks of four of each at $4.00. A variety that will never be purchased cheaper, and one that is so reasonable that it should find a place even in a general collection. I know of no part perforated error of the United States that has ever sold at such a low figure. The issue is obsolete, so no more will occur.

A house organ with an inimitable style and charm, published every two months. Each issue consists of from 32 to 48 pages, every one containing a formidable array of unusual offerings in medium and scarce sets, packets and special collections, dealers' stocks, single stamps, philatelic supplies, etc., etc.

Albert C. Munson, 412 Broadway, Houston, Texas, writes:
"I enjoy the Bi-Monthly as much as MEKEEL'S; there is no other paper, house organ, journal or circular of any kind wherein one can find such extraordinarily good stock—and at such reasonable prices."

C. A. Ralston, 164 Vaughn St., Waterloo, Iowa, says:
"I am paying subscription charges for two large house organs, but would rather get along without both of them than to lose yours. If necessary, I know that I could pay a substantial subscription to the Bi-Monthly and save all of it on stamps offered in a single issue."

The Bi-Monthly Journal is a distinctive publication and absolutely free to patrons. You can't afford to be without it!

Transcontinental Air Mail Route.

I am officially advised under date of June 7th by the Division of Air Mail Service, that no special cancellation stamp will be used by postmasters in connection with the permanent inauguration of the Transcontinental Air Mail Service, that will be inaugurated on Tuesday, July 1st. Each landing field, however, has a rubber cancelling stamp giving the name of the field and the date of cancellation, which will be used when mailable matter is presented directly on the field due to lack of time to have it dispatched to the post-office. The air mail stamps issued in Washington last August will be available for this service, but regular stamps may be used if desired.

Wonderful 1857 Find.

Mr. Eugene N. Costales of the Scott Stamp & Coin Co., informs me that they have recently purchased a new find of mint blocks of the 1857 issue, which have never even been mounted. They are in wonderful condition with full original gum. There is a vertical block of six of the 90c, a block of fourteen of the 30c, the block being 5 x 3, with the lower right stamp missing, and I am advised that this is the largest block known. There was a block of eighteen of the 24c, and a block of twenty-four of the 12c from the second plate. Mr. Costales writes me that he has spoken to several of the well known specialists of this issue, and they confirm his opinion that this block of the 12c is the largest block known with full gum, although there are larger blocks known without gum. The find also included a magnificent block of eighteen of the 10c type II. In the case of the 5c, there were two blocks of six and one block of four all in the remainder shade of orange brown Type II. There were a number of 1c and 3c, but as the 1c were type V, and the 3c type II, they were of little importance.

1908, 2c Imperforated Sidewise Coil.

The Philatelic Agency recently received from one of the post-offices a part coil of the 2c, issue of 1908, with double line watermark, imperforated, arranged sidewise. This coil is well known endwise, but this is the first sidewise coil of the 1908 issue that has come to my attention. Of course, the variety cannot be distinguished from the stamp cut from the imperforated sheet, so that in order to know that you have the variety, it should actually be cut from the coil.

1920-21, 2c on 3c Provisional Envelopes.

Mr. H. Clay Reed calls attention to two new window varieties of the revalued envelopes which have not been listed heretofore. Mr. Reed has been fortunate in obtaining copies for his collection.

New Confederate Provisional.

Mr. Eugene Klein has shown me a new provisional Atlanta envelope. This is in Scott's type E2, and was originally a 5c envelope and later the figure 10 was impressed over the 5, thus giving us a 10c on 5c, which has not been known heretofore. The variety is on orange and is addressed to New Orleans, La.

ASCENSION.—Stanley Gibbons Monthly Journal report that they are advised by the Crown Agents for the Colonies that a new set for this island is "on order" the design being as for the current St. Helena but inscribed "Ascension" instead. The values run from ½d to 3sh and will be on script paper.

BELGIAN CONGO.—Mr. Henry Hooreman sends for chronicle the following new values in the new series: 20c olive green, 30c rose, 3fr brown, 5fr dark grey and 10fr grey. They are all of designs of native character and the same size as the ones previously issued.

PROFIT IN STAMP COLLECTING.

One can compute the number of age stamp collections that have been made by boys and girls between the ages 10 and 15. Boys, perhaps, are more likely to engage in the pastime, possibly because they have more opportunities pursuing the coveted bits of paper are more skilled in the art of "treasures. Elders in the youngsters' eyes look with indulgent toleration their pursuit. They say it is educational because it makes the child acquainted with countries and governments, some glimpses into history. Comparatively few persons realize that it is the joy of pursuit and achievement that makes the charm of collecting desired objects, there is a distinct commercial value to be placed on a stamp collection. It is when such amazing figures appear as those shown in the case of the Ferrary collection recently sold in Paris that the wonder is great. This particular sale, one of several made with the same collection, brought $1,000,000, but added to previous sales a total of more than $1,300,000, the largest amount ever obtained for a stamp collection, it is said.

The highest price paid for an English stamp at this latest sale was $1,930, paid for the extremely rare 10-shilling King Edward stamp overprinted "I. R. Official." For a Niger coast stamp $1,460 was paid.

In a recent sale by a New York stamp company showed what collectors would pay for rare United States stamps, though $88 was the highest item sold, this being paid for a Conate revenue stamp.

There are great collections of stamps remaining unbroken they will probably go on for years or later to governments or museums for permanent keeping. King George is said to have the largest and most complete collection of stamps in the world and it is assumed that he will eventually transfer it to the British government. But, after all, to the average stamp collector offers little enticement.—Chicago Post.

AN INTERNATIONAL JULY FOURTH.

On July 4, the league of postal nations, the Universal Postal Union, embracing the earth, will hold its fiftieth anniversary at Stockholm, Sweden.

"It is significant that the delegates of the nations of the earth gather for this celebration of postal peace on July 4, American Independence Day, because to the United States goes the honor of laying the foundation for the Universal Postal Union," says a bulletin of the National Geographic Society from its headquarters at Washington, D. C.

"This confederation of nations, at fifty years, is the oldest comprehensive organization of world states. It has reduced the world's postage bill by billions, and increased the letters exchanged by millions. It has made neighbors of Kalamazoo and Timbuktu and put sewing machines in Turkish harems.

"The difference between $2.50 and a 2 cent postage stamp represents to the individual the most dramatic feature of the Postal Union's accomplishments. Ten years before the Postal Union was thought of, it cost $2.50 to send an ounce letter to New Zealand; today it costs 2 cents.

"The blow to the high cost of mailing illustrated by the United States-New Zealand instance has been repeated to a lesser degree with all foreign correspondence. Reduction of the cost of an ounce letter to England from 12 cents to 2 cents, to France from 72 cents to 5 cents, and to Brazil from 30 cents to 2 cents, dates back to a conference called with the approval of Abraham Lincoln.

"Agreements of this conference were built into the postal convention signed at Berne, Switzerland, in 1873. Although the actual fifty year anniversary occurred last year, the Universal Postal Union will celebrate it at Stockholm this year, since 1924 is the year of its regular meeting.

"Dispatch of 22,000 sacks of mail from the New York foreign mail post-office is not uncommon today. On one trip recently the Mauretania brought in 14,000 sacks.

"Last year the United States spent $10,000,000 to send 415,000,000 pieces of mail, excluding parcel post abroad and received 362,000,000 pieces.

"It is a far cry from these thousands of sacks of mail to Burns Coffeehouse, post-office for all Manhattan for a century. In this old tavern near the Battery letters were stuck in a rack to be called for by the addressees.

"Even the King of Hedjaz had to give up recently the old custom of dumping mail in a pile where the pilgrims to Mecca, at their leisure, picked out letters sent for them.

"No man who sticks a 5 cent stamp on a letter to a missionary in Thibet can realize the tribulation of his grandfather sending a letter only to Canton. First his grandfather had to choose one of five ways of sending the letter. It might go by German mails through England to Brindisi, Italy, to the Orient, or through Germany to Brindisi. It might pass through Great Britain via Southampton or via Brindisi, or might go by the United States packet. Each way had a different charge, varying from 20 cents to 68 cents. In our grandfathers' time each sender had to pay the cost of transportation over and above postage; now

ENGRAVER GAVE COLUMBUS BEARD.

(Special to "The New York Times".)

CINCINNATI, April 17.—This is not a hair tonic advertisement. Nevertheless Christopher Columbus, fifteen minutes before he made his initial appearance on the shores of America, was clean-shaven. Fifteen minutes later he had a full and flowing beard.

The authority for this statement is E. B. Power of New York, President of the Stanley Gibbons Stamp Company, and one of the best known authorities on philately in the world.

"And I can prove it," Mr. Power asserted in his room at the Hotel Sinton, Wednesday. "In 1893 the Government, desirous of commemorating the discovery of America, issued a series of special stamps. The one-cent denomination showed Columbus sighting land from the deck of his ship. His cheeks were like the cheeks of a new-born babe. The 2-cent denomination was different, however. Columbus had landed; but, oh, what a change!

"There he stood, sword in hand. Did he appear to be the same person as that pictured in the 1-cent stamp? Emphatically he did not. The engraver, generous soul, had adorned him with a beard that would force tears of envy from the drooping lids of Mahomet."

THE STAMP COLLECTION.

(Clipping from H. S. Godshall.)

When you were just a boy,
You made a stamp collection.
You gathered them with joy,
And viewed them with affection.

You really didn't know
The reason why you kept them.
You had ambitions, though,
A dealer might accept them.

And now the years have flown,
And you have learned the reason
You held them for your own,
To sell them had been treason!

Another little lad
Is cherishing them gaily.
To save them makes him glad;
He gazes on them daily!

He plans to sell them, too,
Just as you did before him;
He's really just like you!
That's why you so adore him.

And maybe when he's grown
He'll do just like his daddy.
The treasures that he's known
He'll give another laddie!

British North American Colonies

I have recently bought a very fine collection of these formed during the past 30 years in Toronto, Canada.

I now have about 30 approval books of Canada, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island and British Columbia, and shall be pleased to send approvals of the early issues.

At present prices I consider these stamps the best and soundest stock that any one can invest in and I am willing to purchase for cash several more fine collections of early issues.

The following are the Canada "pence" issues in stock:—

3d Imperf.—70 pairs, over 125 singles
6d wove and laid—6 pairs, 86 singles
7 1-2d green—24 singles, 3 on covers
10d blue—4 pairs, 47 singles and 3 on covers

The collection was remarkably strong in bisections of the "pence" issues, as the owner considered these the best items in North Americans and bought all he could find, in Canada, the United States and England.

The following are all on covers, with interesting dates and cancellations and all well tied on over the bisected portion.

New Brunswick

7 1-2d rate to London. Two 3d and half 3d - - - $120.00
3d rate to New Brunswick. half of 6d yellow - - - 120.00
Other copies, less fine $50 to 100.00
7 1-2d rate to London. 6d yellow and half of 3d - - - 120.00
Others, less fine $75 to 110.00
5 cents, to Nova Scotia. Half of 10c vermilion - - - 25.00

Nova Scotia

7 1-2d rate to London. 2 of 3d and half 3d - - - 115.00
7 1-2d rate to London. 6d yellow green and half 3d - - - 125.00
Others, less fine $75 to 100.00
7 1-2d rate to London. 6d dark green and half 3d - - - 135.00

Newfoundland

4d rate to Baltimore, U. S. A. Half of 8d vermilion - - - 100.00

THE MANAGING EDITOR

NEWS GLEANINGS.

—George W. Ludlow, assistant secretary of the Cosmopolitan Mutual Building and Loan Assn. of Oakland, Cal., engaged in a worthy philatelic public campaign. He offers a packet of stamps free to boys who will send in certain particulars as to age, number of stamps in collection, etc. The response has been very gratifying.

—The North Shore News, Chicago, Ill., runs a weekly feature "28 Years On Our North Shore," a series of prints from its issues at that time. The issue of June 5, 1896, Edward Bangs, its editor, who is a philatelist subscriber to MEKEEL'S, found the ginnings of a regular series of art on stamp talk conducted by an unsigned writer "Philateliu." This first article tells of a local dealer who had a box of ten cent 1870, U. S., on which faintest of grills were discernible three copies, while on the remaining specimens not the slightest indication even a point of a grill is to be found. This block, the writer said, forms an important link in the theory that grills used until they are worn away, were they are discarded. During 1895, column states, nearly two and a half billion stamps were printed and disposed of in the United States.

—Here is a conversation that is reported by one of our readers. First citizeness: "Say, what was that I heard Jim giving you about an album? Is he sticking pictures of movie stars in an album?"

Second citizeness: "No, he keeps a stamp album."

First: "Stamp! Stamp album? you say? What is the big idea? Can he get all he wants at the drug store?"

Second: "That is not the idea. He buys old ones—kinds you can't get at the post-office, maybe a hundred years old or something like that."

First: "Well, I don't see any kids that. He saves coins too, don't he?"

Second: "He has a bunch of coins, but this stamp business is the whole show with him. Now he gets a weekly magazine that tells him where to go and everything."

First: "Well there is some sense in this coin saving—coins are money, stamps! good night! I always did think he was nutty."

If Jim really takes the WEEKLY STAMP NEWS, we may be able to tell him further particulars of his critics.

GOSSIP OF THE MONTH.

By CORNELIUS WRINKLE.

The Eleventh Congress.—It scarcely seems a year since London was invaded by hosts of philatelists and their ladies for the occasion of the Tenth Congress, and here we are about to witness the curtain ring up on the Eleventh Philatelic Congress of Great Britain at Glasgow, June 3rd to 6th. For some it has been a brisk scamper to get back from the International Philatelic Exhibition at Brussels and clear up matters that will accumulate at home on these occasions, and be ready for the road to Scotland—a fine road which the cynics say is better to contemplate from the other end.

The members of the inviting Junior Philatelic Society of Scotland may be counted upon to make all welcome in Glasgow, and have arranged a most attractive programme of entertainments and excursions, and it would not be a Scottish Congress if there is not some sound business accomplished during the sessions.

New Union Stamps.—South Africa is finding that postage stamps are not made satisfactorily on a large scale with quite the same facility that a printer can turn out ordinary printing jobs, and her recent attempts to print locally have been far from successful. It had been hoped to print the forthcoming new series in the prize competition designs in the Union, but the Postmaster-General has now declared that they cannot as yet be produced in South Africa, and so are being ordered from overseas—that is to say, in this case from London.

Among the designs promised in the new series the subjects include the head of a springbok, Van Riebeeck's ship, and the wildebeest of the Natal coat of arms.

Colonial Stamps at the Exhibition.—A correspondent of the "Daily Mail" suggested the other day that the stamps of the British Colonies represented at Wembley should be on sale in their respective pavilions. To this there could be little objection, although it is probably too late now to secure supplies from all the Colonies concerned. But when the same correspondent goes on to suggest that they should be overprinted "British Empire Exhibition," after the horrible example of the "Malaya-Borneo Exhibition," I feel like loading my gun.

Pushing a Stamp Exhibition.—The Brussels International Philatelic Exhibition, which opened on Saturday, May 24th, has been a conspicuous success in every way. Its location in the Palais d'Egmont was attractive, the Palais itself a most beautiful setting in which to show off the beauties of the world's best collections, the arrangement was excellent, and the attendances large. On the opening day the crush at the entrance was great, and there was a queue of several thousands stretching a long distance down the neighbouring Wol Straat, shepherded by police.

A Mob "On the Make."—I am afraid most of the crowd did not come to see the stamp display, but to avail themselves of a chance to turn over an easy profit on a specially-printed stamp of which the Post Office had prepared a limited edition of 50,000 small sheets of four. Everyone who paid for admission to the show obtained a voucher permitting him (or her—for many women joined the scrum) to buy one sheet of four of the special 5 francs stamp. I have often heard and read of the scrambles at Continental post-offices on the occasion of special issues. I saw one for the first time on May 24th, and it is sufficient here to say that it is better to watch from a distance than to take part in.

Old Friends.—One of the pleasantest features of the Exhibition was the bringing together once again of many of our old friends of last year, and many familiar friends of Continental and American philately. I encountered Mr. Alfred Lichtenstein, of the Collectors Club, New York, on the train from Victoria, and Mr. Herman Toaspen was also in Brussels. Among the Continental collectors it was a pleasure to renew old acquaintanceships with Baron de Reuter-skiold, Mr. Manus (of Amsterdam), Mr. Van der Schooren, M. Henri Bauer, M. Coyette, M. Maurice Langlois (the first French philatelist to be accorded the "Roll of Distinguished Philatelists"), M. Emile Fredrich, of Geneva; and, among dealers, M. M. Theodore Champion, Miguel Galvez, Kumin, Bianchi, Luder, Porignon, Waroquiers, Emin, Babaeff,

J. C. Auf der Heide, Thomas, and many more.

British Visitors.—The British contingent was a strong one. Mr. and Mrs. Anthony de Worms, Frank Godden, Mr. and Mrs. Séfi, H. F. Johnson, E. Buhl, Leonard Gill, W. Wilson, F. B. Smith, W. E. Lincoln, R. E. R. Dalwick, and C. H. Greenwood were among those who were early on the scene.

A Shipload of Exhibits.—Mr. Godden had a trunk with him that nearly sunk the good ship "City of A—," and in the absence of taxis nearly terminated the miserable existence of a highly-sung landau and its unfortunate horse. The trunk contained a hundredweight or two of British exhibits which had been entrusted to Mr. Godden to deliver.

Galleries Galore.—"A great show," will be the verdict of the visitors to the Brussels Exhibition, which had still some days to run when these lines were penned. There was a series of halls, connected by corridors, and every available space had been utilised, so that about 1,100 square yards of exhibits were shown under glass. To economise space the stands, instead of being of the sloping pattern, as used in London, were vertical screens, such as one frequently finds in picture galleries.

A Vast Array of Stamps.—If there were not the surfeit of great rarities, there were sufficient. M. Champion showed the two Post Office Mauritius, the 2 cents circular British Guiana in pair on original, the 2 cents Hawaiian and other gems. Mr. Lichtenstein's Swiss, together with his wonderful collection of Capes, Mr. Warren's Dutch Colonies, Mr. Harvey's Victorias, Mr. Caroly's Belgium, are only a few of the great collections shown, the description of which takes 200 pages of the catalogue. The catalogue, by the way, was weighted down with a huge auction catalogue of many pages, doubling the bulk of the book and making it rather tiresome to carry about.

250 Dealers Get Together.—A bourse was held for dealers at the Hotel Scheers, which is evidently quite a philatelic rendezvous, and at the time I visited it there was an extraordinary cosmopolitan crowd of traders in stamps. Over 250 dealers, I was told, visited the bourse. I am not so sure that the activity and excitement was all buying and selling; but there was much talk of wanting to buy, and some plain tokens of eagerness to sell. You could soon tell which of two partners was the seller. If you heard the expression "excessivement rare," you might be sure it was not offered by the prospective buyer.

A Seven a. m. Queue.—The Exhibition had its biggest day on Sunday, May 25th. The entrance fee was only 2 francs on this day (as against 5 francs on the opening day), and including the voucher entitling you to buy one sheet of four of the 5 francs stamp at face. Before seven o'clock in the morning the queue started to form, and there were crowds in the courtyard and half a mile along the street by opening time. But things were better arranged. Extra post-office counters and staff were on duty, barricades had been raised to keep the crowds in orderly array, and within the portals of the Palais the bargain hunters had to file through a Hampton Court maze of barriers to get to the post-office where the special sheets were on sale.

Burgomaster Max.—This effort to control the mob was, I gathered, the result of the vigorous action of the famous Burgomaster Max, who had himself been kept out in the rain in the midst of the surging mob for a long time the previous day when he was trying to get in to assist in the "opening" ceremony.

Homage to the "Unknown Soldier."—A solemn ceremony took place on the Sunday morning, when the visiting philatelists met at the Place de la Liberté and proceeded thence to the tomb of the Unknown Soldier, where wreaths were deposited in the names of the philatelists of Belgium, Great Britain, France and Luxemburg.—Postage Stamp.

HON. ERNEST R. ACKERMAN, PLAINFIELD, N. J.

TRAVELER

PHILATELIST

LEGISLATOR

Mr. Ackerman is known as the most widely travelled Congressman. He has a penchant for visiting out-of-the-way places and Iceland, Siam, Chile, Soudan, Liechtenstein and Java all look alike in philatelic interest.

He is the owner of several fine specialized collections, including U. S. A. He is a frequent exhibitor and has won numerous gold and silver and other medals, both at home and abroad.

Mr. Ackerman is proving a very capable public servant and is especially helpful to philately. In the last election he secured a majority of 11,000 votes over his Democratic opponent. He is serving his 3rd term.

THE COLLECTORS CLUB, NEW YORK, EXHIBIT OF UNITED STATES, 1869 ISSUE.

NOTES BY CHARLES J. PHILLIPS.

The Hon. Ernest R. Ackerman had kindly consented to show his collection of United States 1869 issue, but at the last moment was detained in Washington on official duties and was ably represented by Mr. Elliott Perry who passed round nine large volumes of this one issue. A large gathering of the leading collectors were present and we were glad to welcome Mr. P. M. Wolsieffer and Mr. P. H. Ward from Philadelphia.

Among the more important items in this superb collection the following are noted.

Inverted centres: 15c, 24c and 30c, all fine used.

In unused the following are outstanding items:—

1c, block of 48.
2c, block of 120, Plate No. 3.
3c, pane of 150, Plate No. 26 with the grille split on four stamps.
6c, block of 16.
10c block of 4.
12c, blocks of 4 and 9.
15c, Type II, block of 20 with centre Plate No. 23.
24c, block of 4.

All Prices Cancelled

Pursuant to the terms set forth on the front, inside cover page of my 1924 price-list, all prices quoted in that list are cancelled as of July 1st. The reason for this will be apparent when one considers that I issue my list each fall and that nine months see price changes in any line of business.

However, a large percentage of the prices will continue good until my 1925 list is ready in October.

Just order from the list as formerly, but include a supplemental list of from 50 to 75 percent. of the total amount of your order. That will give me the opportunity of selecting stamps the prices of which have not changed.

30c, block of 4 and 30c no grille block of 4.
90c, block of 6.

A number of unused strips with imprints were shown.

In the Re-issues, the following were in blocks of four unused; 6c, 10c, 12c and 15c, and the 90c in a superb block of 12 with frame plate No. 22.

Two rare items were the 12c and 15c Type II with the word SPECIMEN hand stamped.

The pages of cancelled stamps were simply wonderful beyond words, page after page of black, red, blue, brown, magenta and postmarks. I note a few of the more uncommon varieties:—

Waterbury, Conn., a cover with three 1c with the famous "chicken" cancellation.

Also from Waterbury other stamps were cancelled "Old woman with bonnet," "Shoe," "Melon" and "Mortar and Pestle," "Shoo Fly."

Stamps from other districts were cancelled "Merry Widow hat," "Profile," "The World barred," "Bee," "Wash," "Padlock," etc., etc.

Mr. Ackermann has always had a great penchant for stamps on the original cover and there are several volumes of these in the collections. All the 1869 are shown on covers with the exception of the 90c which is not known in this form. Among the more interesting I noted 15c with 3c of 1870, 15c Types I and II, 2c + 3c + 10c, 3c with 12c of 1867, 10c + 10c 1870 National, 3c + 12c + 15c, 30c with red New York cancellation, 15c Type I + 30c, 10c strip of three, 10c + 10c France 1863-70, 15c + 10c France 1863-70, 24c two or three copies on cover, 30c + 10c.

The 1869 with dated postmarks showing the year date are rare but a number are in this collection with different town names.

A series is shown of Sub-Station postmarks with most of the distinguishing letters from A to T. A 30c was noted with the cancellation of the small anchor surrounded by dots used on a West Indies steamship.

Another interesting steamship cancellation, of which I do not know the meaning, consisted of the letters "M. O. B." in a large circle, on cover.

Interesting combinations on covers were:—1869, 10c + 1867, 12c + Hawaiian 5c 1866 dark blue. 1869 pair 10c + Hawaiian pair 5c 1866, dark blue. 1869, 10c + pair 3d blue British Columbia.

A number of interesting combinations on covers to Foreign Countries were shown:—1869, 12c + 30c National + 2c Continental used in 1875 to Peru. Pair of 10c used from Shanghai (probably from the U. S. Consulate).

A most interesting cover was one franked with U. S. stamps used from one foreign country to another foreign country, this was a pair of 1869 10c used from Japan to England via San Francisco and postmarked "Hiogo 18 Mch. 1871." Another cover had a pair of 30c + 24c used to India, and another one pair of 30c + 6c also used to India.

Used Patriotic Envelopes franked with stamps of 1869 seem very rare, only two such are in the collection.

In a second volume of the Re-issues I noted a few items of interest:

15c Imperf. horizontally. This has large margins top and bottom and other copies are known, but no pair has been seen to prove it beyond doubt.

In the 1880 Re-issue it was noted that there are two distinct issues of the 1c.

The 1c dark brown are all ungummed and were issued thus.

The 1c pale brown were all gummed.

Forged bisections were shown of three 3c and half of a 3c, and of a 3c and half of a 2c on cover.

Mr. Luff proposed a very hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Ackerman for showing his wonderful collection which was carried with acclamation.

VIVE LA ETHIQUE.

Dear Ed:

I see by MEKEEL'S where Vic Rotnem has a code of ethics for the precan fans. That would be fine stuff,—if it would work. Some of these fans need some of those ethics, in fact, I believe some of 'em are teetotally ethickless at present. At least this Harding stamp has been powerfully destructive of any ethics they may have had. Why, I've seen pre-cancelled Hardings from little podunk cross roads P. O.'s. out in the sagebrush 40 miles from a RR that couldn't scare up a hundred patrons if you counted all the jack rabbits. I suppose the P. M. has to use them to save time at Xmas so he won't get a window put thru him by one of the inhabs becau he has to wait for the other inhab to mail all his packages if you get me. And say, Ed, here is the best joke of all. One P. M. went to work and precancelled up a lot of Hardings ahead of time, so they would be handy when the rush came to mail Xmas photos, and when it come, he found he had precanned the imperf. Harding, and he'd have to lose all that time he'd saved, scissoring 'em up. (If you don't believe it, look it up in Rotnem's last list).

Now, I'd like to see this code go thru, only it can't,—not in 20th Cent. U. S. A. Not unless Vic works up some sort of test to tell the genuinely used precan from the one some guy has soaked the gum off of. Oh, yes, that straight-edge, rubbed, corner-gone copy has been used alright, but who wants it? Seems to me the "pre" fans will have to go to collectin' original covers only. Even that would have its drawbacks, for a precan has got nothing to "tie" it to the cover with, except the gum, and then these covers ain't always so neat and tidy and handy as they might be. I see where we'd have to fix up a room for our collection,—or maybe the whole house,—with glass cases and such.

You get me, don't you, Ed. Here in this case we have a thirty by three and a

EARLY LOW VALUES SPECIALIZED.

STITCH WATERMARK.

C. J. Hohenstein, Manitowac, Wis., brings up a question that has been asked several times before, what does the stitch watermark look like?

Well, the stitch watermark is rather difficult to describe. It is easy enough to show it to anyone and once a collector has seen one he has little difficulty in picking 'em out again. To begin with, the stitch watermark was caused by the blanket or belt that the paper pulp is run onto when the paper was being manufactured being stitched together in places to make it a continuous belt over which the fluid pulp could be run in one of the preliminary processes of paper making. This stitching left a watermark on the paper, just as a design imbedded in the wire screen used in making wove paper will leave a watermark, that is, an impression in the finished paper that shows lighter than the rest of the surface when held between the eye and the light. In the case of the watermark in question it consists of a line of narrow stitches, sometimes of the over and under type and again straight across. In the years prior to 1870 this watermark runs horizontally across the stamp and after that vertically, that is from top to bottom. Generally the stitch can easily be seen on the back of the stamp, especially when it is laid against a black or dark background. The thinner the paper, generally speaking, the better the watermark will show up against a dark background and the thicker and softer the paper the better it will show when the stamp is held between the eye and the light.

United States "Gleanings"

While fine United States stamps are practically non-existent in Europe, we have managed to scrape together enough nice items to fill a few approval books. These are principally Bank Note issues, many with interesting cancellations, but there is a fair showing of earlier issues with a few particularly nice shades of the 24c 1861. Conspicuous among these is the rare Gray-Violet or Gray-lilac, an unmistakable August, well-centered for this stamp and a bargain at ½ cat.

As I have said it is very difficult for one to describe the stitch watermark in words. My advice is for the collector who really wants to know it when he sees one to write to one of the larger stamp companies and ask for a selection showing the stitch watermark on certain stamps that he may be interested in. Then, he will be morally obligated to buy one of the company that does him the favor, provided of course that they send him a copy the condition of which is suitable for his collection and that the price is not too high. In my own opinion the stitch watermark is one of the best investments for a collector. It exists on, or should exist on all of the stamps issued in this country before 1890 and on many stamps after that date. I am not sure just how late it may be found. Personally, I believe it is a most legitimate variety for the specialist and it is so pronounced a variety that the time will undoubtedly come when many general collectors of United States stamps will feel that they must duplicate their collection of ordinary copies of each stamp obtainable with copies showing the stitch watermark, even though it is not a watermark that was officially ordered by the government. The point is that it is a distinct variety and more and more are general collectors verging into the realms of specialization by adding here and there some such distinct minor varieties to their collection. Therefore, if this prediction is right, stitch watermarks will jump rapidly in value during the next five or ten years for, if they were at all generally sought after the Scott Specialized Catalogue valuations would be very low indeed. In my experience stitch watermarks are found in unpicked lots in the proportion of one to 1,000 or one to 2,000. Although I have never kept count, I have gone over so many hundreds of thousands of early low values that I have a fair idea of the proportion of stitch watermarks to be found in an unpicked lot.

In my own collection of three cent greens I collect not only the stitch watermark on the 1870-71 grilled, 1870-71 ungrilled, 1873, 1879, 1882 and three cent vermilion, but I also mount under each section the stitch watermark showing on various shades of the stamp, various papers, etc. For example, in 1873, I have the stitch watermark on the usual shade, on yellow green, on olive green (rare as the Hawaiian missionaries), etc., and also variations in the form of the stitch. Without counting, I should say that I probably have fifteen or more stitch examples in my collection of this one stamp. It can therefore be seen that the specialists of the country alone will absorb large quantities of this variety in time.

In the same mail comes a letter from Burton Jerome Barnett, Chicago, Ill., who says he has found a copy of U. S., No. 210, showing a double stitch watermark. So far as I know this variety is not listed in any catalogue. I have had a copy which looks like a double stitch on the three cent green, 1873. The stitch apparently shows on both the right and left edges of the stamp. Yet I have hesitated to announce this discovery fearing that this copy, being 1873, might be a copy on the horizontal ribbed paper which, through some freakish circumstance, looked like a double stitch. However, this freak on No. 210, which is such a soft paper, if clearly shown, ought to prove the existence of the double stitch.

How could such a variety occur? The only way I can account for it is that the belt or blanket on which the pulp was poured in making the paper might have become torn an inch or so away from the line of stitching, which required that the tear be stitched up, and this would result in two lines of stitching showing on the one stamp. Not having seen Mr. Barnett's copy and being still suspicious of my own, I do not yet make the positive statement that this variety exists.

By the way, the stitch watermark rarely shows up in benzine and, in my opinion, it would be a waste of time to use the benzine cup in looking for it, as it can so readily be seen by the eye, something that cannot be said for the later legitimate watermarks on U. S. stamps.

Mr. Hohenstein also sends a three cent green with a very curious "geometric" cancellation. This cancellation shows a solid black square with arrow-shaped points at top and bottom and on both sides. On either side of these arrow-shaped protuberances are black dots. Inside the square of solid black are crossed colorless oblong figures. This cancellation is difficult to describe without a drawing, but it is a very curious one.

One correspondent again mentions the need for a catalogue listing cancellations. No, there is no comprehensive catalogue of U. S. stamps listing cancellations. Some day some publisher will have the bright idea that such a catalogue is needed and whoever does may possibly make some money.

EARLY BRITISH COLONIALS

I am dispersing two large collections, strong in the early types and all stamps in fine condition. Prices average MORE THAN HALF CATALOGUE.

Also in stock a choice lot of EDWARDIAN & GEORGIAN, both MINT and SUPERB USED. These are mostly priced at half catalogue.

F. B. TURPIN, 161a Strand, London, W. C. 2, Eng.

PHILOTELY OR PHILATELY?

In November, 1864, a French paper Le Collectionneur des Timbres Poste (1) published an unsigned article under the title of "Baptême." This article was due to Mons. Herpin one of the most learned amateurs of his epoch who, proposed the term "Philately" for the Science dealing with stamps. This hobby was known up to that time under the names of "Timbrology" or "Timbrophily." Some people, even used to call it "Timbromania" being unable to explain otherwise the real mania with which the rare collectors of that time had for stamp collecting.

The term was constructed, as Mons. Herpin explained further, in about the same manner as the word "Numismatics" i.e., the Science dealing with the collection of coins. There is a difference, however, for, whereas the term "Numismatics" has been created from the Latin word "Numisma" (coin) the term "Philately" was constructed from the two Greek words "Philos" (friend) and "Ateleia" (enfranchisement, payment of postage duty) meaning thus the science dealing with the study of enfranchisement, of what proves the payment of the postage duty and consequently of the stamps.

It is evident from the above that notwithstanding his reputation as being a learned man the contributor was completely strange to the Greek language, since he used for the construction of the term, instead of the word "telos" (tax, duty) the word "ateleia" (exception from postage duty, "franchise postale" as say the French) which he thought meant "affranchisement," viz., enfranchisement, payment of postage duty!

Leaving aside the unhappy inspiration and the wrong etymology of the word, the term "Philately" was liked by most people, perhaps owing to its euphony, and soon became international. The word "Philately" and its derivatives "Philatelist," "Philatelic," etc., became current in all languages.

Nearly all authors who subsequently occupied themselves with the study of the origin of Stamp Collecting, and have touched the etymology of the word "Philately," have repeated without further examining the version exposed by Mons. Herpin, considering the question as settled and needing no further discussion.

(1) This Journal was first issued in 1864 by A. Maury and continues being published, being thus 60 years of age. The firm A. Maury is the publisher of the universally known French Stamp Catalogue. "Maury" which is a popular Stamp Catalogue.

For curiosity's sake only, we mention hereafter another version on the etymology of the word "Philately" which was published anonymously in the year 1908 in the American journal MEKEEL'S WEEKLY in the shape of a letter to the editor. We think it needless to say that we do not share the writer's opinion, which is mentioned in this article only as a curiosity.

The letter in question read as follows:—"In a recent article published in your paper, the author repeats the opinions of all special writers on the origin of the word 'Philately,' viz., that this word is derived from two Greek words, the one meaning 'friend' and the other 'enfranchisement.'"

As for me I have formed a quite different opinion on the origin of the word. Here it is.

In 1773 a society was founded in Paris, the members of which called themselves 'Philalèthes' or 'Seekers of the Truth.' The founder was a certain Savalette de Langres, Royal Treasurer. This society was really a branch of the Masonic Loge 'Les Amis Réunis.' The members of this group were also called 'The Friends of the Truth.'

However, the name of 'Philalèthes' or 'Seekers of the Truth' was applied to the principal members only, and finally became the main name of all members.

Thanks to the quality and good standing of most of the members, this society played an important part in the Parisian Society in the beginning of XIX Century.

It is quite natural to believe that when the hobby of Stamp Collecting began to spread, the necessity of defining the new mania by a special name was presented. The persons charged with this task thought to get inspired from the old famous name of 'Philalèthes' and give their hobby an appropriated and original name.

Indeed a small modification was enough to transform 'Philalèthe' into 'Philatelist.'

The Seekers of the Truth, became thus, thanks to the Greek 'Etymology' the 'Seekers of Tax,' in other words the Postage Stamp Collector. I am convinced that this is the true origin of the word 'Philately.'

We must repeat that we mention the above for curiosity's sake only, for, nobody having the most elementary knowledge of Linguistics can seriously support that the word 'Philalèthe' can ever be changed in 'Philatelist' even in the mouth of a 'non Greek.'

Notwithstanding the wrong basis from the Linguistic point of view (for nobody being really conversant with the

S. M. HENCHER "Ruxley" Francombe, SURREY, ENGLAND

Greek language could ever call a "Stamp Collector," "Lover of the Tax," considering the broad meaning of the word "tax" as well as from grammatical side, as long as the word was constructed from "Philos" and "Ateleia," the word "Philately" as stated above, has got the upper hand to the point of discarding every thought of changing it. If, however, the change is impossible, we think that there is no reason for not correcting the term so that it may express the right grammatical meaning. With this line of thought we addressed the following letter, a year ago, to the French paper L'Echo de la Timbrologie Amiens, proposing to correct the term "Philately" to "Philately" so that it may mean "the lover of the postage duty" and not the "Lover of the.....excepted from the postage duty!"

This letter published in No. 627 of the 15th February, 1922, of the Echo de la Timbrologie (1) reads as follows:—"Dear Editor,

For a long time I have been entertaining doubts regarding the correctness of the origin of the word 'Philately.' When turning over the pages of a set of the French Philatelic journal Le Timbre Poste of late, I read that for constructing the word, the contributor has used the Greek words 'Philos' (friend) and 'Ateleia' (.....enfranchisement, payment of postage duty)!

From the explanation given above, one can easily understand that the contributor did not know Greek. The meaning of the word 'Ateleia' in Greek, is entirely different from enfranchisement and means 'Exception of postage duty'.

The only origin of the word 'Philately' is its derivation from the Greek word

(1) This letter was also published in English in the Indian Philatelist (No. August, 1922) of Madras (India), Editor, Y. Rama Seshayya.

hilos' (friend) and 'Telos' (tax) and therefore, the correct form should be, grammatically, speaking 'Philately' and not 'Philately'.

Are you not of opinion, that our science which ordinarily is so particular for the most trifling matters, should now decide to correct its own error?"

The publication of this letter was accompanied by following comments by the Editor of the journal:

"This letter brings to our memory the time at which the Horokilometrical measures of carriages were introduced, when the word 'taxametre' was invented to denote these apparatus. A Hellenist then marked in the Figaro that the Greek etymology imposed to say 'Taximetre' and not 'taxametre' and this form was adopted. 'Taxamatre' did not last more than one month.

But 'Philately'! This term is now universally adopted. It is introduced in European and Oriental languages! Universal agreement of all the people required for changing the a into o. It is impossible to think of it even!

Notwithstanding the wise letter of Mr. Macrymichalos, it is very probable that we will never become 'Philatelists' and the Echo will never publish 'Philatipigrams' (2).

We must confess that we are not con- ceded by the single argument above cited for maintaining the wrong and meaningless term "Philately." The "uni- sal agreement of all the people" as the Echo in a rather exaggerated way is the 'Philatelists of the world, can- nily be accomplished by a little good- ly, especially from the part of the philatelic Press. It is sufficient that all philatelic papers avoid using the old long term and we are certain that the philatelic world will accept with pleasure the use of the new term which although differing slightly from the old one, is grammatically right, and what is more important, has a correct meaning, whereas the old one is absolutely mean- ingless.

With this persuasion we are appealing to the Philatelic Press of the whole world, asking it to contribute by a quick adoption of the new term to the success of spreading a new term "Philately." They might be assured that they are tendering a service to our hobby which, although no way less important to their sister sciences, we must confess it cannot be considered as a serious one as long as it is defined by a wrong and defective term.

St. J. MACRYMICHALOS.

INTERNATIONAL PHILATELIC EXHIBITION, NEW YORK, 1926.

By PHILIP H. WARD, JR.

A few years back when great plans were announced for an International Sesqui Centennial to be held in the city of Philadelphia, during 1926, in commemoration of the anniversary of the Signing of the Declaration of Independence, Philadelphia collectors felt that the time would be opportune for holding in the same city a great International Philatelic Exhibition. The matter was accordingly taken up by the local society, and its members were almost unanimous in recommending such a proposition. As time passed, however, the bigger idea of an international celebration by the city sagged, and it has practically been decided to make this celebration a much smaller event. Under the circumstances, a special committee of the Philadelphia Stamp Club in considering the proposition in all its details felt that New York would be the logical place for holding a stamp exhibition, and accordingly stepped aside.

A joint meeting of the officers and directors of the Collectors Club and Association for Stamp Exhibitions was held late in May, and the meeting adjourned to Wednesday June 11th, at which time the same officers and boards met and gave the matter further consideration.

At this meeting, it was unanimously decided that an international exhibition would be held on a large scale in New York during October, 1926, under the auspices of the Association for Stamp Exhibitions. At this meeting Mr. J. C. Morgenthau, the President of the Association presided, with John A. Klemann as Secretary. Mr. Morgenthau appointed a committee of five, consisting of Messrs. Charles J. Phillips, Theodore E. Steinway, J. M. Bartels, John A. Klemann and Philip H. Ward, Jr., to consider the exhibition in all its aspects, and to make recommendations as to nominations for officers and committees, as well as report a scheme for the holding of such an exhibition.

There is a united and real enthusiasm behind the whole proposition, and when the general scheme is presented at a later date, it will be realized that this exhibition will be one of the most important that has ever been held. The united support of all collectors, dealers, and philatelic publishers will be asked, and with this support, America will have an exhibit outshining anything of its kind ever held before.

It is expected that more collectors will exhibit than ever before, and the entire world will be asked to participate. It is hoped that the exhibition can be held at such a place as the Grand Central Palace, where unlimited space would be available, and exhibitors will have the opportunity of showing their wonderful holdings in their entirety. We want our readers to give the matter utmost publicity, and as the exhibition is a little over two years off, collectors have an opportunity of getting together properties to be exhibited, which will be worthy of medal awards.

NEWS GLEANINGS.

—From Mr. W. T. Wilson of Birmingham, England, we have received a postal card from the Brussels International Philatelic Exhibition bearing the special exhibition postmark. We understand that the exhibition has been a successful one, and support was generously given it by the European countries in particular.

—The Collectors Club of Southern California, Branch No. 58, Los Angeles, California, has sent out a circular asking that Los Angeles be placed in nomination for the 1925 convention. We quote, "A. P. S. recruits have been coming thick and fast from California. We have been granted our charter, and we are all A. P. S. boosters." W. C. Henry is president of the branch and J. D. Fisher is secretary. The letter says that the last time the convention was held on the Coast was during the Panama-Pacific exhibition of 1915.

—Souren Yohannessiantz, proprietor of the Y. Souren Co., leaves early in July for a trip through Europe. It is his intention to visit all the stamp centers of the continent as well as the British Isles. He will return September 1.

—News has just reached me of the death of Mr. N. M. McGeary of Johnstown, Pa., who passed away at 1 P. M. on Sunday, June 8th, after a three days illness. Mr. McGeary was better known among those who were interested in postal markings. He retired several years ago on account of poor health and his greatest recreation since his retirement has been in building up his collection and in helping others along the same line.—A. H. PIKE.

EDITORIAL.

Collectors in Chicago were pleasantly surprised to find that in one of the windows of Foreman Bros. Trust and Savings Bank the exhibit of the post-office department is displayed with a card to the effect that through the kindness of Postmaster A. C. Lueder the frame is shown. The text of this placard is as follows: "This exhibit loaned us through the courtesy of Postmaster Arthur C. Lueder is the official exhibit of the United States Post Office Department prepared for the international stamp exhibition held in London in May, 1923, which not only received the highest commendations of the members and guests of the Philatelic Society of England, but was awarded the special prize for government exhibits."

It is a gratification to find that almost constantly there is a knot of persons examining the stamps making up the striking exhibit, with eyes that show deep interest. In exhibiting the stamps in various places the government is accommodating and enterprising, as well.
There is reason to suppose that the stamps by their appearance alone are making an impression on the public, and the fact that it is mentioned that the display has received the commendation of philatelists abroad is apt to drive the stamp theme home in the minds of those who see the frame.

This year there will be no considerable diminution of philatelic interest during the summer months, even though there may be some restriction in the actual physical part of stamp-handling by collectors during hot weather. Abroad philatelic activity has been marked. The numerous exhibitions in Europe have taken us well into the summer. The philatelic congress of Great Britain has been most interesting, and now that that is off the books, we are beginning to look forward to the great convention at Detroit in August. There are indications that the A. P. S. convention will mark an important step in the progress of philatelically in this country. While it is planned that we shall advance on broad national lines, yet it is likely that legislation directly affecting the collector will be adopted at Detroit. The enthusiasm that the members of the convention city are bringing to bear on their task of arranging for the comfort of delegates will certainly be rewarded by a large attendance. With a representative gathering, there is no danger that the sessions will be closed without something that will make an impression on our collecting weal being accomplished. The work of our national convention is so well systematized that any member is free to present his ideas or suggestions to the body in the assurance that in committee, at least, they will be given attention. Resolutions that are handed in are first submitted to the Committee on Resolutions who will give them attention; and in case of any doubt as to the advisability of reporting on them one way or the other, they are submitted to the convention for disposal. There is no disposition to adopt any tactics that are arbitrary in handling affairs, and in that way every member may feel that he has a voice in the convention proceedings if he cares to exercise it. A large attendance means that the average of opinion of the members may be arrived at easily, and in this way legislation that is adopted will be regarded as meeting

the wishes of the members generally.
One may well take pride in the growth of our national body which has now attained a position that makes it an important organization measured in any way. With a life membership list numbering into the hundreds and a financial position that is impregnable, the A. P.
S. has become a factor in which every member may take pride. No limit need be set for the growth of the national body, and if testimony were needed to show that stamp collecting is in its heyday, the numerical increase of the A.
P. S. is ample proof of the well-being of our pursuit. Now that it is so large, the A. P. S. has become an influential aggregation that is truly reflective of the status of American philately.

The new issues that are coming so plenteously, month after month, are making it necessary to realign the collecting methods. It has come to the point where no one except the beginner may collect generally. The fact that 10,000 varieties nowadays may be had for less than $200, is proof that a collection to be kept within bounds must be more or less specialistic. The somewhat advanced general collector finds it almost impossible to keep current with all the issues, new and old, of the world. Heretofore, the tendency has been to collect according to some geographical restriction, but latterly we find that as a consequence of recent remarks upon the subject of chronological collecting, there is a wish to make collecting divisions according to years. While in this way the collector of old issues would not have the satisfaction of adding the newer stamps to his album, yet it seems that there is a growing number of collectors who are willing to make the year rather than the country the object of their wishes. It is all right for chronological collecting to give another string to the philatelic bow, and it is a good idea to expand as far as possible collecting combinations because we do not wish the time to come when the stamps of any one country will be ignored, be they new or old issues. As specialism increases, there will be more varieties of collecting;

and all progress of the kind should be encouraged. It has long been the boast of collectors that they might collect anything they cared to without giving account to any other collector; and we should be careful not to become narrow in our outlook upon the activities of others who may branch out in fields that are not as much trod as the recognized ones. So long as the stamps themselves are the objects of pursuit the ultimate gain to philately must be admitted even though the variations in collecting become more numerous than they have been.
It is a fine thing for the "regular" collector to be tolerant of the collector who departs from what is considered conventional collecting because the collector who goes far afield is certainly part of the fabric of philately as much as the one who collects according to what may be considered the best form.

The present is an auspicious time in which to speak of local philatelic organizations. The occasional paragraph in the WEEKLY telling of the organization of a new stamp club in this or that city is always a bit of news that sets well in our columns. Usually, sooner or later, some reference is made to a fledgling organization in our news section, but here and there societies are started without attracting any notice. We are convinced that the more local stamp societies there are, the more assurance is given that philately is on a permanent basis.
No one can cover the home territory so well as the man who lives there; and when a number of collectors decide that the time is ripe to band together, the home-folks have an object lesson of the potency of philately. One of the lessons that reaches us most often is that of the solitary collector who year after year sees no fellow who has a liking for stamps. Now and then he is so fortunate as to make a collector, and in consequence his loneliness is relieved, but throughout this broad land there are many collectors who sit alone and amon-no particularly congenial surrounding.

The local organization is recently falling on happy days. The number attending meetings, we know from personal observation and from reports, is greater than it has ever been before. The average attendance latterly has been double that of previous years, broadly speaking in the case of the old, established organizations; and as for the new societies, it is known that those who attend are sufficient number to ensure variety in the proceedings of the meetings. Where-ever there is a local organization there is some publicity for collecting. The local organization starts interest in stamp among the members whose example is likely to be copied, and then there is possibility of publicity in the local press for the society that should not be overlooked. Sometimes the mere mention of the existence of a society of collectors gives impetus to outsiders to search for stamps in the hope of uncovering special specimens that will have a market value and we have known of "finds" directly attributable to this publicity gained through the home stamp society. I believe that the one who is responsible for the creation of a stamp club is doing a service not alone for himself but for all those who are concerned with stamping. It is sometimes rather hard to get the co-operation that one would think would be forthcoming from neighborhood collectors, but persistence sweeps away a minor obstacles, and if the truth be known, some of these societies that are practically unsung in the smaller places have meetings at which the enthusiasm and earnestness of members run high.
If there could be some concerted movement that would lead collectors in cities where there are at least a few known philatelists to organize stamp clubs, distinct advantage would be gained.
It would not be long before the benefi-results of this association would be noticed, and in asking that those who are in a position to start something of the kind, do so, we are sure that while

We believe that a sort of central committee of philately should be established to undertake advisory and constructive work in the interests of philately. This is a sort of central headquarters for the hobby under the auspices of a powerful body such as the A. P. S. is one that should be acted upon soon. It would be the duty of this central committee to those who have opportunities to work on philately material which would be acceptable to known philatelic hearers. Then other explanations could be made of most points in reference to philately work; and the man who proposes to organize a new society should be met with prompt recognition in that a philatelist telling just how to proceed in the furtherance of his object would be well supplied by this central committee. Such a headquarters would be a boon as well as an advantage in strengthening the hobby in a public sense. Furthermore, it could include among its duties, that of refuting erroneous statements and statements given in the public print. There are other duties of a minor nature perhaps, but in the aggregate of considerable importance that should come under its ken. We cannot but feel that philately is particularly fortunate in being under the dominion of progressive leaders, but nevertheless, we feel that though they may not initiate movements, they should not hesitate to assist those that are being tried out successfully in similar pursuits. Sooner or later the ordinary accessories of philately must be adopted by us, and we do not believe that the task of buckling up to work in this regard will be any easier by reason of any delay.

"Race," Wm. McFee's latest book, published by Page & Company, publishers, we find on page 137, a sophisticated reference to stamp collecting. Francis and Louis were this day beginning a career in an engineering office; Swayne went to luncheon and returning, met Mr. Bustillo.

Meet Mr. Bustillo, you fellows," said Swayne, and he introduced them. "Mr. Bustillo is secretary to the Commissioner of Works for Costaragua, on our second floor."

As far as can be ascertained this was the first time either Francis or Louis had heard of Costaragua save as a country on stamps; highly coloured affairs never seemed to be used on letters were current only in collectors' albums and described as "Costaragua: centavos: unused." Had either of them been confronted with the necessity of expressing his conception of Costaragua in so many words he would have fallen back upon those stamps. A volcanic country where the inhabitants exported postage stamps and, somewhere in South America."

CHAPTER II.

What Constitutes Stamp Collecting?

The earliest stamp collectors committed many crimes. Their knowledge of world geography was vague, and their idea of philately was often confused. And, they spoilt a large percentage of their specimens by pasting the stamps fast onto the pages of some homemade album in a more or less helter-skelter fashion.

But—to know is to forgive. Those philatelic pioneers lacked the aids, facilities and guidance that the present-day tyro enjoys.

The origin of stamp collecting may safely be ascribed to the inborn instinct to acquire and treasure things of beauty, variety and interest. Perhaps the early collectors were mainly young people who took to stamp gathering under the same impulse that led them to gather birds' eggs and bugs, beetles and butterflies, autographs and matchbox labels.

From that unorganized start, the hobby has developed rapidly into a world-wide enterprise, for rich and poor, affording pleasure and profit to thousands of mature grownup philatelists and providing the means of livelihood for hundreds of dealers and publishers, who, in their turn, have furnished employment to numerous assistants and clerks, as well as business for papermakers, printers, binderies, stationers, etc.

How important philately has become may be exemplified by simply pointing out that Washington has been operating a Philatelic Agency purely to serve stamp collectors, and Ottawa (Canada) also maintains a similar bureau. Many smaller countries' postal issues are sources of "clean profit" for the respective governments.

What, then, constitutes this beneficial universal hunt for old and new, used and unused postage stamps?

Through usage the word PHILATELY has come to mean the art of stamp collecting, and PHILATELIST to signify a person engaged in the pursuit of that art. A Philatelist and a mere stamp collector belong, both of them, to the same family, but the former is never in the same class as the latter.

The philatelist collects stamps in a systematic manner, aiming at a definite goal. He is represented everywhere by the maturer (not necessarily older) hobbyist who has advanced from the chrysalis stage of the haphazard undeveloped stamp-gatherer.

A stamp collection is an assemblage of postage stamps issued for postal purposes. Stamp collecting, therefore, is the getting together of genuine specimens of genuine issues. A Philatelist aims to obtain as complete an array as possible. The example of philately, as a science, brought to its highest pitch, is seen in the collection, worth over a million dollars belonging to the late Ferrary. It is said he devoted a whole hotel suite to house his albums.

Again it may be asked: What constitutes stamp collecting? It is methodical aggregating of stamps in prepared albums, for the purpose of displaying as complete and valuable a representation as possible. King George V, of England, has a marvelous collection of the issues of the British Empire. King Albert of Belgium, King Alfonso of Spain, and King Emmanuel of Italy are known to be specializing in the issues of their own countries and colonies. In the footsteps of these royal personages are innumerable philatelists in all walks of life. They are to be found in every county of our forty-eight states, in faraway Australia, tumultuous South America, quaint Japan, torrid Africa, picturesque Switzerland, sunny Portugal, unquiet Mexico, slow-moving China, turbaned India—in fact, every political or geographical unit of our spinning planet.

ROTARY PRESS IMPERF. HORIZONTALLY

A few years back the 1c and 2c of our former design were found in New York imperforated horizontally, and perforated 10 vertically. These stamps were from the coil waste and should have been perforated 11 the other way, giving us our well known rotary compound. These stamps inadvertently reached the New York post office and the variety has always been most desirable. Scott lists the two stamps as Nos. 538a and 539b, and lists them at 75c per stamp, that is, $1.50 a pair, or $3.00 a block. You will no doubt see the advance sheets pricing the variety at $4.00 a block or $8.00 for the two blocks, for the available supply is gradually diminishing, and like all stamps, increase in value as the dealer's stock becomes exhausted.

At the present time, I can offer magnificent mint pairs of the above two varieties at $2.00 or blocks of four of each at $4.00. A variety that will never be purchased cheaper, and one that is so reasonable that it should find a place even in a general collection. I know of no part perforated error of the United States that has ever sold at such a low figure. The issue is obsolete, so no more will occur.

The Bi-Monthly Journal

A house organ with an inimitable style and charm, published every two months. Each issue consists of from 32 to 48 pages, every one containing a formidable array of unusual offerings in medium and scarce sets, packets and special collections, dealers' stocks, single stamps, philatelic supplies, etc., etc.

Albert C. Munson, 412 Broadway, Houston, Texas, writes:
"I enjoy the Bi-Monthly as much as MEKEEL'S; there is no other paper, house organ, journal or circular of any kind wherein one can find such extraordinarily good stock—and at such reasonable prices."

C. A. Ralston, 164 Vaughn St., Waterloo, Iowa, says:
"I am paying subscription charges for two large house organs, but would rather get along without both of them than to lose yours. If necessary, I know that I could pay a substantial subscription to the Bi-Monthly and save all of it on stamps offered in a single issue."

The Bi-Monthly Journal is a distinctive publication and absolutely free to patrons. You can't afford to be without it!

United States.Special Air Mail Cancellation.

In my recent notes mention was made of the Transcontinental Air Mail Service, which will be inaugurated on July 1st, and I am glad to be able to inform our readers at this time that the postmasters at the several offices receiving and sending letters by the air route will use a special cancellation.

Mr. J. W. Sutherin, Acting General Superintendent of the Division of Air Mail Service, writes me under date of June 16th, that in addition to the special cancelling stamp to be used on the various fields, the postmasters on the Air Mail Route will have a rubber stamp stating that the letter was carried by the Air Mail on the first trip of the transcontinental through service.

2c Harding, Imperforated Vertically.

In MEKEEL'S for June 9th there was reproduced a clipping from a Newark paper, which was copied quite extensively by the press relative to the finding of the block of forty of this stamp imperforated vertically and perforated horizontally. The general story was in accordance with facts, but the figures were possibly guessed at by some one, who was not posted as to his statements.

It is odd that after the finding of this variety, one of our eastern dealers evidently desired to discredit the variety, for he came out in a circular bulletin, quoting the clipping from the Newark Evening News in full, and then ended up by offering a block "imperforate vertically"—"same thing sold recently for $3,000" at 15c for a block of four. Naturally quite a few wrote for the block and found that it was not only imperforated vertically, but was also imperforated horizontally. In addition, he had applied private perforations to the outer right and left edges. Only the one block of forty is known to date, and why a dealer would take such steps to either increase his sales or else discredit something that he was unable to buy, I cannot say.

The Federal Tax Law of 1924.

The recent tax law enacted by Congress and signed by the President called for changes in the Stamp Taxes, that will necessitate at least one new Revenue stamp, and possibly more, in addition to a change in the quantities used of the current series. The tax on playing cards has been advanced from 8c to 10c, and a plate is in course of preparation at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing for a new 10c stamp, which will be of the same size as the current variety, but of a different design, and will be printed in blue.

Tax on drafts has been cancelled, as well as on notes, so that the Documentary stamps will not be used as frequently as heretofore. Future delivery rates have been somewhat changed so that the tax begins at 1c, which will possibly result in a 1c variety appearing. It is expected that sufficient stamps to take care of the new requirements will be ready when the act goes into effect early in July.

Universal Postal Union.

In a bulletin sent out by the Information Service of the Post Office Department under date of June 12th, much information of interest regarding the Universal Postal Union is given, and the facts will come as news to many. It seems that the United States Government in 1863 took the initiative, which finally resulted in the creation of this postal understanding between practically all civilized nations of the world, and it is especially fitting that the Union should celebrate its fiftieth anniversary on July 4th. The meeting will be held at Stockholm, Sweden, and the United States will be represented by Joseph Stewart, Chairman of the Delegation, and Executive Assistant to the Postmaster-General, E. R. White, Special Assistant to the Second Assistant Postmaster-General, and Edwin Sands, Superintendent of Foreign Mail. The delegation sailed on the Leviathan on June 14th.

On August 4, 1862, Montgomery Blair, Postmaster-General, under President Lincoln, addressed a letter to the Secretary of State requesting him to invite a conference of the postal authorities of Europe and America to meet and recommend to their respective governments the adoption in international relations of a uniform standard weight, uniformity of rates and conditions, a uniform basis for sea and land transit charges, and, if practical, uniform registration and money order system.

The invitation was accepted by governments addressed and resulted a conference, which met in Paris on May 11, 1863, and was in session until July 9th of the same year. It was attended by the leading postal officials of not only this country but Austria, Belgium, Colombia, Denmark, Spain, France, Germany, Britain, Italy, the Netherlands, Portugal, Prussia, the Sandwich Islands, Switzerland and the Hanseatic Cities.

While this conference did not result in the establishment of a Universal Postal Union, the various nations participating adopted the suggestions made and were ready to ratify them at a later date. Owing to delays in negotiations it was not until September 15, 1874, that the first Postal Congress was opened in the Hall of the National Senate in Switzerland, attended by representatives of twenty-two countries and colonies. Joseph H. Blackfan, then Superintendent of Foreign Mails, who represented the United States, was welcomed by its president with the statement that it was the United States, which took the initiative in the postal reforms, pointed out by conference at Paris, and which Congress had at Berne was about to tempt to put into practical operation means of a general treaty binding upon all participating nations.

This Congress was in session until October 9th, when the first treaty concerning the creation of this union was signed by representatives of twenty nations. Two other nations signed a short time later. Its terms were put into operation on July 1, 1875, over territory having a population of 375,000,000 people. Today practically the entire world is covered by the Universal Postal Union. The exceptions are Afghanistan, Arabia, Baluchistan, Johore and Trengganu, the Malay States, Maldives Islands, Northern and Southern Nigeria, Nyland, Northern Rhodesia, Santa Cruz Islands, Pitcairn Islands, Russia, and Tonga Islands.

AUSTRALIAN COMMONWEALTH.—Mr. Roberts advises of the following colors with the King George type: green, 1½d red, 2d russet, 3d blue and 4d bistre. All are single "A" and crown watermark and the 3d in the King head design for the first time.

GERMANY.—We have received from Mr. R. Roberts the 10pf vermilion type of Renten Mark currency watermark chicken wire as before.

GILBERT & ELICE ISLANDS.—From R. Roberts comes the 1½d red sea watermark. Mr. Roberts adds that they are printed from plate 11 in sheets of 120.

Also the 10sh emerald all through script watermarked paper.

HOLLAND.—The 7½c stamp has up quite recently been obtainable in book form, but as the sale of these books has been discontinued, the remaining stock of these stamps printed in sheets specially for this purpose have been sent out to some of the Post Offices for sale. These sheets contain 180 stamps, which there are 20 vertical tête-bêche pairs. There was only a limited supply of the remaining stock of these sheets which were very quickly sold. There are two varieties of these sheets.

stamps, one showing the tête of the stamp se tenant with the other, and the other shows the divisional blank between the two stamps.—Whitfield King & Co.'s Bulletin.

MALTA.—A new issue of stamps is under consideration and the Treasurer of Malta has transmitted to the Crown Agents for the Colonies a list of values and the designs suggested for same, which are as follows:—

The eight low values from ¼d to 1d, each with the King's head at the top right hand corner and the Malta coat of arms at the bottom left hand corner. The 1sh stamp, view of entrance to Grand Harbour. For the 2sh stamp, view of Notabile. For the 2s6d stamp, view of a boat. For the 5sh stamp, a view of the Megalithic remains of Hagar Qema. For the 10sh stamp, a picture of the Great Temple.

There is no truth in the statement published in some journals that there is to be a new printing of the provisionally issued ¼d and 2d stamps.—Whitfield King & Co.'s Bulletin.

THE WEST PACIFIC ISLANDS.—Mr. Herbert sends for chronicle the 1d purple and 6d dull greyish blue of the 1923 setting in small sheets of 30.

POLAND.—Owing to the introduction of the gold standard, all Polish stamps of values in marks have been withdrawn from sale and are no longer available for postage. The stamps in the new currency have been issued and are of the following denominations:—1, 2, 3, 5, 10, 20, 30 and 50 groszy. The groszy is the hundredth part of a zloty which is the standard of the new currency, the value being approximately equal to a penny, at which rate we are distributing the new stamps to our new subscribers.—Whitfield King & Co.'s Bulletin.

IRELAND.—Owing to the 2d stamps being exhausted, some of the higher values have been surcharged "TWO PENCE" in small quantities:—480 sheets of 1d, 132 sheets of 7½d, 103 sheets of 1sh, 200 sheets of 2sh, 300 sheets of 2s6d and 300 sheets of 5sh; the sheet consists of 60 stamps.—Whitfield King & Co.'s Bulletin.

THE UNION OF SOUTH AFRICA.—Some considerable time has elapsed since we fore-mentioned new pictorial series for the African Union. The Daily Mail has published the following message from its own correspondent on Friday of last week:—

Postmaster-General states that he has now the Government approved designs of a pictorial description of the main denominations of Union postage stamps, and that these stamps, which cannot as yet be produced in South Africa, are now under order from overseas. It is understood that among the designs that have found favour are the springbok head, Van Riebeck's ship, and the wildbeest of the Natal coat-of-arms.—Stamp Collecting.

NEWS GLEANINGS.

Under this heading we desire to publish all the news from the various philatelic centers. Correspondents' names will be given unless prohibited, as we desire to give full credit for services rendered.

—A notice has been received that the advance sheets of the 1925 edition of Scott's Standard Postage Stamp Catalogue will be issued starting about July 21. It is mentioned that "many price changes will be in effect in the 1925 catalogue. Those subscribing for the advance proof sheets will receive them as issued from the printer."

—The New England Philatelic Association and the American Envelopes Society (Consolidated) held its annual meeting according to its program on June 14, 1924. According to the plans, dinner was served at the New Adams House, Boston, and a trolley ride from Lynn to Marblehead was a feature of the day. A. P. Brown is president and G. Carlton Russell is secretary of the combination.

—William Lycett, secretary of the Society of Philatelic Americans, has sent out the call for the convention of the Society at New York, Continental Hotel, on August 4-5 inclusive, convening at ten A. M., on August 4th. The official ballot discloses that there is no competition for office, the administration of V. W. Rotnem having been a singularly successful one. It is evident that the S. P. A. is overcoming many of the obstacles that have beset its path for some years past.

—We have received a communication from Mr. Edward S. Knapp of New York City who says that up to September 15, 1924, his address will be: % The Equitable Trust Co., 10 Moorgate St., London E. C., England. We hope that Mr. Knapp will have an enjoyable sojourn, and he carries with him the best wishes of our readers who will remember Mr. Knapp by reason of his contributions on Confederates in our columns. Upon his return we are promised further articles from his pen.

—The following notice has been sent us by a correspondent who asks that it be printed in order that the proper idea of postal rates from this country to Newfoundland be understood. Evidently it is a copy of a departmental order of the post-office.

"Owing to the general misunderstanding, mail for Newfoundland, which is a separate British colony, is frequently treated as if the mail were intended for Canada."

While the letter postage rate to Newfoundland is 2 cents an ounce or fraction of an ounce, the postage rates, conditions, and classifications applicable to other articles of mail are the same as for Postal Union countries. However, parcel post packages are acceptable at the postage rate of 12 cents a pound or fraction of a pound and must be accompanied by a customs declaration (Form 2966), to be secured at any United States post-office at the time of mailing."

ART'S STATUS IN PHILATELY.

The appearance of late years of so many inartistic productions in stamp issues makes one ask whether the accepted tenet, "Art is the materialized expression of a person's delight in beauty," can be said to hold good to any large extent in philately. If we go through the latest Gibbons' catalogues, the best illustrated and most informative of all published, the answer must be that, with some exceptions, artistic productions of stamps are in a decadent state; whether temporary or permanent we will not be able to say until the world re-assumes pre-war conditions.

However, in justice to present day's conditions, we should review the philatelic art since the first issue of adhesive stamps in 1840, and will no doubt meet the contentions of many on the existence of inartistic productions in early issues.

Philatelic art may be divided into (1) design, (2) engraving and (3) printing. The first is, of course, the leading factor in it; the second of little less importance, as it means bringing out the details of the designer to the best advantage possible, and the third is of great importance also, as, however fine the work of the engraver, if the paper and ink used is of inferior quality and the printing carelessly done, the design and engraving are shorn of more than half their value.

Designing can also be divided into expressive and decorative classes. By the former we mean the main features of the design (centre of stamp), and by the latter the frame to it. As we know, one can spoil the other, and we have several examples of this. It is like putting a good painting or etching into a tawdry frame, or a poor painting into a handsome frame. Neither appeals to the artistic sense.

Looking back into past history we find the work of some good designers; in portraiture, the head of Queen Victoria on Nova Scotia 1860-3, Queensland 1860, Van Dieman's Land, 1855, New South Wales 5d. of 1855, and one or two others in the British Empire. In foreign countries we can mention Bosnia and Herzegovina issue of 1906-7, Persia, 10c. of 1881 and 50k. of 1909; Austria-Hungary 10 and 20k. used during the war by the Field Army; first issue of Belgium, Chili issue of 1911, Hawaii, $1 of 1882-5, and several others. In all those mentioned we find (in our opinion), a harmony between the design and the setting, and the artistic in these stamps is brought out by the excellence of the engraving, and good printing.

We did not make a special, but only a haphazard selection from the catalogue illustrations, and some of our readers may point to the 1840 Great Britain as a fine example, but here again we may advance an opinion, and it is that the central design overshadows the frame.

In pictorial designs (including allegorical) we do not find many artistic productions in the first half of our philatelic history (prior to 1882), certainly not many in the British Empire. The best are the 5sh St. Vincent, 1880, Virgin Islands 4d and 1sh of 1886, Barbados, 1852 issue, Newfoundland 2d, 1857, Nevis 1861 issue, and the Tasmanian Postal Fiscals of 1863 (used postally). In foreign countries the palm would have been given to the two values of the Pacific Steam Navigation Co. (Peru) of 1857, but the lettering in the central design spoils the latter. A better production is the first issue of Costa Rica. But beyond these two we cannot find any others that appeal to the artistic eye.

There are quite a number of handsome designs, well carried out, even to the printing, in the second period, but they are, nearly all of them, the work of designers of either Great Britain or the United States. And this brings us to the engravers, either on steel, copper, or stone. Here again we find the best work done by men in the two countries mentioned, especially on steel. In fact, these men were responsible for the finest stamps produced in the world.

There are, certainly, not many countries, if any, that have excelled the printing work of such firms as Perkins, Bacon & Co., De la Rue and Co., and Waterlow and Sons in England, and the American Bank Note Co., National Bank Note Co., and Continental Bank Note Co., of New York.

The above, summed up, means that while the second period has produced stamps as excellently produced—in design, engraving and printing—as in the first period, such production has been largely overshadowed by the great quantity of inartistic stamps that have come to the front since the war, and this must be the plea for our contention that philatelic art is on the decline.—Scott's Monthly Journal.

Try Me With A Hard Want List Once

in U. S. or British North America Postage stamps or U. S. revenues.

Just because I only use small space is no reason I have a small stock. I carry a very elegant stock in my line, the line that don't get out of style, good old U. S. and other N. A. stamps, as staple as sugar, and a safe and sound investment. If I am any judge, and I ought to know stamps, having started in the game in 1881, I have 14 shilling values of N. B., N. S. and N. F. and if someone really wants a 12d Canada, I have one tucked away, which came out of the Far-rari collection. I like to hear from life buyers, and glad to send approval lots against want list. Always state how particular you are regarding the condition of stamps wanted, big difference in price between superb and ordinary condition.

THE PRECANCEL REVIEW.

Edited by FRED'K W. ALLEN,
312 Walnut St., Minneapolis, Minn.

New Issue Notes—Cincinnati is awarded first place for precancelling the 30 cent (Great American Bison). The cancellation is the current U-3 type and reads down.

It is reported that Glens Falls, N. Y., has precancelled the 50 cent (Arlington Memorial), in the handstamped type similar to U-3, but I have not seen a copy.

The 12 cents, 2 and 5 dollars are yet to appear precancelled. All remaining denominations have been seen.

Errors—When overprints and surcharges are applied on postage stamps, errors in spelling and type setting frequently occur. Usually these are highly sought after and fetch good prices. In precancels we find the same situation as in regular postage, which enhances the interest quite materially.

For several years the Sears-Roebuck people in Chicago employed a rubber handstamp which had the "CA" transposed on some of the subjects. It was my fortune recently to view a fine block of six of the 2 cent 1914 issue that had three "CHICAGO" errors on the left and three of the correct settings on the right.

Fergus Falls, Minn., has a handstamp (similar to U-3) which reads "FERFUS FALLS" and another Minnesota town, Cloquet, has an error occurring four times to a sheet (25 at a time handstamp) which is "Cloquet" for Cloquet.

"CASTON" for "GASTON", Ind., occurs with the same frequency, and also "BACONNE" for "BAYONNE," New Jersey.

Two errors quite similar are Flint, "Wich" and "ELWIRA," New York. Both are handstamped types of the same general appearance.

Michigan City, Ind., has just begun to use the handstamped type known as U-6. There is an error on it to wit: the second "n" is inverted and raised so that it resembles a "u."

Sherrill, N. Y. (Type II) has a mistake in spelling. "Sherril" is of course incorrect. It is quite hard to find as one to twenty-five is the ratio of the error to the normal variety.

A case where one gets an error every time is with Tucson, Ariz., precancels. They are all spelled "Tuscon." Some one at Washington who made the handstamp for this office "pulled a flivver." The U. S. Official Postal Guide gives the correct spelling as "Tucson." However, as most of these precancels are illegible it makes little difference how they are spelled.

Hayti:

These issues are very popular and will undoubtedly prove a good investment.

Analogous to the "Chicaco" error is the "BALTIMOER." The due stamps are precancelled at Baltimore by a special plate which has very wide spacing between the words so that the central figures may stand out clearly. The reason for this is apparent to anyone who has handled quantities of these confusing dues. The error "BALTIMOER" is just one to ninety-nine of the others.

Huron, S. Dak., received a double dose of "d's" on one subject of her handstamp. If only, the error "D. DAK" was seen one might be puzzled as to in which of the Dakotas, Huron was located.

Federalburg, Md., in medium sized capitals (type set) may be picked up with the errors "FFEDERALSBURG" and "FEDERALSBUBG," but not easily.

An odd sort of a precancel is a Kansas City, Mo., multigraph production. In tall thin capitals K C MO appears in a single line. I am indebted to Mr. W. C. Black for the inspection of a pair of the 10 cent, 1923, series with this type upon it. The right stamp reads "K C MON" which is apparently a slip up.

Whether purposely created or not, I cannot say, is the well known "h" error on Northampton, Mass., precancelled stamps. They are fairly plentiful, although no longer current "Northampton" is quite different from "Northampton" and side by side in pairs with the regular variety presents a strange contrast. The vestigial "h" was dropped about a year ago so "Northampton" is the way they read at present.

A set of the figure "1" errors for the "I" of "OHIO" in the Akron, Ohio, electrotype precancels is not a very difficult one to procure on account of the large quantities used. The left vertical of ten subjects on this plate show the variety, so look for straight edges or sheet margins on the left when hunting for them.

The classical errors however, are the early 1898 and 1902 series—"S. Weymotuh" for "South Weymouth (Mass.); "Lockprot" and "Lockport" (N. Y.); "Becorah" (Iowa); "MEW YORK" (Binghamton) are most famous. Precancel collectors high prices for such of these items come on the market.

Mr. William Field, who now possesses the collection of U. S. precancelled stamps has written an article on "oddities in Precancels." This has been converted into pamphlet form together with a list of thirteen cent precancels compiled by Dr. G. Ward Disbrow. I gladly send this upon request, when turn postage is included.

Universal Types—These form basis for description in Bushnell's Standard Precancel Catalog and are known in precancel parlance, as "u" types short. They represent various styles of lettering and design.

Catalogues—At present the precancel catalogue is published in sectional form. Perforations are used as the dividing lines. The current sections and prices are as follows: Perf. 12 section (all precancels up to 1914), $1.00; 10 section (1914-1917), $1.00; Perf. section (1917-1922), 60c; New Section (1923), 35c; Aeroplane, Victor Pilgrim Precancel Catalogue, 40c.

Any or all of the books may be secured through this department. So many have requested information of this sort that I have deemed it worth inclusion this week.

Albums—The mounting of a precancel collection is quite a problem. The usual method is the loose leaf system, a good blank album is the first consideration. Then with a little thought planning a start in the right direction can be made. I shall be glad to further with information and recommendations upon request.

B. K. MILLER OF THE MIDDLE WEST.

By PHILIP H. WARD, JR.

When we talk of wonderful collections or accumulations of United States stamps, we naturally think of the east, but we find that Mr. B. K. Miller of Milwaukee has brought together one of the world's finest collections of our issues. Insofar as the covering of the whole field is concerned, I know of no collection so comprehensive, for Mr. Miller, a real student of our stamps, not only collects the adhesive postage varieties, but collects the Departments, the Newspapers, Re-issues, Special Printings and all other oddities interesting to the advanced specialist. He desires unused specimens, blocks, covers and cancellations, and in the latter case he wants those varieties which prove the use of the postage stamp in certain peculiar ways, for instance, the cancellation may indicate that the stamp has been used on Registered Mail, on Supplementary Mail, on Parcel Post, or some other special class.

In this very unusual collection is to be found practically everything in the way of general issues, from 1847 to date. This includes a partially reconstructed sheet of the 10c 1847, numerous blocks and fine pieces of the 1851, including reconstructed sheets of most of the 3c plates. In the 1861 series, Mr. Miller possesses the August issue complete, all of the September varieties, and practically all of the rare grills, including the 30c grilled all over. In the way of re-issues and special prints, his is one of the few collections that is complete in this line, as he has them all, including the rare soft papers of 1880, in addition to the 2c vermilion and 5c blue Taylor on both hard and soft papers.

Insofar as Department stamps are concerned, he counts among his treasures entire sheets of the $10 and $20 States.

In the way of Newspapers his collection is complete, it containing the rare Bureau and Special Prints—the scarce "Specimen" varieties and the imperforated emissions, of which but few were issued. Mr. Miller has also recently added to his collection the very fine lot of Franklin and Eagle carriers gotten together by Dr. Chase.

It has taken upward of ten years to accumulate this wonderful assortment, which will be left where it will be exhibited as a reference collection for students of our issues.

Mr. Miller, being of legal mind, has not only made a collection of stamps, but has untiringly acquired detailed and extensive facts and data regarding our issues, which he hopes to put in book form, so that it may be available to the many philatelists interested.

STAMP COLLECTING; A HOBBY OR AN INVESTMENT?

CLARENCE J. WEST, Washington, D. C.

The current philatelic press contains many articles on why one should collect stamps, each from its own point of view, each more or less convincing. Primarily I believe the true collector should and does view his collection from the standpoint of a hobby, a source of pleasure to himself and those of his friends whom he converts to the pleasure of the hobby by talking shop and exhibiting his treasures. He spends all he can afford (and how often it is more) in building up his collection, rejoices when an extra dollar comes his way, and thinks not of whether his collection earns him six or sixty percent per year on the amount invested. That is the way I view my collection, which thus far includes only unused blocks of four of twentieth century United States and colonies.

There is, however, a second class of collectors who believe that, while stamps are a pleasure, they also are a real investment; in this class we find various groups each believing that certain stamps, issues or countries offer the greatest investment values. Each year about this time we are reminded of this feature of stamp collecting, for dealers urge active buying, saying that a new catalog is soon due and prices will probably advance. Sometimes they do, sometimes they remain stationary, and then again they go the other way.

My brief study of the number and value of United States stamps finally led me to this question: Suppose that, in 1900, a collector had bought, at the regular catalogue prices, one copy each of all of the major varieties of the United States stamps, both used and unused, had held them until 1924, and then had disposed of them at the catalogue prices of that date, what would have been his net gain and his percentage gain? In answering this, we of course must forget any thought of the pleasure and recreation which such a collection would have brought, and consider purely the financial side.

The following table shows the catalogue values of a selected list of the stamps priced in the 1900, 1912 and 1924 catalogues, for the period 1847-1900. Many stamps are not included because they are not priced in one of these three catalogues. In general only major varieties are included.

Years Covered	Unused 1900	Used 1900	Unused 1912	Used 1912	Unused 1924	Used 1924
1847-1861	$572.10	$129.71	$807.12	$142.41	$1,510.24	$794.20
1861-1867	528.40	88.00	619.25	88.51	938.75	204.36
1869	98.00	28.54	103.35	32.20	178.00	63.21
1870-1880	306.65	59.02	320.35	60.01	495.15	101.47
1880-1893	33.35	19.90	43.41	26.62	72.05	47.29
1893-1900	31.28	16.42	56.72	24.54	104.19	61.15
	$1,569.78	$341.59	$1,950.20	$379.29	$3,298.39	$1,271.68

A casual examination of this table reveals two rather interesting facts. One is the remarkable increase in value during the years 1912-1924, as compared with that during the period 1900-1912. The second, the greater total increase of the used as compared with the unused stamps. It is probable that a number of reasons might be suggested for both of these facts. For the first we will only suggest two: the increasing scarcity of stamps with the lapse of years and the decreased value of the dollar. For the second we will only suggest that the collectors of used stamps are more numerous than those of mint stamps and, therefore, the greater demands influence the price.

Now as to the investment feature. One dollar invested in 1900 in mint stamps became $1.24 in 1912 and 2.11 in 1924. In the case of the used stamps one dollar invested in 1900 amounted to $1.11 in 1912 and $3.72 in 1924. One dollar at straight six percent interest for 12 years would amount to $1.72, for 24 years to $2.44. At compound interest the corresponding figures are $2.01 and $4.04. We therefore see that neither the mint nor the used stamps have increased in catalogue value during the past 24 years to represent an investment paying six percent compound interest. Taken together, the increase in value represents a little less than a straight six percent on the original value (calculated value in 1924 at 6% interest, $46,663.78; actual catalogue value, $4,570.07). Even the notable increase in the value of the used stamps does not represent a return of six percent compound interest (calculated value, $1,380.02; actual value, $1,271.68.)

It must be emphasized that the above figures consider all the stamps included in the summary. If we consider individual stamps, we find some that represent a much better investment than others. Thus No. 42 (1c type III, 1857-60), used, increased from .12 to .20 in 1912 and to $45 in 1924; No. 48 (5c type II, 1857-60) increased in value from $3 in 1900 to $35 in 1924; No. 32 (1c type III, 1851-6) increased from $10 to $200; No. 30 (1c type I, 1851-6) from $25 to $225. Many others increased in value five times or even more. On the other hand, No. 43 (3c rose type I, 1857-60) decreased from $12.50 in 1900 to $12 in 1924; and No. 147 (3c green, 1870-1) from $2.50 to $2.00. Many of the cheaper and very common stamps have remained stationary for the 24 years, and really play no real part in this study.

As far as United States stamps are concerned, we must conclude that mint stamps are not a real investment; that a general collection cannot be considered a profitable investment; that used stamps are more profitable than mint stamps; and finally that the real excuse for a stamp collection of any kind is the joy it brings its possessor.

NOTE.—After writing the above, I happened across an article by A. Crippa, entitled "Philately and Finance" reproduced from Stamp Collecting in the Weekly Philatelic Gossip for April 26, 1924. It is rather interesting to note the following paragraphs:

"Is anyone here optimistic enough to predict that stamps on the whole will rise in the ratio of from £10 to £22 10s in the next ten years? I say emphatically, no! bearing in mind that as time goes on any tendency to rise on account of diminishing supply will be counteracted by the rise in the value of the £1."

"* * * To sum up, 'stamps as an investment' is a myth and propaganda on these lines almost amounts to false pretenses. However, long live stamp collecting as a hobby."

always a popular country, has now, by request, been made available under our system of Intensive Approval Service. This system is very simple: From a great many sources we assemble as many varieties of particular country as we possibly can, put them up in envelopes marked 1c, 2c, etc., and thus send them to those who apply for them. No hinges, no neat approvals or books and, therefore, no extra charge added to price of stamps for mounting. The list of countries, which is continuously growing, now includes, besides Bosnia (mint and used):

Danzig (mint and used)
Jugo-Slavia (mostly mint)
Poland (mint and used)
Germany (mint and used) Mennel (only mint)
Russia (mint and used) Sweden (only used)

papers in which the facts have been more or less misquoted and the deductions mostly personal suppositions, I will try in the following article to tell what I actually found out to be the true state of affairs.

It has always been the general opinion that the Philatelic Department of the Soviet Government was organized for the purpose of putting out unnecessary issues, and reprinting obsolete issues of Russian stamps to supply the stamp world. The fact that the control of the sale of all stamps from this Department was given to a single individual made this impression.

Making a specialty of all new issues,
I was particularly interested and ventured the trip to Russia where I had every opportunity to investigate true conditions. First of all, all mail matter is censored to prevent stamps, currency or any articles of value from leaving the country. It is not generally known, but it is with the greatest difficulty only that an individual can obtain a visa to leave Russia, and in some cases it takes a number of years to get one. And even then, such an individual is compelled to leave everything of value behind him, no matter how large a fortune he has accumulated, with the exception of $100.00.
This is the limit. That this rule is strictly observed was proved by my witnessing some sad incidents while crossing the Russian Frontier.

In order to circulate and distribute the new issues of Russia, this Philatelic Agency was established with representatives in the various countries, of course including one in the United States.
Otherwise it would be almost impossible to obtain any of the issues.

As stated above, private individuals are not permitted to send any stamps out of the country except through this Department, and then only for exchange purposes with collectors in other countries.

I made special effort to look into the actual supplies on hand of the recent Soviet issues and found it possible to procure but very few of those which have always been scarce; and in many cases the supply consisted of only a few sets, contrary to the rumors that had gone about of finding unlimited quantities of obsolete issues.

It is interesting to know that the Philatelic Department has issued a catalogue and price-list of all legitimate issues including those of their former territories of Far East, South Russia, Ukraine, Siberia, etc., from which has been eliminated all that were speculative or privately issued. It is surprising to see how many of these eliminations are now listed in Scott's catalogue. A list has been prepared of all unnecessary and speculative issues which will be published shortly.

When this department was organized,
all post-offices throughout Soviet Russia were ordered to discontinue the sale of provisional issues and a permanent one took their place. All obsolete stamps were turned over to the department, and through careful investigations the unauthorized issues were detected and destroyed.

The above has given a fairly accurate idea of the conditions pertaining to the recent issues, and as far as collections and accumulations of old stamps are concerned, I found to my great disappointment, that extremely little of this material was to be obtained.

It has been understood that before the Revolution, there were a great many valuable collections somewhere in Russia, and it appears that before this department came into being, almost all these collections were somehow or other transferred or disposed of to Neutral countries, or possibly lost or destroyed. But the entire supply of old issues now in their possession is of very little consequence. I went there supplied with extensive funds to purchase these supposedly well-known large collections, but they were nowhere to be seen.

The stamps on sale at the Russian Philatelic Bureau are by no means stolen property. The actual origin of all the stamps I am unable to state, but this I know: If a Russian has a stamp collection for sale he can either sell it to or leave it with the Bureau which charges a commission when sold. Several such collections I saw while there and purchased some of them.

One particular event that should be recorded occurred while I was in Moscow. Four men were to be tried for counterfeiting surcharges on Batum, Far East, South Russia, and Siberia stamps. I was invited to attend this trial which was admirably conducted.
Verdict and sentence were rendered and imposed by three working men, who sat on the bench and acted as both judge and jury, quite different from the U. S. custom. All four of the defendants were found guilty and sentenced to periods of from two and a half years to five years each at hard labor. This is certainly most satisfactory evidence of the fact that the Russian Philatelic Bureau will absolutely not countenance the counterfeiting of any Russian or affiliated stamps.

After considerable deliberation I decided to take this Russian trip and find out the real conditions. (I am the first American Stamp Dealer to cover this territory.) I was accompanied by Mr.
Maurice Sherman, the American Representative of the Russian Philatelic Department. It would have been impossible for me to even get into Russia without such a representative, and although the venture was not very profitable from a business standpoint, it proved extremely interesting and instructive.

Space does not permit a detailed account of the numerous experiences and difficulties I encountered in travel, but the trip necessitated crossing about twenty frontiers both ways.

A TRIBUTE TO WARNER BATES.

By "M. T." DOME.

We shall miss you as our leader,
Warner Bates.
Ne'er forget you,—ne'er forgive our Unkind fates.
"Early Lows" you specialized,
That so many oft despised,
Now those lowly ones are prized,
All because you taught their value,
Warner Bates.

And you've helped us help each other,
Warner Bates.
Taught us where to seek and find the Hidden traits.

Ah! How carefully we'd look
For those things not in the book.
What deep interest each one took
In those "Early Lows" you wrote of,
Warner Bates!

But your efforts are rewarded,
Warner Bates!
Thru the thoughts that you have planted
In our pates.
Something we will pass along,
Ever swell the growing throng,
Weekly grow more broad, more strong,
That your "Early Lows" have started,
Warner Bates!

(If this bit of verse can give Mr. Bates or the editors of MEKEEL'S a tenth of the pleasure that I have derived from "Early Low Values Specialized", I am repaid a hundred-fold! —"M. T." DOME.)

NEWS GLEANINGS.

—"Victoria," the latest work of Charles Lathrop Pack was awarded a silver-gilt medal at the recent Brussels International Exhibition. A silver medal was awarded to Mr. M. Cutler for his display of United States, while a bronze medal was given to Mr. Adutt for his Confederates.

—The London Daily Express is going to make a feature in its issue for the last Thursday of each month of a half page devoted to philately. This recognition from so influential a news source is certainly significant, and it would seem that the English collectors are alert to ask consideration for their pursuit in the best of public prints.

—The tenth sale of the stamps from the Ferrari collection took place last week at the Hotel Drouot, Paris, as usual. The stamps included in this sale covered a considerable surface of the world, and the collection of locals of the United States was also disposed of in this sale.

—Walter J. Rozmin sends us a cartoon from the Chicago Evening Post, of June 12. It deals with the Republican convention at Cleveland and one of the features represents Charles Lathrop Pack in the act of planting a tree "in the heart of the Republican Party."

—Eddie Cantor in the New York Telegram, of June 10, in his department "Round the Town" has a short article on "Possessing a Hobby" in which he pays a fine tribute to stamp collecting. We are unable to reprint the article in full as it is copyrighted. Thanks are due E. W. Goldthorpe for submission.

—C. E. D. Egerton of Rockingham, N. C., in renewing his subscription encloses for our inspection the wrapper used in mailing the WEEKLY of August 18, 1923. It is interesting from the fact that it bears the postmark "Anchorage, Alaska, Dec. 10, 1923." Mr. Egerton received the paper at Rockingham, Jan. 2, 1924, but the thing that interests him is where the paper spent the five months that it was on the way from Portland to Anchorage. This cover will go into Mr. Egerton's collection of curios.

—Elsewhere in this issue will be found an advertisement from Joseph Gallant, Hempstead, N. Y., in which he advertises a vacation packet of one hundred stamps, catalog value $14 for $1.55. This is an excellent packet and a marvel of cheapness. We can vouch for the fact that the packet measures up to the claims made in the advertisement.

—The Chattanooga, Tenn., Times of June 15, contained a page advertisement of the firm of D. B. Loveman Co. a great department store of that city. One feature of the advertisement was an announcement of "Postage Stamps for Collectors" quoting a large number of packets, albums, etc.

—Owing to the fact that I have been ill in hospital for over a month, I will be somewhat delayed in replying to my correspondents. In this connection, I now understand that the new issue, Canal Zone surcharged on U. S., will be placed on sale July 1 next in the following denominations: 1, 2, 3, 10, 12, 15, 30, 50, $1.00, envelopes, post cards and 1, 2, 10 dues.—EMIL J. RALL.

—The Junior American Philatelic Society announces the appointment of Carl O. Selander, Box D, Edgewater, Colo., as manager of its large and growing exchange department. The J. A. P. S. also announces the perfecting of arrangements with various philatelic societies whereby exchange books will be interrupted.

—The following editorial appeared in the Philadelphia Ledger, of June 21; "Stamp collecting is not to be classed as child's play. In many countries the philatelic passion is a main-stay of the struggling national treasury, and Europe is littered with offices where stamps are sold. A great sale now in progress in Paris stirs the cupidity of specialists the world over. They know the rare specimens as connoisseurs know old violins. New South Wales stamps of 1850 are changing hands for prices that would have bought a whole sheep ranch at the time they were issued." While this is not so bad, yet it is scarcely worthy a paper of the prominence of the Ledger. This editorial appears as if it were something written in the day's work and does not show that insight into the heart of philately that might be expected from so worthy a source.

Now let us go to the New York Times and see how it handles an auction sale recently held in New York City. The following description of the sale is readable "stuff," and others than the philatelist would find that unconsciously they would read through the account to the end. We exult every time we think of the New York Times as the mouth-piece of philately in a news sense in this country, and we ask that all collectors show that they are appreciative of the favor that is shown them. The article is headed: "Curious stamps bring high prices," and the text is as follows:

"An example of the increasing tendency among collectors of United States stamps to pay fancy prices for early issues of the more common varieties having curious cancellations was shown last week at the sale conducted by J. M. Bartels & Co. at 116 Nassau Street. The ordinary 3-cent 1861-66 issue, of which good used copies may be purchased for a few cents, was represented by an exceptional number with strange postmarks and these aroused keen bidding. One with a bluebird postmark sold for $30; another with a deer, cancelled at Deerfield, Mass., brought $21; one marked with a skull and bones sold for $11; one with a green cancellation, showing the letters "U. S." in a heart, went for $8.25, and another with a Chicago "Supplementary Mail" cancellation sold for $16. A 3-cent stamp of the same issue on the original envelope with an Irishman and hat cancellation sold for $20.50.

LONDON W. I., ENGLAND

Cable: SEFIPEM, LONDON.

The highest price in the sale was $1.00 paid for a remarkably fine pair of New York Postmaster 5-cent issue, 1851. A bidder for Representative E. R. Ackman, of New Jersey, paid $66.50 for an envelope addressed to London with copies of the 12-cent, 1851, with a Boston 2-cent local. Two fine used copies of the New York 5-cent issue on the envelopes were purchased for $41 apiece for a collector in Manchester, England.

Many copies of the 5 and 10 cent Government issue, 1847, sold for more than standard catalogue prices. A 5-cent in the red-brown shade, bearing a gridiron postmark from New Orleans brought $14.25, and a beautiful 10-cent copy on an envelope postmarked in New Orleans sold for $70. Another show a double transfer went for $59 and with the top line recut brought $41. Fine single copies of the 5-cent stamp brought $17.75 and $16.50, respectively in the dark brown shade, the latter having a blue "Paid" cancellation.

A block of five 3-cent stamps, 1851, on an envelope to Paris with the Supplementary Mail cancellation, sold for $58 and two copies of the same value on an envelope, one stamp being of cracked plate variety, brought $53. An envelope addressed to China having a pair of 24-cent, 1861, with a 3-cent stamp sold for $26 and another envelope to China with single copies of the 3 and 30-cent stamps of the same issue sold for $23.50. A superb single copy of the 12-cent, 1857, with the Supplementary Mail cancellation brought $62, paying $42 more than the catalogue rate for an average copy.

A 3-cent copy of the 1851 issue on an envelope bearing a Christmas tree cancellation with twelve branches, sold for $26, another copy bearing a steam cancellation from New Orleans brought $16.25, and one with an Express Mail cancellation, New York, sold for $10. A fine copy of the 3-cent, 1857, known as the Type I variety, with recut line brought $37, and a good copy of the 90-cent, 1869, sold for $21.

An unusual copy of the 30-cent Foreign Exchange Revenue, gray and lilac with the lower label printed twice, sold for $37.50, and $22 was paid for a used copy of the $1,000 revenue stamp 1899 issue. A bidder gave the same price for a fine copy of the 4-skilling Norway, 1856, on part of the original envelope.

PHILATELBY ON THE MAP.
 By FRANK F. SMITH.

am just now studying a course in er accounting with the International rrespondence Schools of Scranton, Pa.
 lesson I am studying to-day is ed "Special Accounting Examina-ns and Reports," and they use as an mple "The Standard Stamp Co., ders in Rare Postage Stamps." The rager of the company, Mr. Sharp, ited to have some idea of his pros-s for a normal summer season and ed in an accountant to prepare a cast of future business on the basis the business done during the past ten rs. He classes as abnormal all sales ounting to from $5.00 to $50,000. He it into great detail, dividing the busis into four classes—Loose Stamps, kets, Sets and Approval Sheets. You imagine how much more interesting lesson was to me on account of the oduction of philately. The point I it to stress is the fact that we are gnized as a worth-while enterprise.

NEW BARBADOS, POSTAGE AND REVENUE, 1925.

By HARRY E. HUBER.

In the 1923 session of the Legislative Assembly the question was raised of combining the two series of stamps for the collection of postage and fiscal charges, but favorable action was not taken until the Assembly of 1924. The Crown Agents have been asked to submit designs for a new series of stamps, inscribed Postage & Revenue, in which the present 3s limitation will be greatly exceeded; it is quite probable that one of £5 denomination will be included. The highest Postage & Revenue value in the British West Indies series at present is £1. As it is extremely unlikely that the new stamps can be in readiness much before January 1, 1925, further supplies of several values in the small Seal type (issued Nov. 14, 1921), much in demand, and which are running low, have been cabled for.

The stamps issued by Barbados for the last 25 years have been very attractive, and while keyplate printing has been resorted to at times, the designs have been distinctive, and at no time has use been made of the mediocre De La Rue general keyplates, utilised by so many Colonies financially able to incur the expense of special dies, plates, etc. From the standpoint of investment, the catalogue values indicate that the stamps of Barbados are most desirable. They are postage stamps, and have not been used for the dual purpose of postage and revenue, as in many Colonies, and for the higher values the demand has been very limited, as is shown by the tabulation below of stamp sales for the years 1917 to 1920 inclusive.

The Post Office revenue, expenditure, value of stamps sold, and the cost of manufacture of stamps, in the respective years, was as follows:—

	Post Office
	Revenue.	Expenditure.
1917,	£6785.19.9	£7804.16.9 1/2
1918,	7565.16.3	9073.16.9 1/2

1920,	21899.10. 1/2	12896.15.4
	Value of stamps sold. Cost of manufacture.
1917,	£6310.16.5	£154.4.1
1918,	7257.5.6 1/2	484.0.9
1919,	6958.16.9	88.4.1
1920	12482.15.2	1339.11.4

In the respective years stamps to the following value were sent to collectors and dealers abroad:—

1917,	£711.14.10
1918,	1538.12. 4 1/2
1919,	508.13. 0
1920,	2991.16. 1 1/2

The increased sale of 4d and 3s stamps in 1918, was due to the issue on Feb. 18, 1918, of these two values, bi-colored, with the vignette re-engraved, and the circular border line omitted—a change which did little to improve the appearance of the stamps.

In 1919 there were no new stamp varieties, but on Sept. 9, 1920, the bi-colored Victory series was issued. These new issues explain the increased cost of manufacture of stamps in the respective years.

On October 10, 1917, the 1d War Tax stamp (overprinted on the 1d of 1912 series) was issued, this tax on letters was effective from October 15, 1917, until March 31, 1920. The revenue from the sale of these stamps was not credited to the Post Office account, but to a special account for war purposes. The value of War Tax stamps sold during the period the tax was in force, was as follows:—

1917 (from October 15),	£503.18. 5
1918,	1407.19. 1
1919,	1232. 2. 1
1920 (to March 31st),	373.19.11

The sale of War Tax stamps ceased on March 31, 1920, but they were still allowed to be used as postage stamps.

Barbados, it may be news to some, does not subscribe to the Crown Agents' scheme of selling current stamps in London, and although philatelic press reports would indicate the contrary, none of the Victory or small Seal type stamps were sold by the Crown Agents. In some cases, they did, however, book orders and send out with the cash to the Colony, but the stamps were all supplied by the G. P. O. at Bridgetown. Bahamas, Bermuda, British Honduras and Barbados are practically the only British Colonies in the Western Hemisphere prohibiting the sale of their stamps by the Crown Agents.

Bardados is about 21 miles long by 14 wide, and contains approximately 166 square miles, with a population (according to the census of April 24, 1921), of 156,312, which was 15,671 less than in 1911. Of this total, 10429 were white, 111,677 black and 34,216 mixed.

The island is said to have been first visited by some Portuguese about 1536, and to have been named by them Los Barbados, after the bearded fig trees found there. In 1605 it was nominally taken possession of by the crew of the English ship "Olive Blossom." The island was granted to the Earl of Marlborough by King James I, and in 1626 Sir William Courteen, a London merchant, commenced to colonise the island. Some forty settlers from the "William

Unlike most of the British West Indian islands, Barbados has never passed out of British possession.

The Government consists of a nominated Legislative Council of 9 members, and a House of Assembly elected annually by the people on the basis of a moderate suffrage. Next to the House of Commons, and the House of Assembly of Bermuda, the Barbados House of Assembly is the most ancient legislative body in the British Empire. The executive functions of the Government are performed by an Executive Committee consisting of the Governor, Colonial Secretary, and the Attorney General, and such other persons as may be nominated by H. M. the King, with one member of the Legislative Council and four members of the House of Assembly nominated by the Governor.

The G. P. O. is at Bridgetown, the capital, on the southwest coast, and there are ten district Post Offices. A daily house to house delivery is maintained in the country districts, and four deliveries in the capital.

The following from the report of the Colonial Postmaster (H. W. Collymore) for the year 1922, is interesting as showing the amount of mail handled by the G. P. O. at Bridgetown during the Christmas rush season.

"There was a glut in the office at Christmas on account of the large number of mails received during the week previously. No mail was received in the office during the period 7th to 13th December; this was a peculiar coincidence, but from the 14th they began to come in and it may be of interest if I mention here what was received from that date up to the 23rd December.

"On the 14th 85 bags were received; on the 15th, 104; on the 17th, 15; on the 18th, 323; on the 20th, 47, and on the 23rd, 350 bags. Altogether we received 924 bags of mail in those ten days. The consequence was the Parcel Post rooms were filled to overflowing and we could open no more bags of parcels. There was no delay in the sortment of the letter and newspaper mail. I reported the condition of the office to the Executive with the result that another room was added to the Parcel Post Department, and this I trust will meet the requirements for some time."

"WHICH OFFICE?"

Quite frequently subscribers ask us the question as to whether they should send their mail matter to Chicago, Beverly or Portland. It should be a very easy matter for a person to decide this after having been a subscriber to the WEEKLY for some months and especially after they have been in communication with one or more of these offices.

When the office of the WEEKLY was moved from Boston to Beverly it was decided to change the office of mailing from Boston to Portland to save time in the despatching of our regular edition.
This step required the opening of an office in Portland for the receipt of subscriptions and advertising copy.

However, all advertising copy must pass under the eye of the Managing Editor, and our advertisers must understand that in this respect much valuable time will be saved by addressing their advertising copy direct to the Beverly office instead of Portland or Chicago.

Correspondence dealing with the editorial department of the WEEKLY should be sent to Mr. Severn at Chicago. Letters dealing with subscriptions may be sent to either Beverly or Portland, but advertising copy will be the more promptly handled if sent to the Managing Editor at Beverly.

EDITORIAL.

We have been informed that the Collectors Club has voted to hold a big international exhibition in New York, in 1926, and that a committee with Mr. C. J.
Phillips as chairman has been appointed to prepare a working program. With this bare announcement we shall await details, as with half an eye we can see that the forthcoming event will be one that will be tremendously influential for good. The supposition is that this exhibition will not affect any small exhibit to be held during the convention of the
A. P. S., at Philadelphia, in the same year. It is a satisfaction to know that from now on we shall have every reason to bend to the effort to make the exhibitions successful, and if there is one reason for a feeling of confidence that all will be well with the great Collectors Club exhibit, it is the name of Charles J.
Phillips as chairman.

new schedule of the airmail from New York to San Francisco that starts July 1.
From the Postal Bulletin of a recent date we take a few sentences that will give an understanding of the conditions under which the new service will be established. "The air mail service from July 1 will be available for use by all sections of the United States to and from which it may expedite the deliveries of the mail. The airplane postage charged includes the transportation to or from the air mail route as well as the transportation by plane. Any mailable matter will be carried by airplane, including sealed parcels not exceeding 50 lbs. in weight and not exceeding 84 inches in length and girth combined, with postage at the rate of 8c per ounce or fraction thereof for each zone or zones in which mail is carried by plane. Special airplane stamps are issued, but any stamps good for postage may be used provided the envelope is plainly marked via air-mail. The New York-San Francisco route is the only one operated by the post-office department and rating of postage is divided into three zones: One,
New York to Chicago; Two, Chicago to Cheyenne; Three, Cheyenne to San Francisco. A rate of 8c for each ounce or part of an ounce makes the cost of postage for each ounce or fraction thereof, for example, from New York to Chicago 8c, New York to Cheyenne 16c, and New York to San Francisco 24c." A complete tabulation of airplane postage rates is given in a table prepared by the department. Registration and special delivery service may be had by the necessary additional payments. This route marks an important advance in aerial postal transportation, as it is to be a permanent route that is transcontinental in scope. We suppose that first flight covers will be one of the attractive memorials of this new route.

We have been harping on the radio possibilities for philately, and we intend to continue to indicate how necessary it is that we take advantage of every opportunity to enlist the radio in our cause.
We have seen enough of the benefits that come through philatelic broad-casting to make us an ardent partisan of this form of publicity. It is known that the various stations are opposed to advertising or propaganda in any form, and it behooves us to be regardless of the restrictions that are imposed in this relation.

We have reason to think that as the popularity of radio increases, there will be greater demand for speakers on topics of interest to the general public. Now that the radio entertainment has become a staple part of daily existence, there is beginning to be a call for speakers who have subjects that are of some novelty to hearers. We feel that we have accomplished something in having one man say that he suggested to his nearest broad-casting station that they allow him to give a short talk on philately, and he said that they responded favorably to his request asking that he make his talk brief but they did not try to edit his subject. Perhaps there are several dozens of our readers who are in a position to emulate the example of this man. We are sure that any of them is intelligent enough to condense into a five or six minute talk about all the essentials of philately. Of course, it is difficult to observe a sense of proportion in trying to compress a subject that is so embracive into comparatively few words, but the trick is to give an idea of the range of philately by citing the number of collectors as estimated; the number of stamps available for collecting and by giving briefly an account of the rarest stamps and dwelling rather impressively upon the American stamps from first to last, especially those having a novel or historical cast. We now hail the radio as our friend and as the talk on stamp collecting becomes a feature at times of many of the stations, we shall see the effect of this word-of-mouth advertising.
An enthusiasm for stamps is one of the requirements for the making of a successful collector, and we think that anyone who believes in stamps for their collecting virtues is brave enough to want to tell what he knows of the delights of collecting by means of the radio.
We suppose that we could start a radio department judging from the number of our readers who are interested in radio and who wish to develop the proposition as affecting philately to the greatest degree of usefulness. The radio enthusiasts must keep us informed of their activities as we wish to place on record as many of the good philatelic acts as possible.

GALLANT'S VACATION PACKET

On sale only during the months of July & August. To tell you anything about a Vacation Packet would be only a waste of time. I am the only one who has started selling Vacation Packets during the vacation months. Many others have tried to sell Vacation Packets, yes, they did, but they only got one order and everyone who's ordered an imitation vacation packet is fooled. It's an old story, you cannot fool the people all the time. To make a packet with a catalog of $10.00 or $12.00 and putting all kinds of trash in, using prints or high catalogued stamps with cancellation or figuring old catalog prices, anyone can sell a catalog value from $1.00 to $12.00 for $1.50, but Gallant's Vacation packets are not made this way, every stamp is genuine, either used or unused, and the total catalog of the 100 all different stamps runs from $12.00 to $15.00. Then when you order your Vacation packet, in better stamps can be expected. I have sold during the last six years not 100, not 50, but over 5000 Vacation Packets and a year I can promise that everyone will be more than pleased. You will find stamps along $2.00 each and higher, $1.00, 60c, 50c, 30c, 25c, 20c, 15c, 10c, 8c, 6c, 5c, 4c, 3c, and in every packet only ten stamps at 2c each will be found.
Gallant's Vacation Packet on sale only one year during the months of July and August. 100 all diff. stamps catalog from $1.00 to $15.00 for $1.55.

of the reader as given is not without its points of interest, and it is submitted in the hope that an idea or two may be gained from it.

The receipt of a letter from Mr. Willis Kerr of Emporia, Kansas, speaking of having obtained the postmark of a Kansas office discontinued many years ago on an original cover gives us the idea to ask if other collectors who give special attention to the postmarks of discontinued offices in their own state in consideration of the historical suggestions that the covers convey, will place them on record with us. We think that "aside" is certainly one that may be used to advantage. The tendency to keep attention to the early history of the states is encouraged by the example of the state historical societies. Nothing could more fittingly convey some of the changes in the state than the marks of offices that are no longer ant. The collector who has a good representation of covers of the kind is contributing real information, even though may be somewhat humble, to the archives of the state, in the forms of marks. Lists of covers bearing the names of discontinued offices are interesting, and we should be glad to hear from collectors who are giving attention to this division of collecting; for instance, our Rattle-Snake, California, mark on a 10c green stamped envelope of 1855, has an appeal that we think a good many collectors can appreciate.

With the advent of the vacation season, the "flavor" of our famous "M. C." is radically changed. There are still a number of fine Latin American countries represented, tho they are not the same stamps in most cases. The majority of the new cast are Central European items in postally used condition. We are trying to put a large number of stamps in this "M. C." which have NEVER been in any Edition of the famous line. We strive to get stamps which catalog well and plenty of new ones which aren't even listed in the MONTHLY JOURNAL. There's no need to mention stamps cataloging 35c and 50c, scarce provisionals and high values. You simply cannot realize what a "M. C." looks like until you take a look at one.

During the summer we try to make all our "M. C.'s" a little bit better, because we feel that the fellows who buy during the summer are entitled to a little extra attention. And, by the way, if more dealers adopted this policy, collectors and dealers alike would enjoy mutual advantages. Well, drop your line in!

AKRON MAIL CARRIER, C. A. TOWNSEND.

There appeared recently in the Akron, Ohio, Beacon-Journal an article featuring Charles A. Townsend, who is not only well known as a local mail carrier but even more widely as a stamp dealer. Through the courtesy of this paper we are able to reproduce Mr. Townsend's picture which accompanies the article. In addition to the excerpt here given were some observations by Mr. Townsend connected with his experiences as a stamp dealer, but we do not have the space at our command to use the entire article. Our readers will recall the many advertisements that have appeared in this paper and we take pleasure in presenting the following:

CHARLES A. TOWNSEND.

"Stamps one cent each and a thousand a day" is the slogan of Charles A. Townsend, 848 W. Market St., Akron's veteran stamp collector and seller who is internationally known among stamp collectors. A coincidence is that Townsend handles stamps in one form or another during most of the 24 hours of the day. He is a mail carrier, and will soon complete 30 years' service and retire.

Mr. Townsend began collecting stamps in 1870 and for nine years did nothing but buy rare stamps from all over the world. In 1879, he came to the conclusion that he might collect a better assortment by dealing in stamps and consequently sent out his first list of offerings that year.

As Mr. Townsend admits, he had more or less success in this venture for the next 30 years, but became disgusted about 1900 and decided to sell out his entire collection and quit. As is the custom of most dealers, he made up a list of his possessions and offered them to other collectors at one cent each.

SUCCESS CAME EARLY.

It was the success of this offer that induced Mr. Townsend to begin selling stamps at one cent. Each year his business has grown until now his sales total nearly 900,000 stamps. It should not be understood that Mr. Townsend sells all his stamps at one cent, because this is not true. He has made it a policy of his business never to sell a stamp for less than it cost. No matter what bargain is offered, the purchaser is aware that he is paying more than the original cost.

For the United States varieties Mr. Townsend has prepared five books carrying more than 300 stamps.

At his home one room is devoted entirely to stamps. Three walls are lined with boxes containing "stock," while one wall is entirely covered with several denominations of the Columbian issue of 1893. In "stock" there are always about 150,000 stamps ready to be made up into books for customers. Each stamp has a special place on the shelf. Mr. Townsend knows his stock so well that he can get the color, denomination and country requested in a few seconds.

SOLD 7,166 IN ONE DAY.

Mr. Townsend proudly points to his record sale for one day, 7,166. Practically every stamp was sold at one cent.

Although this veteran has a mail list of many thousands of collectors in all parts of the world, not many more than 500 are listed as active and receive his regular catalogs. Practically all are in the United States, as Mr. Townsend says that he prefers not to sell outside the country for several reasons, but chiefly because of the long time necessary to get returns and receive orders.

Contrary to the ideas of many that it would be an easy matter to collect stamps by working around a post-office and having opportunities to see and collect from this source, Mr. Townsend says that it's very seldom that he bothers asking for a stamp even on letters he delivers on his regular route.

Mr. Townsend says that many collectors and offices advertise stamps at a cent, but after a collector is started, the prices are raised and his interest begins to lag.

DEATH OF E. H. GAMMANS.

We are informed by Philip H. Ward, Jr., that E. H. Gammans, a former New York stamp dealer, died Sunday, June 1, of Bright's disease. Mr. Gammans will be remembered by readers of the WEEKLY as a regular user of space in our publication and he had built up quite a business. In recent years, due to poor health, he had taken up his residence at Middle Grove, N. Y., and gave less attention to the stamp business.

MR. HIND IN EUROPE.

Stamp Collecting informs us that Mr. Arthur Hind of Utica, N. Y., has recently paid a visit to the Wembley Stamp Exhibit. We also learn that at the continuation sale of the famous Ferrary stamp collection the highest price paid was $3,000 for a block of six 8d 1850 New South Wales. It was bought by a London dealer for Mr. Hind. The aggregate sales on June 19 were nearly $40,000.

SPECIALIZED COLLECTIONS

I have recently purchased three very fine specialized collections, consisting mainly of the early classic imperforated issues, which I am in a position to offer on an investment basis.

GREAT BRITAIN

A superb lot consisting of imperforated stamps only including about 50 of the 1d black, with four margins, a number of fine 2d, including a pair, a goodly number of the 1d red brown including numerous pairs and strips up to 6, as well as a block, the 6d, 10d and 1sh octagon, including 3 of the latter each on the entire cover in combination with the 1d stamp. Also, a large block of the 1sh on part cover used from Ireland, but this piece has unfortunately been cut to shape, although the stamps are still joined. A really fine lot of these early and desirable varieties.

HAYTI

A very fine lot of almost entirely the head issues including over 100 copies of the imperf. varieties. There are blocks of the 1c and 2c, a strip of three of the 5c in magnificent used condition, as well as a superb canceled pair of the 20c. Some of the perforated head issues are represented in blocks. There are some interesting inverted surcharges and the like in the late issues, as well as a complete set of the scarce 1898 series, Nos. 46 to 51. This collection will be sold intact or will separate the head issues from the balance.

PERU

An unusually attractive assortment of the early imperforated varieties only, including steamship and other cancellations. There are several pairs and strips, and several of the pairs show the paper joints, well known to specialists of these issues. I also note a couple very fine double prints. This collection will possibly catalog $700 to $800.

The above will be gladly submitted to interested parties. If not known to me, kindly furnish commercial references.

The Bi-Monthly Journal

A house organ with an inimitable style and charm, published every two months. Each issue consists of from 32 to 48 pages, every one containing a formidable array of unusual offerings in medium and scarce sets, packets and special collections, dealers' stocks, single stamps, philatelic supplies, etc., etc.

Albert C. Munson, 412 Broadway, Houston, Texas, writes: "I enjoy the Bi-Monthly as much as MEKEEL'S; there is no other paper, house organ, journal or circular of any kind wherein one can find such extraordinarily good stock—and at such reasonable prices."

C. A. Ralston, 164 Vaughn St., Waterloo, Iowa, says: "I am paying subscription charges for two large house organs, but would rather get along without both of them than to lose yours. If necessary, I know that I could pay a substantial subscription to the Bi-Monthly and save all of it on stamps offered in a single issue."

The Bi-Monthly Journal is a distinctive publication and absolutely free to patrons. You can't afford to be without it!

Transcontinental Air Mail Service

In the Postal "Bulletin" of June 20th, the Second Assistant Postmaster-General calls attention to the Transcontinental Air Mail Service, which will be inaugurated on July 1st, and further repeats the information in the edition of the following day. In these bulletins we are told that the planes stop at thirteen cities between New York and San Francisco going west and at the same cities coming east. Starting from New York, these cities are Bellefonte, Pa.; Cleveland, Ohio; Bryan, Ohio; Chicago, Ill.; Iowa City, Iowa; Omaha, Neb.; North Platte, Neb.; Cheyenne, Wyo.; Rawlins, Wyo.; Rock Springs, Wyo.; Salt Lake City, Utah; Elco, Nevada; Reno, Nevada and San Francisco. The route is divided into three zones, and the rate of postage is 8c for one zone, 16c for the second zone and 24c for the third zone. New York to Chicago constitutes the first zone, and a letter going to any place within this zone from some other city within the same zone takes an 8c rate. The second zone is from Chicago to Cheyenne, and the rate within the zone is 8c, but there is a charge of 16c from any place within this zone to either the first or second zone. The third zone is from Cheyenne to San Francisco, and the rate within this zone is 8c, with a charge of 16c to a city within the second zone, or 24c to the first zone. Any mailable matter will be carried by airplane, including sealed parcels not exceeding fifty pounds in weight, and not exceeding eighty-four inches in length and girth combined, with postage at the rate of 8c an ounce or fraction thereof, for each zone or part of zone in which the mail is carried by plane. The special Air Mail Stamps issued last August are available for this purpose, but any stamps good for postage may be used, provided the envelope is plainly marked "Via Air Mail." Letters may also be registered as well as sent by Special Delivery. The post-offices named above show the line of flight but other offices not on the route may dispatch airplane mail to the nearest point, where most advantageous connections will be made with the air mail schedule.

It may interest our readers to know that it takes just exactly 210 covers in order to have a first day mailing from every city on the route to every other city, and the postage on these providing you pay the scheduled amount, amounts to $30.88. I have spent the better part of a couple of days preparing one set for mailing, and here's hoping that they all come back. I have just been wondering if any one else has taken the trouble to go after such a souvenir of this history making occasion.

1924, 2c Rotary Print, Perforated 10.

Mr. Ralph Psotta kindly sends a block of four of the recently issued 2c perforated 10, printed from the rotary press, wherein the plate has been badly smeared and the plate being new shows steel crevices which constant use will eliminate. The 1c of the previous design was noted in similar condition some little time back.

2c Harding, Minor Varieties.

The plates for the Harding stamps were turned out so quickly, that if anyone will take the opportunity of studying almost any of them carefully, numerous flaws and imperfections will be noted. In a number of the early plates, I found the horizontal guide lines very distinct passing across the entire sheet. Constant use of the plates generally wears these light lines away, but early impressions from the plate often show them distinctly. Mr. Le Grand Payne has just called my attention to distinct vertical guide lines on plates Nos. 14856, 14884 and 14890.

Mr. Frank Reeder, Jr., writes that the stamp immediately under plate No. 15165 from the upper right pane shows a shift. In the upper left pane of plate No. 15163, No. 10 shows a shift, as well as Nos. 80, 90 and 100. Mr. Reeder states that there are several other shifts on the same pane but these are not so distinct.

In the case of the upper right pane of plate No. 15158, the stamp immediately to the left of the plate number has a distinct dot under the "D" of "Harding," which he states can be seen without a glass. If anyone is interested in these

GREAT BRITAIN.—We have received following from Messrs. Bright & S

"We do not think that it has 1 recorded that there are two plates of 1d Wembley Exhibition stamp. On p 1, the last stamp but one on the top 1 No. 5 in the sheet, has a long tail at foot of the left stroke of the "N" "Exhibition." This is found on the printing without sheet numbers, and on the first printing with sheet num 1 to 999. In plate 2, this tail of the is missing, this is on the second prin without sheet numbers."

GREECE.—Our first examples of two Byron commemoratives reached last week on a registered envelope marked Athens, April 20, 1924. They were sent by our Special Correspondent in Athens, Mr. P. J. Drossos, who forms us that these notable center vignettes were issued on April 16th, actual date on which the Byron activities began in Athens. As the stamps were ordered only a short time. Messrs. Bradbury, Wilkinson & Co., printed them, have so far been able forward only a very small supply, that reason not more than one pair each was sold to each person applying the P. O.—and that only to mail let with.

The whole of the order from London will be available in a few days (it has not already arrived), and will once then be put on sale everywhere the public. It is to be noted that the first Greek stamp on which any v has been printed in a foreign language. The quantity to be issued, if not large, will be quite sufficient, and there is no fear that the stamps might be bought up by speculative postal offices as was the case when the Revolution appeared in June last.

Our correspondent sends us a photograph of the queue outside the Athen P. O., waiting for the stamp counter to open at 9 a.m. on the 16th.

ROMANIA.—We learn from Messrs. Field King & Co. that the 3 and 6 Postage Dues which we chronicled weeks ago were almost immediately withdrawn from circulation, the numbers being 116,400 of 3 lei and 116,200 of 6 lei, the remainders being destroyed. No reason is given for the withdrawal—presumably it was on account of changes in the rates of postage. Stamps are now at a considerable premium.—Stamp Collecting.

SPANISH MOROCCO.—The following additions to the current series overprinted for use in the Spanish zone have now appeared: 5c lilac, 20c violet, 40c blue, 60c claret; Express Stamp, 20c, with black overprint.—Philatelic Magazine.

THE RONDOUT HOLDUP.

Information is at hand indicating that retail dealers were stung badly in the holdup at Rondout, Ill. It was recalled that some $3,000,000 was reported in the rake-off of the bandits. Cortlandt Stamp Co. announces loss of stamps to the value of $300, which was addressed to Minneapolis. There were 140 stamps ranging from 10c to $1.00 and including Trinidad single CA and Trinidad multiple CA crown. We are informed that M. J. Fenster and J. M. Bartels Co. also suffered losses. Unless destroyed these stamps will probably be offered for sale in Chicago, St. Louis or Cincinnati and dealers are directed to be upon the lookout for this property.

TWO NOTABLE CONVENTIONS.

By WILLARD O. WYLIE.

The Boss—"Suppose you write a story of your recent trip for our columns."

The Under Boss—"Will it be profitable? There are those who may say that they are not interested in the movements of the Managing Editor."

The Boss—"Some will be interested and the others can pass it, even as they do other unpalatable matter."

The Under Boss—"Very well, the responsibility is yours."

Place, Cleveland.

Time, Tuesday-Thursday, June 10-12.

A huge hall seating 15,000 is filled to overflowing. There are several thousand more on the outside waiting either for news or some chance to get by the doorkeepers. A brass band is booming and a huge organ spells the bandsmen when their supply of wind runs out; there is a system of colored lighting that produces weird but fine effects; a six armed amplifier is suspended over the speaker's desk; there is the din and tumult of the multitude and a single voice seeking to be heard—this the setting of the colorful Cleveland Republican National convention!

Among the notables are scores of U. S. senators, representatives, governors of states and army and navy officers. The press table notables are Wm. Jennings Bryan and Will Rogers. Will described the convention as having 8,000 badges. I sat down alongside of a man and, after a few side-long glances, I opened up:—"I guess you like the game of politics?" (this was a very smart remark, but it served my purpose).

"Yes, I do. I think every man should have one, such as politics, or postage stamps or golf."

"Well," I replied, "all three are hobbies of mine."

With that, my friend opened his pocket card case and flashed before me an A. P. S. card with the name L. A. Hanford. We met at the Columbus, O., convention of the A. P. S., years and years ago. A very pleasant conversation resulted from our chance meeting.

The orator of the convention was Prof. Burton of Michigan University. He talked one hour, had no notes, brushed aside all applause and a torrent of words swept over the convention hall in recurring tidal waves—it was the address in which president Coolidge was nominated.

The platform is a big cumbersome affair. When will politicians learn the fine art of making a document that can be read in a few moments? Like the ancient Mother Hubbards it covers everything and touches nothing. I honor Cooper of Wisconsin for his single-handed fight with the platform committee and the convention itself. While I am not in sympathy with his platform, it is at least reduced to understandable terms.

The greatest fact about the Cleveland convention is that women have risen to their political privileges. When the roll of the new national committee was called it was a 50-50 split. I was a little suspicious of Mrs. Mary Booze until I learned that she came from Mississippi.

Mr. Hanford very kindly hunted up W. W. MacLaren and a very pleasant hour was passed in the office of Alvin Good, talking over A. P. S. and kindred matters.

Place, Toronto, Rotary Convention.

Time, Tuesday-Friday, June 17-20.

Next to Washington and Beverly, and the place where you reside, Toronto certainly takes its place among the great cities of the continent, 700,000 population, 63% of homes owned by occupants, 3,400 factories, of which 206 are U. S., 360 churches and a group of exhibition buildings in a class by themselves. Only one fault to find and that the fact that nothing stronger than 2½ per cent was available unless—unless I could develop a cough when the doctor would give me a prescription good for a quart of the real article.

The tocsin of the Rotary meeting was "honest business methods" though international peace played an important part in the program especially in a peace pageant and military tattoo held June 16 at the exhibition grounds.

Ten groups representing the armed forces of the U. S. and Gt. Britain from 1776 to the World War accompanied by bands marched in upon the turfed stage, attired in the dress of their respective periods. "Yankee Doodle," "Dixie" and other marching music worked the audience of 25,000 to a wild pitch of enthusiasm.

I spent one evening at Sunnyside Beach with 39,999 other people and no doubt many of the multitude thought that my presence was not really essential to the evening's enjoyment. There were 9,200 Rotarian registrations and the entire bunch was entertained as never before in the life of Rotary. Indeed I could not find an hour to get out to Spadina Ave., and had only a telephone chat with Mr. Davenport of the Marks firm.

During the entire convention I found only one stamp collector, Joseph E. Nute of Fall River, Mass. He is just as much Rotarian as he is a collector and that is saying a good deal.

Two great conventions!

"PHILATELY" OR "PHILOTELY"?

By DR. ST. J. MACRYMICHALOS.

It is only today that I came across the item of Mr. Rich published in M. W. S. N. No. 1 of Jan. 1st, and although a little bit late I hasten to answer same.

First of all I wish humbly to assure Mr. Rich that I know a little more Philology than he does, at least as far as Greek language is concerned. The way in which this gentleman attempts to translate my name in English (I must confess that although a Greek I did not know up to now that Macrymichalos means (?) Big Mike!) also the derivation he gives of the word "Philately" show most evidently that Mr. Rich is completely strange to the Greek language.

My article "Philately" or "Philotely"?

published in English in the first number of my paper Philotelia gives in extenso the history of the creation of the word and I should be very happy to send gratis a copy of same to Mr. Rich, also to anybody else who will apply for it. As stated in this article, Mr. Herpin constructed the word "Philately" from the two Greek words "Philos" (fond of) and "Ateleia" thinking that the latter word means "enfranchisement," "payment of postage duty," whilst its real meaning is "exemption from postage duty" franchise postale as say the French.

Let me now confess that I cannot understand the line of thought adopted by Mr. Rich in his communication to justify the construction of the word from "Philos," "a" and "telos," when a letter is stamped this cannot but mean that it pays the postage duty and not that "there is nothing to be paid" as Mr. Rich pretends. The use therefore of the word "ateleia" (from "a" and "telos") meaning "exemption from postage duty" is more than erroneous and the word "Philately" derived therefrom and meaning "being fond of the exemption from the postage duty" is purely comical.

It is just for this reason that I am proposing the adoption of the word "Philotely" (from "philos" fond of, and "telos" tax, postage duty) which besides from being right from the grammatical side means "being fond of postage duty," the latter being represented by the stamp.

A MATTER OF CURIOSITY.

REV. G. W. WELSH.

Sometime ago there was an occasion to send a consignment of stamps to a customer. After a short time they were returned with the comment that there was nothing in the lot to interest the customer as he had practically everything in U. S. up to a certain date and therefore these could not be used.

We did not doubt the comment of the customer, because we had no reason to do so. But the thought arose in our minds, "How much is involved in such a statement?" We turned to our Scott's 1924 and, using our adding machine, found this to be the answer. When you have all the unused U. S. that are priced in the catalog, counting only the major varieties, the figures in bold type, the value represented amounts to $18,265. Turning to the used prices following the same rule, you had $7,218. The official's unused reached $1,116.80, and used they figure $858.25. Special Delivery said $6.10 unused and $1.76 used. Postage Due totaled $283.21 unused and $16.71 used. Or if the customer was exact in his statements, when he had mounted his last Postage Due, he had an investment in unused and used of $27,764.70 counting the odd pennies.

Then in order to further satisfy our curiosity we added the revenues of the first three issues, using the prices for the perforated copies on old paper, and we had, First issue, $245.80; Second Issue, $896.54; Inverts, $1,530; Third issue, $29.05, Inverts, $2,026. Adding these to the former amounts we had a total of $32,492.09. We did not proceed further for this amount was sufficient to increase our esteem for both the collection of our client and the little corner that is allotted in the catalog for good old United States.

Some of our subscribers need to know our rule regarding discontinuances. We discontinue all subscriptions in arrears promptly the second issue of each month. This means that your subscription should be renewed prior to expiration. The expiration number can be ascertained by consulting your wrapper. No free copies of the WEEKLY are sent out and this rule is as fixed as the laws of the M. and P. Our older subscribers understand our rule and the newer subscribers should get acquainted with it.

MAN'S OLDEST WRITINGS.

(In the New York Times for Sunday, June 22, appeared an article by Max Bosman entitled, "Man's Oldest Writing Pertains to Business." The article is very interesting, dealing with the ancient seals and tablets in the Morgan collection, where are recorded freight shipments, express deliveries and real estate transactions. This Morgan collection, after being housed in the J. Pierpont Morgan Library located on E. 36th St., is now in the Babylonian Seminary at Yale University, to which it has been loaned for study.)

Stamp collectors will be particularly interested in a section of Mr. Bosman's article dealing with pre-historic mail. The entire article is of great value.—W. O. W.)

Packages may have gone by parcel post in those days, for archaeologists have found ample proof of a postal delivery in ancient cities. "In 2000 B. C. there were in operation not only urban but interurban mails," is the claim of Professors Barton and Reisner, who found records years ago stating that the cost of an interurban post was "Shared by the different cities between which it operated." Proof, too, of a central Post Office and a dead-letter department has been unearthed in several buried cities in the number of unopened letters found on one spot, notably above the buried City of Larsa, the Biblical Ellasar.

Impressions of primitive seals alone appear on some of the bullae that have so far come to light, and the question arises: Did the ancients have shipping departments in their businesses and ship parcels with only a seal impression to denote the destination and the sender before the world possessed a proper chirography for addressing?

Dr. Albert T. Clay, head of the Babylonian Seminary at Yale, deciphered the legal and business tablets in the Morgan library and found that more than two-thirds of them (they were from Erech, about 1000 B. C.) had to do with personal contracts—land titles, mortgages, rentals of houses, sales of slaves, promissory notes, etc. The earliest transactions in the world were, without doubt, land ones; the realtor and the money lender were the fathers of business. And seals were their trade marks, from the beginning of time.

Besides the conch shell, a soft serpentine stone was used in early days for fashioning primitive cylindrical seals. Specimens have come to light in the valleys of the Nile, the Tigris and the Euphrates "among other relics of the beginnings of civilization," Dr. Ward wrote in his book on the Morgan Collection. "The cylindrical seal as the witness of personal proprietorship," he added, "goes back to the earliest period of history known to us as we pass out of the geological era, which possessed no writing by which history could be recorded and transmitted."

BEGINNING OF LETTERS.

Nothing but the crude arrangement of god and branch appeared on the earliest seals; later came doubtful hieroglyphics which no man has yet deciphered, and these were followed by characters that grow less and less obscure as the date of the seal approaches a time in which we know a written language had developed. Dr. Ward believed that "a history of the evolution of early chirography may yet be reconstructed from the cylindrical seals alone before they were supplanted by the scarab of Egypt in the sixth dynasty."

Neither the shell nor the serpentine seal demanded a tool for cutting. Nor did lapis lazuli, a material much valued as early as 3500 B. C. The Morgan collection contains a specimen of an ancient Babylonian seal of lapis lazuli with, perhaps, the earliest representation of the human figure clothed. The type multiplied and improved as the fashion "took." When the human figure on these seals is not nude it is clad in a short fringed skirt. The face shows in profile a nose like a bird's beak and a large round eye. The conception indicates a primitive notion of drawing, but business seems to have thrived without art.

About 3000 B. C. jasper and chalcedony had come in and seals were made of those stones. A sharper tool was undoubtedly necessary for engraving, and the supposition is that a flake of corundum tipped the flint. With the advent of this sharper point more and more engraving was done on the seals. It was still free hand work and still crude, but a study of the seals from that date onward shows a gradual and unmistakable improvement.

From the time of Gudea and the later dynasty of Ur—a little before 2000 B. C., when some kind of a written language had already developed—the art of seals became more conventional and less original; they were being standardized. They were smaller and it was the custom to engrave on each the name of its owner and that of his father and the god whom he worshipped. The seals of this period are indeed valuable to the archaeologist, who reconstructs ancient history for us from just such meagre data as these. When, as sometimes happens, the seal has belonged to a local king and his titles and city are engraved on the clay, an important gap in history is filled.

By 1500 B. C. there are evidences of a revolving tool, and cornelian, agate, blue chalcedony, saphirine and jade were converted into seals. The Kassite period began about the time the revolving tool was introduced into Babylonia from Egypt, where it had obviously originated some little while before, and marks a radical change in the ornamentation of the seals. Now the surface was covered with prayers to the gods, and, says Dr. Ward, "there was usually but one figure of a god or a worshipper, or at most two figures, and several new symbols appeared, especially the encased Greek cross, which was the emblem of the sun and perhaps the origin of swastika."

NEWS GLEANINGS.

—A reader asks if it would be a good idea for us to advocate a "philatelic day" to be celebrated in some of the more populous philatelic counties. We suppose that there would be much interest attaching to a meeting of this kind, but we are none too hopeful that it could be carried out successfully. Much preliminary work would be necessary to ensure a good representation at the central point designated for the meeting, but if some brave soul wishes to attempt the plan, we shall be glad to give it publicity in our paper. However, more to the point, it would be advisable to advertise the "day" both in the reading and advertising columns of a good many newspapers in the county that is selected for the experiment.

—The recent Tongan provisionals are offered at fairly reasonable prices in Australia notwithstanding the fact that it is known that only a small supply of the stamps was available. The rarer surcharges on the 7½, 10 pence and 1 shilling king's head type are offered for 20 shillings for the three in Sydney.

—At a recent meeting of the Cambridge England Philatelic Society, Mr. A. Leon Adutt showed his prize winning collection of the Confederate stamps of America. Mr. Adutt accompanied his display with an interesting account of the proceedings leading up to the Civil War, these stamps themselves reflecting the developments. We quote: "The various political and war references on the envelopes demonstrate the bitterness which existed between the North and South. For instance, on an envelope bearing the portrait of president Lincoln the secessionists printed the words: 'The biggest traitor of them all.' A large collection of very fine engravings with various presidents, generals, and officers of the Federal army gave added interest to the lecture and display." We may add that Mr. Adutt was awarded the gold medal for his specialized collection of the stamps of the Confederate States of America at the Czecho-Slovak exhibition in 1923, but that up to the present time he has not received the evidence of his stamp superiority.

The stamps were prepared to commemorate the wedding of the Prince Regent and Princess Nagako Kuni, originally scheduled to take place last October.

When the quake and fire visited Tokyo September 1, nearly all the issue, then held by the postal authorities in Tokyo was destroyed. By accident a few stamps were saved. These had been allotted for sale in the Caroline and Marshall Islands in the equatorial Pacific, held by Japan under mandate, and had been shipped to the islands just before the quake, so they might be placed on sale the date of the wedding.

The disaster caused a postponement of the wedding and the stamps were ordered returned to Tokyo. When the Imperial nuptials finally were celebrated the remaining stamps were issued, in denominations of 1½, 3, 8 and 20 sen. Philatelists all over the world are trying to secure them for their collections."

—The following description of stamp collecting according to a newspaper view of 1871 is submitted through the courtesy of a reader: "One of the strange phantasies that can be imagined is that which glorifies the useful stamp of commerce to a place upon the scale of objects according to a writer in a paper that caters to the queer genus of collectors of stamps. While the lowly stamp is well content with its place in our useful business world, it is not the best taste to try to claim for it qualities that by no means are possessed by it."

—We are along in the summer, but we find that subscriptions are coming very well; and it looks as though we shall go through the hot weather months with many more names on our roll than ever before. The 10,000 goal is in sight and we shall hold our ground during the summer months so as to be in position to achieve our ambition to have a round 10,000 names early next season. To those members who have sent in subscriptions in conformity to our suggestion some time ago, we give our hearty thanks.

THE BRUSSELS EXHIBITION.

Under date of May 31, Dr. Hubert Lyman Clark writes us as follows from Brussels:—

"I was reading in MEKEEL's last evening about the distinguished Americans here in Brussels and I am glad to report that I had the pleasure of a nice visit with one (Mr. Lichtenstein) yesterday. The exhibition is far more extensive than I had expected and is indeed a wonderful sight for a stamp lover. I'm going up again this morning. I've seen several used blocks of four I'd like to own. The Cape triangles are perfectly wonderful. Early Belgium, France and Holland are naturally very strong. Brussels is a great town and the weather is perfect."

Greetings have also been received from F. E. Wilson of Birmingham, England. His card bears the Exhibition postmark.

STAMPS OF THE DAY.

Le Journal Amusant, a French paper devoted to wit and humor, in its issue of Jan. 19, contained the above suggestions which will no doubt interest the governments in question. The designs as numbered are intended for use in the following countries:—(1) Greece, (2) Russia, (3) Spain, (4) Germany, (5) Italy, (6) Lettonia and Lithuania, (7) Ireland, (8) Egypt, (9) Morocco. In connection with the last design there is a comment by the artist, "This stamp design has not been completed, due to the fact that the Spanish have left the camp."

MARKS STAMP CO. TORONTO, CANADA

WORLD'S MOST UNIQUE WALL PAPER.

(Clipping from F. W. Weight.)

Without any doubt, the collector of more stamps than any person in the United States and probably the world, lives in Burbank, and in addition to this distinction, there is the much greater one, of having used 149,242 of them in the most remarkable way that could be imagined.

Just off of San Fernando, Cal., boulevard and just this side of the Western boundary of Burbank, Cal., lives Rev. A. Bucci, retired Catholic priest, who has papered two large rooms with paper bought from Uncle Sam, in other words, postage stamps, all cancelled. All the walls and the ceiling are entirely covered with the exception of a few inches. And still further, the stamps have been arranged in beautiful designs. In the center of the ceiling of one room the American flag is designed, covering a space 3x4½ feet, and it is the showing of the white stripes in the flag, that there is the few inches of space that is not covered with stamps. There being no white stamps in the world, Rev. Bucci had to leave the white ceiling. The red stripes are shown by the common two cent stamp of the United States. The blue field in the corner of the flag is made of 520 blue stamps from Italy. Nor was the master satisfied with representing the flag, but he shows it on a staff, that being of brown, three cent Canadian stamps, while on the head of the staff is a poised eagle made of yellow stamps. Tied about the top of the staff in a double bow knot, with tassels on the ends, is a representation of a cord done in bright blue. Around this center design are narrow borders in set designs, while around them is a border about two feet wide, reaching from them to the walls. This is in a beautiful geometrical design and executed with the greatest precision.

2 CENT STAMP PREVAILS.

The predominating color in the walls is made by the United States two cent red stamp. The square diamond, something more than a foot square, with a smaller diamond in the center, is the design which features the walls in both rooms, but this is artistically broken by a drop border of more than a foot, from the ceiling down, while below this and reaching to the picture molding, a distance of four inches, is a border made of the round stamps cut from stamped envelopes.

To the center of the ceiling of the second room which is connected with the front one by a wide arch, is the Italian flag in its brilliant colors. This too, has a staff and cord, and around it are narrow borders and then a wide line which is in an even more elaborate and beautiful design than that in the front room. In a set-out along one side of this room, in the ceiling, Rev. Bucci spelled his name and the date of the work, in dark, Harding stamps.

BEAUTY INDESCRIBABLE.

There is no way to describe with words the beauty and the uniqueness of these rooms. Nothing but colored photography could do it. The priest began the collection of the stamps thirty years ago. The first of last September he began the task of pasting them onto the walls and ceiling, and it is just lately that he completed the work by varnishing over the entire walls and ceiling, which will serve to protect the stamps and gives them a rich sheen.

While the nearly one hundred and fifty thousand stamps that went into the covering of these walls and ceilings, seems a good many, Rev. Bucci says he has enough more to paper several rooms, all neatly tied up in tiny bundles. Every stamp he has is cancelled, and besides the regular stamps, he has the larger ones of special design, issued by this and other governments for certain purposes.

FROM WASTE BASKETS.

When questioned as to where he got so many cancelled stamps, Rev. Bucci laughed and said he had gotten many from waste baskets, and he further explained that when he was in Los Angeles he went every evening and sometimes two and three times through the day, to the post-office, and there rescued from the waste baskets every stamp on a paper or envelope which had been tossed into the baskets by those who opened mail and threw away the wrapper, in the post-office.

In the vast array of stamps that decorates the rooms, are one hundred and six different kinds of stamps. Forty-four of these are United States while twenty-three kinds are from the Italian government. There are others from countries including the Argentine Republic, Western Australia, Bavaria, Bosnia-Herzegovina, Egypt, and Montenegro is represented by four stamps, this country having the fewest number of any. Of the United States stamps there are 116,507, while Italy comes second with 29,079. It is the plan of Rev. Bucci to take his work on the ceiling, to the next great exposition, and to make this possible and convenient, he pasted the stamps onto plaster board and screwed this into the ceiling. The rooms were finished and the stamps were pasted on after the wall board was in place. The designs were drawn on paper first, and then enlarged and drawn on the walls and ceilings.

BEAUTIFUL RESIDENCE.

The house in which are these two rooms, most uniquely papered of any in the world, is a new fourteen-room residence, modern and beautiful inside and outside. It is built of cobblestones set in black cement; is two story and surrounded by neat grounds, artistically laid out. A third room, rather unusual, is the priest's chapel which is provided with everything which could be required or desired in such a room. The priest's robes and habiliments sufficient for any ceremony of the church, are kept in this room.

Rev. Bucci is a native of Italy, but came to Los Angeles many years ago, where he remained for four years, going from there to San Luis Obispo and then Trespine and from there to his present place where he has been for nearly eleven years and where he owns a nice twenty acres set largely to peaches and apricots.

COMPLIMENT TO U. S. FLAG.

At a meeting of the city board of trustees, recently, Pietro Romeo, extended to the trustees, from Rev. Bucci, a special invitation to visit the stamp papered rooms, and Sunday morning Mayor Crawford and trustees Hams and Watson accompanied Mr. Romeo to the lovely home of Rev. Bucci. He knew they were coming, and as they entered the door, the thrilling strains of the "Star Spangled Banner" floated out to them. Hats came off and all stood reverently uncovered as they listened the notes, and looking about them, the walls beautifully papered in United States stamps, while above them, the star spangled banner in perfect sign. They, as all others who see the rooms, appreciate the delicate corner this Italian born priest offered the country of his adoption by creating the American flag in the front room and the Italian flag in the rear room. After giving the Burbank city officials first invitation to view his work, Rev. Bucci now extends an invitation to the public to see something they have never seen before and will never see again. —Burbank Review.

THE SEAL OF BARBADOS.

By HARRY E. HUBER.

At the opening of the century, stamps printed from the typographed Seal key-plate (introduced in 1892), on Crown CA paper were being used by Barbados; the printings in 1905-06 were on paper watermarked multiple Crown CA; special issues followed—the Nelson Centenary (1906-07), the 1d Olive Blossom (Aug. 15, 1906), and the 2d "Kingston Relief Fund" (Jan. 25, 1907). In 1909-10 the typographed Seal stamps were printed in the new color scheme of the Crown Agents, and on August 14, 1912, the remainders of this series (¼d, ½d, 1d, 2½d, 1s and 2s6d) were burned.

Shortly after the coronation of King George there was issued (Aug. 13, 1912) a series in three designs embodying the Seal of the Colony and the head of King George in a medallion. The pence values were of conventional size (printed in sheets of 120, 2 panes of 60), and the shilling, in larger size (in sheets of 30). Although typographed, it is one of the most attractive series of the Georgian reign, and this combined "Seal and King's head" design has since been utilized by British Guiana, Montserrat, Antigua and British Virgin Islands. Between April 1 and June 22, 1916, large quantities of these stamps (excepting the ¼d and ½d) were overprinted "Revenue" pending receipt of the definite fiscal series issued June 22, 1916, which included the high duties of 10s, £1 and £5.

The superseding series, not so attractive, issued in June 1916, was line engraved, in large size (sheets of 60), with a representation of the Colonial Seal (not Arms). No grant of arms has ever been made to Barbados, but a design for a seal was authorized on 16th April, 1663, the obverse of which bears the Royal Arms and the Motto of the United Kingdom, and around the edge the inscription "Carolus II D. G. Mag. Britan. Fr. et Hib. Rex Dom. Barbadae et Insu. Carib." The reverse represents Charles II in royal robes and crown, seated in a shell-shaped chariot, driving two sea horses and holding a trident in his right hand. Around the edge of the seal is the legend "Et Penitus Toto Regnantes Orbe Britannos," an adaptation of Virgil Eclogue i. 67, by the substitution of Regnantes for Divisos.

In the time of William IV the seal bore a representation of that monarch in the chariot, which was changed to one representing Queen Victoria on her accession. This was not altered when Edward VII came to the throne, and the Barbados stamps issued during his reign from the typographed Seal keyplate design (1892) bore the representation of Queen Victoria, as did also the combined Seal and King George stamps of 1912. It was not until 1916 that the figure was changed to that of King George at the instigation of Sir Leslie Probyn, then

Governor of Barbados; a representation of the corrected seal was reproduced on the large Seal series stamps of 1916.

On February 18, 1918, the 4d and 3s were issued bicolored, with the vignette re-engraved, and the circular border line omitted, which gave the stamps rather an unfinished appearance.

The bi-colored Victory series, issued Sept. 9, 1920, was in two designs—the pence values showing the Winged Victory from the Louvre, Paris, and the shilling values, the surmounting figure of Victory from the Victoria Memorial outside Buckingham Palace, London.

These Victory stamps were very popular, and in the first six months following the issue, orders from abroad, amounting to over £3000 were filled. In that year (1920) stamps to the value of £12482.15.2 were sold, of which £2991.16.½ went to collectors and dealers. The cost of manufacture was very high as the stamps were printed from line engraved plates at two operations, and in large size.

£1339.11.4 was spent for postage stamps in 1920 as against £88.4.1, in the previous year, when no new dies or plates were required. A supply of 1d Victory ordered in April, 1921, was printed on script CA paper, and issued Aug. 22, 1921. In March, 1924, only the 3d, 4d and 3s Victory remained, and of these a very small quantity. Mr. W. Lambert C. Phillips, for many years Colonial Treasurer of Barbados, and designer of the Victory stamps died in April, 1924.

SMALL SEAL SERIES, 1921.

The large Seal series of 1916 had never been altogether satisfactory, and in the summer of 1920, the Crown Agents were asked to have a design prepared with the Seal reduced. By November this had been submitted and approved by the authorities, and work was in process on the die. The new stamps were announced in the April-June, 1921, bulletin of the Crown Agents, as having been printed.

It had been intended to delay issue of these stamps until April, 1922, so that the large Seal and Victory series might first be used up, and to this end, a re-printing of the 1d Victory was ordered in April, 1921, and in the following month, the large Seal remainders (¼d, ½d, 2½d, 4d and 6d) which had been withdrawn from sale when the Victory stamps appeared, were re-issued.

The new stamps, 18½ x 22½mm. in size, were copper plate printed at one operation, and the values and the colors were the same as those of the 1916 large Seal series. The Seal is without the motto at the top, and within a central medallion. BARBADOS (colorless) is in graduated letters at the bottom be-twelve plain value tablets in which the value is expressed in colored numerals and letters.

Script CA watermarked paper was used for all values except the 3d and 4d (on yellow), and 1s (on green) which were printed on Roman CA paper. The 2s on blue script was the first British Colonial stamp to be printed on this paper. The perforation for all values was comb 14.

The stamps were in sheets of 120 (12 x10, undivided) with a double marginal line; the usual cross marks appear in all four margins, for aid in quartering and perforating. For the ¼d at least, two plates were used (numbered 1 and 2)—the numeral appearing outside the double marginal line at the left, opposite the 5th horizontal row, and usually cut off in trimming the sheets to size.

The first supply of these stamps was evidently very large, especially for the lower values, as it was not until the summer of 1923 that a reprinting was required of the ¼d, 1d, and 2d.

The stamp sales for the years 1920 to 1922 inclusive are tabulated below:

	1920.	1921.	1922.
¼d,	404,768	321,318	224,734
½d,	644,687	333,321	144,442
1d,	1,013,283	1,204,471	1,054,140
2d,	28,445	57,585	315,140

2s,	12,146	6,801	5,383
3s,	9,753	5,875	4,123

The great increase in sale of 2d stamps was occasioned by the letter rate to the United Kingdom being raised from 1d to 2d in 1921, and being made effective to the U. S. A. in the following year.

The post-office revenue and expenditure, and cost of manufacture of stamps, in the respective years was as follows:

	Post Office Revenue.	Cost of Expenditure.	Manufacture.
1920,	£21889.10 ½	£12896.15 4	£1339.11 4
1921	19333.	12793.	919.
1922,	13035.	10917.	329.

In both 1920 and 1921, the cost of manufacture of stamps was a high figure, due to the fact that the Victory series was produced in the former year, and the small Seal series in 1921. There were no new varieties issued in 1922.

Nov. 14, 1921, Seal of the Colony (small size, 18½x22½ mm.) Line engraved and printed by De La Rue & Co., Ltd., London. Perf. comb 14. Watermarked multiple Crown CA (3d, 4d, 1s) other values, script CA.

EARLY LOW VALUES SPECIALIZED.

Major C. H. Bonesteel, West Point, N. Y., has again shown his loyalty to the department by drawing us a sketch of a very interesting variety found on the three-cent War department. Two copies of the stamp are submitted, each showing three small dashes on the lower part of Washington's bust and extending downward out of the oval frame as low as the last "E" of "Three," as indicated in the cut. This is without doubt a damaged plate and a most legitimate plate variety. It would be interesting to determine just how this particular scratch or whatever it may be was brought about. Who knows? Major Bonesteel says that altogether he found six of these, four on hard paper and two on soft. In locating this variety, the Major went over 794 stamps on the hard paper to find four copies and 208 soft paper to find 2, a total of 1002 stamps for six copies of the variety, making the relative scarcity about one to 167.

The Editor of the department sent Major Bonesteel a one cent blue of the 1879 on cover showing a very pronounced shifted transfer. Major Bonesteel has illustrated the variety, cut printed herewith. He says that in illustrating this shift he has not tried to show every shifted line as this would only tend to confuse. Lines shown are slightly exaggerated to make them clear.

Mention should be made of credit to Mr. Willis H. Bardwell, No. 8 Winter Street, Room 909, for finding this particular shift on the one-cent blue, as it was from him that the editor of the department obtained his copy.

SALE OF LOZIER COLLECTION.

The Scott Stamp & Coin Co. makes a most important announcement this week. It has purchased the famous John T. Lozier collection of U. S. post-stamps. Without doubt the contents of this wonderful purchase will be duly noted in our advertising columns. It furnishes a great opportunity for collectors of U. S. stamps to fill their wants.

CANCELLATIONS

After months of work we have at last completed a series of approval books covering all classes of cancellations on the stamps of the bank-note issues from 1871 to 1890. Many of these are at present quite inexpensive and fine attractive copies with cancellations of some interest may be had at from 5c to 25c each. Just ask for the particular stamp you want to work on, 1c blues, 2c brown or vermilion, 3c green, 2c red brown, 4c Jacksons, and see what this stock has to offer.

NEWS GLEANINGS.

—L. P. MacCubbin, Philadelphia, Pa., sends us a clipping from the Public Ledger of that city picturing the first letter-box installed in that city for air mail service. It may be found at the branch post-office in Gimbel Brothers' store, and is only one of numerous others to be installed. These boxes will be painted red, white and blue, are marked very plainly "Airplane Mail" and a table of rates is indicated. The planes leave New York at 10. A. M. and arrive in San Francisco thirty-six hours later.

—The Cortlandt Stamp Co. has located a portion of the stamps recently lost while in transit west. There remains only a small selection to be heard from and this is covered by registration insurance.

—We have received from P. J. Drosos a new 10 lepta Charity stamp of Greece, the design being a combination of the 1912 and 1922 designs. The stamps were printed by Aspioti Bros. of Corfu and for the "first time have a proper perforation." The 1922 5 lepta is very scarce as the issue was a small one and evidently no further supply will be printed.

—On July 1, 1924, the special air mail deposit slot at the Chicago post-office was open until 6 o'clock for the mail going west and 7 o'clock for the mail going east. A good number of collectors took advantage of the opportunity to secure first-trip letters. We understand that the special stamps for the impression of a distinctive first flight marking were distributed to the various offices along the transcontinental route. Several special mail boxes were placed in the down-town district for airmail matter sent by the public; these boxes are painted in red, white and blue.

—Recently we mentioned the flagrant case wherein the Wallon stamps on a registered letter from the Stamp Agency at Washington to a collector in Chicago were removed enroute. Mr. A. W. Whitten called the attention of the postal authorities to the breach and received the following letter from the Hon. W. Irving Glover, Third Assistant Postmaster General, to whom philatelists are indebted for so many acts of consideration from their viewpoint: "My dear Sir: Your letter of May 24, enclosing the envelope used in mailing the postage stamps on your recent order to the Philatelic Agency, from which some of the stamps had been removed in transit, is received. It has been brought to the Department's attention on several occasions that stamps have been removed from letters and packages before the mail matter has reached the addressee and this is particularly annoying to stamp collectors who are desirous of receiving stamps of certain denominations with postmarks of different cities. For the purpose of discouraging this practice, a notice was recently published in the Daily Postal Bulletin warning postal employees against this offense which apparently was unheeded in this instance. Ordinarily, it is extremely difficult to place the responsibility on any certain employee, but in view of the fact that this letter was registered, it may be practicable to determine who removed the stamps in transit and to take proper disciplinary action. To this end the case will be placed in the hands of the Chief Inspector at once for the necessary action which it is hoped will not only place the responsibility in this instance but lead to the adoption of further safeguarding methods. Sincerely yours, W. Irving Glover, Third Assistant Postmaster General."

—At the Brussels Exhibition J. A. Klemann of New York City was awarded a silver-gilt medal for his Siam exhibit. Charles Lathrop Pack also received a diploma of a silver-gilt medal for his book on Victoria.

—We are pained to announce the death of an old subscriber, J. P. Coveleski, Mount Carmel, Pa. Mr. Coveleski died on June 13. He will be remembered especially because of his associations with the stamps of Canal Zone and Panama.

—W. W. Norton of Lakeville, Conn., died June 12. He was very much interested in philately and was at the time of his death secretary of the Robbins Burrall Trust Co. of that city.

—Roscoe B. Martin, MHC, Forestville, N. Y., sends us a clipping from the Buffalo Sunday Express entitled "Joy for the Collector." The editorial in question deals with several of the commemorative issues that have recently appeared.

—J. A. Urquhart of San Francisco sends us via air mail clippings from the San Francisco Examiner of Tuesday, June 24. They feature the trip of Lieut. Maughan, the aviator, in his sunrise to sunset race between New York and San Francisco June 23. The paper is filled with details of the story, whole pages being given to the particulars. Two letters were sent us by Mr. Urquhart, both leaving San Francisco at 2 P. M. June 24 and arriving in Beverly June 28, 4.30 P. M.

—From Mr. Henry B. Phillips, Berkeley, California, whose researches in general including philately, it is needless to say, have brought him no little renown we have received the following observations in regard to the words, "Philatelists" and "Philaethes." "The last mentioned word appears to be much the older of the two. Both meaning lovers of or searchers of. I leave it to the cloistered scholars to tell us just why stamp collectors adopted in effect this old word, which 400 years ago was defined as a searcher for Truth. I enclose a photograph copy of an engraving showing a Philaethes discovering Truth. She is personified as an Angel having her body completely covered with a growth of white fur (ermine). This print is found in a volume by M. Vegius and printed at Basel, Suisse, in 1492; the year that Columbus sailed the ocean blue."

I am dispersing two large collections, strong in the early types and all stamps in fine condition. Prices average MORE THAN HALF CATALOGUE.
Also in stock a choice lot of EDWARDIAN & GEORGIAN, both MINT and SUPERB USED. These are mostly priced at half catalogue.

THE PRECANCEL REVIEW.

Edited by FRED'K W. ALLEN,
312 Walnut St., Minneapolis, Minn.

New Issue Notes—The 8, 9, 30 and 50 cent precancels are becoming quite plentiful. Mr. Albert E. Wellman, Postmaster at Torrington, Conn., informs me that his office precancelled the 30 cent value as early as Feb. 29, which establishes a claim of priority over the Cincinnati and Chicago offices in precancelling this stamp. Some of the varieties of the "Buffalos," which have come to hand are Boston up and down; Chicago up and down in the new type; Kansas City down; Endicott, N. Y., down; Glens Falls, N. Y., down; Fresno, Calif., up and down; Lexington, Ky., down; Pittsburgh up; San Francisco, up and down; Cincinnati up and down, North Portland, Oreg., up, and others. New York does not appear to be precancelling this stamp or the 25 cent as yet.

Mr. James Goldsmith reports all of the new issue precancelled Kansas City except the three dollar values. I have not yet seen the 12 cent from Kansas City, but the others have passed through my hands.

Glens Falls, N. Y., was perhaps the first to use the 12 cent. These come handstamped in the U-21 type. Mr. H. A. Whipple of that city submits for inspection one of them, as well as the 9 cent inverted and 50 cent down.

The one dollar Lincoln Memorial was first precanceled by Chicago in the U-1 type. Chicago has since used the new electrotype plate on this stamp. Overprints read both up and down and double. Jefferson City, Mo., sends a great deal of mail matter to the Pacific coast and from a California correspondent I learn of the new dollar stamp with the Jefferson City precancellation (U-5) reading up. Mr. E. J. Newcomer submits this value with a handstamped precancellation reading down, used at North Portland, Oregon.

St. Louis, Chicago, Rochester and Manitowoc, Wis., are using quantities of the fifties, which denomination is slowly attaining circulation. Hugh C. Priddy and Jack Struve have shown me copies of the Manitowoc.

Certain post-offices are being furnished with handstamps of uniform style, by the Bureau at Washington. The majority of these are of twenty or twenty-five subjects. The general style is two lines of medium-sized plain capitals between bars. Tucson, Ariz., Conway, Ark., Newton, Kans., Galva, Sterling, Kewanee, Rochelle and Zion, Ill., Dover, Medina, Oberlin, and Warren, Ohio, are examples.

The electrotype plate similar in style to Rochester, N. Y., and Lincoln, Neb., which we call U-18, is most attractive. The neatness of the overprint adds to its popularity. Hardly a week passes without one noticing that several offices have joined the list of possessors of these plates. Hartford, Wis., Springfield, Mo., Bayonne, N. J., Nappanee, Ind., Salisbury, Md., Tulsa, Okla., and Youngstown, Ohio, are the latest I have run across. On the Youngtowns one may find a period after "OHIO" as well as a "no period" variety. It was especially gratifying to learn of Tulsa's plate because this post-office has been producing some of the most atrocious samples of illegible handstamped cancellations that one would wish to see.

Eagle Pass, Texas.—A handstamped precancellation in the U-6 type on the 50 cent was my first discovery from this town. Since then I was agreeably surprised to view some of the scarce green and black, bi-colored $5.00 stamps with the same cancellation reading down. A correspondent informs me that these have stopped coming and as he holds only a small quantity, believes they will be very scarce and desirable items. I quite agree and with a great deal of satisfaction, place a copy in my collection alongside of my hitherto lone copy of a precancelled green and black. This Techny, Ill., which came on a big of mission mixture from the late H. Powell Co. several years ago. I know of no other varieties of the $5.00 colored, but have seen the $2.00 red black from Endicott, N. Y., Roches N. Y., Groton, N. Y., Burlington, N. Y., and Southbridge, Mass. Also a orange and black precancelled Techny, Ill.

Chicago, Ill.—Mr. Roy Curran submits for my inspection a 2 cent booklet pane precancelled with the Se Roebuck handstamp. This piece unique, I believe, and worthy of any collection. It is easy to account for as the Sears Roebuck house in Chicago has, for a considerable span of years had a permit to precancel all stamps received as remittances, with a handstamp. This discussion recalls an interesting variety which slipped by the "watch eyes of several clerks in Uncle Sam's service. Mr. Donald H. Graham Grants Pass, Oreg., picked up a carded wrapper from a Sears Roebuck package and was astounded to perceive a Philippine Island special delivery stamp with this rubber overprint. It is a "freak" of course and must have come as a remittance to Sears Roebuck which firm precancelled it believing to be the regular "special."

Ridgely, Md.—Mr. Buell A. French forwards several denominations, including the 20, 30, and 50 cent, which have the regular handstamped precancellation of the U-23 type in purple ink.

Perryville, O.—To Mr. French I also indebted for showing me the 8 and 20 cent. The type is handstamped "PERRYVILLE, OHIO" in two of serif letters between lines.

Conshohocken, Pa.—S. D. Arnett informs me with a 1 cent 1917 issue precancelled with a new type "electro"—"Conshohocken, Pa.", in condensed type between thin bars. This stamp will undoubtedly be soon superseded by the series one cent, and it is advisable to secure one for your collection before it becomes obsolete.

Conclusion.—I am indebted to Messrs. J. A. Stallings, Joel H. DuBose, Edward Pleva, Walter L. Gates, S. J. Perry Wood and Ray H. Zorn for stamps of interest.

A "USED" STAMP.

The intrinsic value of a canceled American two cent postage stamp is not very high in this country but in Chemnitz, Germany, it represents a love that has crossed 3000 miles of ocean carrying help and hope. This little Saxon city looked ward to a hard year of struggle and in its hospitals and homes for children and the aged were in terrible need.
Remittances were received in December through the American National Lutheran Council, and when gifts were sent out to the men and women and children, to each one was given a single American postage stamp taken from mail which had been received from this country.

With it went the request that this be kept as a memento of the love of the American Lutherans for their brethren in faith in time of distress and that it be passed down in the family as a perpetual reminder.
In years to come these paltry little American canceled stamps will loom up as memorials of the time of need and the friendship of Christian Americans proved itself.

NEWS GLEANINGS.
Under this heading we desire to publish all the news from the various philatelic centers.
Correspondents' names will be given unless prohibited, as we desire to give full credit for services rendered.

—To show that the Reception Committee of the S. P. A. knows how to do things, they have arranged to have a Committee of Ladies on hand at Hotel Continental to take the ladies of the Convention in hand while the delegates are attending the sessions of the convention on August 4, 5 and 6 in New York City. Mrs. Joseph Hoffman will be chairlady.

—Through the kindness of Harry A.
Truby we have received a cover mailed from San Francisco June 28 at 2.30 P.
M. via aeroplane mail. Upon the envelope is the printed inscription "Aero-plane Mail Transcontinental Route Last Day 2c Rate." This was received in Beverly, July 3, at 8 A.M., though the cover bears no Beverly marking of time of receipt. James A. Urquhart of San Francisco has favored us with some letters sent by means of the newly established service.

—Mr. Wilbur F. Cannon of Davenport, Iowa, says that recently the local society there was instrumental in securing space in the windows of the largest department store of that city for a stamp exhibit under the auspices of the society.
Perhaps a dozen frames were shown and they attracted no little attention, and it is known that several collectors were made through this publicity. Stamps were offered as a gift to those who expressed an interest in the display, and all in all, the occasion was a successful one.

As well, Mr. Cannon informs us that radio station WOC at Davenport maintained by the Palmer School of Chiropractic has promised to allow a philatelic talk to be broadcasted so soon as an open date is available. This is one of the earliest stations, and we hope that we shall hear in due time that Mr. Cannon has accomplished his aim.

PHILATELY IN ARIZONA.
By FORREST SHREVE.

Over a year ago an effort was made by the collectors in Tucson to form a state stamp society, but the long miles and the high tax on gasoline proved fatal to the plan. During the past winter regular fortnightly meetings of the local collectors were held and the Tucson Stamp Club was organized, with Forrest
Shreve as President and J. J. Roberts, 728 E. Mabel St., as Secretary-Treasurer.
As nearly half of the members of the Club are also A. P. S. members, application for a Branch charter has been made. Visiting collectors will naturally be welcome at any of the meetings. A junior branch has met weekly during the past winter, one of the members of the Club having a mandate to guide its destinies.

Those dwellers in the remote cities of the east who think of Arizona as a philatelic desert, may be interested to know that the first local stamp club was organized in Tucson in 1885. It lived for several years and had 20 members at high tide. Its guiding spirit was Eugene A. Browne, who published in Tucson in are great favorites with our customers. We have been repeatedly urged to make up large packets of good conditioned precancelled at a reasonable price. Up to now we have not had time to do so. At this time we offer our STATE SPECIALTY packet—a real bargain to a collector who wishes to start a collection. The stamps are in good condition and are perforated 11.

EDITORIAL.

The fact that so many collectors find much interest in collecting stamps on the original covers allows us to give a brief account of the growth in popularity of this form of collecting. Even in the earliest days it was advised by those in authority that it was preferable to retain stamps such as the United States and Confederate locals on the original envelopes as much for the reason of at- testing to the genuineness of the stamps, as for the desirability of having the complete story at hand, as shown by the im- pressions and further details to be found on the covers. So, it is to be said that almost from the earliest times the value of these particular stamps was enhanced when they were on the letters on which they paid postage. About the middle of the '80's covers were shown by collectors here and there bearing stamps that showed forth more advantageously on the covers than otherwise, and among these were the Hawaiian and U. S. stamps used together on letters sent from the old Sandwich Islands. About this time it was generally known, for instance, that an Ionian stamp on the original envelope was a desirable piece in view of the fact that there was so great a disparity between the catalogue of the used stamps and the unused remainders. As the years went on, the example of Mr. John F. Seybold and a few others, in collecting the earlier stamps on the envelopes began to make an impression on the general body of collectors and it was not long before there was an idea that it was wise to retain many of the specimens on the covers, all things being equal. About twenty years ago, while a cover collection, as such, was some- what out of the ordinary, yet these col- lections did exist in sufficient number to entail consideration on the part of all collectors; consequently, it was but a step to a realization by collectors gener- ally that it was worth while to regard the cover as a valuable concomitant of the stamp. What may be called the stamp sense of collectors led them to prefer the stamps on the cover, in many cases. With the increasing number of collectors who give attention to the de- tails of the envelopes carrying the stamps, the general knowledge prevailed that the covers were of a worthy col- lecting class, and nowadays, it is fair to say that in the case of the earlier or unusual issues, the stamp on the cover has an added attraction to a considerable number of collectors. The postal information as well as the semi-historical suggestions of the envelope or cover af- fords an excellent reason for collecting stamps on the shell, so to say; and as we progress in our philatelic studies, it is a certainty that the stamp on the original envelope will become more important than ever.

A letter has been received from a reader in which he laments the lack of standards for pricing stamps in their varying conditions. He says that for a good many years, now, the buyer has had no real guide for estimating the worth of a stamp according to condition. He thinks that collectors would feel on safer ground if they had some rule for measuring the value of the stamp in a condition ranging from superb down to poor, and he professes to see no means of relief from the perplexing circum- stances. This correspondent is right in saying that the means that have been suggested up to this time for correct ap- praisal of stamp values based on their condition has not found any general favor. Some ideas that have been worked out cleverly and with no little pains have been read with interest but no action has been taken to enforce the reg- ulations that have been suggested. We think the condition proposition is one that does not loan itself to an easy solu- tion. It would be desirable if there was an unrelaxing rule whereby the value of a stamp could be estimated mathemati- cally by some condition calculator, but there seems to be nothing on the horizon that will carry us by storm. So it seems that we shall have to proceed as we are now doing and measure condition by our individual methods, depending upon our judgment for a correct weighing of the stamps. So long as these ideas are in force, there will be no little difference of opinion as to value, in the light of varying degrees of condition, but it is something to know that the man who really studies his stamps and has an ex- perience covering a number of years has a guide in setting valuations on the dif- ferent stamps. One may hope that there will be some mechanical means for arriv- ing at a solution of the problem, but in the meantime we should endeavor to perfect ourselves in discriminating be- tween the conditions, as we understand them, of the different stamps.

Through the courtesy of Mr. Alfred E. Fritz, we have been shown the stamp that has furnished the subject of the following letter from the Third Assist- ant Postmaster General at Washington, dated February 4, 1895, and addressed to Mr. P. Kuhn of Alton, Illinois. Mr. Kuhn was a collector, and if we are not mistaken, postmaster at Alton at the time and the letter was one that followed his, upon submitting the stamp for inspec- tion to Washington. "The two cent stamps submitted by you to this office on the 17th ult., one of which is imperfect, are returned herewith. The attention of the chief of the bureau of engraving and printing has been called to the matter, and he explains that the plate from which it was printed had received an injury, but that as soon as the blemish was dis- covered, the difficulty was remedied. Very respectfully, Madison Davis, (Act- ing) Third Assistant Postmaster Gen- eral." The stamps were a block of four of the two cent of the 1894 issue, one stamp of which showed a flaw consist- ing of an uninked blotch about the size of a large pinhead, on the head of Wash- ington.

No doubt our readers have noticed that we have been alert always to reproduce in our columns any references to stamps that are found in the newer books in particular. It is noticed that latterly there are many allusions to stamps in the volumes of the present day, and this mention of collecting shows that philately is within the pale of admittedly ac- cepted pursuits. It is quite remarkable that some of the latest books are handling the stamp theme in a way to show that it has reason for existence. It is a very clever treatment of the subject that Mr. H. G. Wells gives in "The Dream," The MacMillan Company, 1924. The young man has an appointment with Mr. Chees- man in a publishing house—he encounters the girl in a glass cage: "She had a round face and a bright red button of a nose. She was engaged, I realised slowly, in removing a foreign stamp from a fragment of envelope by licking the back of the paper. She did not desist from this occupation, but mutely asked my business with her eyes.

"Oran-amoiment?" she asked, still licking.
"Pardon?"

GALLANT'S VACATION PACKET

On sale only during the months of July and August. To tell you anything about the Vacation Packets would be only a waste of time. I am the only one who has started to sell Vacation Packets during the vacation months. Many others have tried to sell Vacation Packets, yes, they did, but they only got one order and everyone who has ordered an imitation vacation packet got fooled. It's an old story, you can fool the people all the time. To make a packet with a catalog of $10.00 or $12.00 and putting all kinds of trash in, using reprints or high catalogued stamps with bar cancellation or figuring old catalog prices, anyone can sell a catalog value from $10.00 to $12.00 for $1.50, but Gallant's Vacation packets are not made this way, every stamp is genuine, either used or unused and the total catalog of the 100 all different stamps runs from $12.00 to $15.00. The sooner you order your Vacation packet then better stamps can be expected. I have sold during the last six years not 100, not 1000, but over 5000 Vacation Packets and this year I can promise that everyone will be more than pleased. You will find stamp catalog $2.00 each and higher, $1.00, 60c, 50c, 40c, 30c, 25c, 20c, 15c, 10c, 8c, 6c, 5c, 4c, 3c and in every packet only ten stamps at catalog value will be found.

Gallant's Vacation Packet on sale on once a year during the months of July and August. 100 all diff. stamps catalog for $12.00 to $15.00 for $1.55.

THE MAGYAR CROWD 102 BLOCKS OF $2.04

This is the finest block packet we have seen in many a long day. Its completeness is a strong point in its favor. There is a block of every Hungarian stamp from No. 127 to 222. Five sets complete in blocks of four! Just think of it, we include the photos of Captain Kidd's five piratical descendants. Why, MAN, this lot of BLOCKS catalogs more than $16.00 and any fellow who doesn't realize that 102 vars. BLOCKS OF FOUR of any country is a bargain ought to have the Piker Trophy (in imitation platinum finish) handed to him on a platter made of a counterfeit 3c piece.

It doesn't make any difference as to your political affiations and ambitions, you should appreciate the Hungarian "DIRT FARMERS" on the small denominations and the Parliament Buildings on the large ones. This indicates that the Hungarians spend a little of their time farming and most of it in Parliament! There is a "CROWD" of BLOCKS awaiting your attention—so order this new "M. C." today.

THE MARK CLIMAX 102 VARS. OF MINT GERMAN BLOCKS $2.04

While we are about it, we will offer you that famous German block "M. C." with 80% of the stamps in denominations 5000Mks to 50,000,000,000Mks. Almost the "whole works" and some of the scarcest provisionals are included.

MUCH MORE CLUTTER 60 FINE MINT DANZIG BLOCKS $2.04

This is the nightingale's negligee all the way from the 5pf to the 500,000,000Mk and the only reason we don't go higher is the fact that the P. M. G. had cold feet and didn't do his stuff on the Billion values. 60 Different Blox $2.04.

THE MIGHTY CONVENTION 102 VARIOUS MINT BLOCKS $2.04

With all this talk about "Third Parties" we are launching a FOURTH Party which will sweep the country. The Platform: Absolutely non-duplicating from the above three parties. Nominees, For President: George Gordon, Lord Byron; For Vice-President, Copernicus of Poland. There are a number of Party managers, office seekers and camp followers too numerous to mention. Vote today and we will tell you why—next week. We promise to amply reward all supporters.

When the above "hot air" has cooled, you will note that we offer 102 various blocks of four for $2.04. The contents is entirely different from that of the other three block "M. C.'s" above. The BYRON COMMEMORATIVE set is included and other nice sets. ALL MINT AND ALL FINE. This is our big SUMMER SPECIAL.

THE MARVELOUS CULMINATION THIRD RUNNING 300 VARIETIES $1.02

Bosnia, Czechoslovakia, Jugo Slavia, Nicaragua, Roumania, etc. These are the countries most strongly represented in the new edition. Common German, Austrian and Polish items are absent. HIGH VALUES & PROVISIONALS, a very high percentage of used stamps. Can any offering be more attractive?

THE MAGIC COMMEMORATION 20C COMMEMORATIVE PRECANCELS $1.02

Oh, yes, we can deliver the goods. 20 fine Commemorative Precans including Hardings and they are all nice. 1c, 2c & 5c values and now what more can you ask? No! you have NOT got them all and you certainly would better HURRY. This is a wonderful bargain in Commemorative Precans and few dealers can equal it if they wanted to.

HARRY HOYT AND HIS STAMPS.

(The Los Angeles "Times" of June 8 is responsible for the below clipping. It will be of special interest to those stamp collectors who are also movie fans. Note that the "Times" is well enough posted to designate stamp collectors by their scientific name, "philatelists." A large double column halftone shows Mr. Hoyt lifting a stamp for inspection, using his stamp tongs as any "real" philatelist does.—W. O. W.)

Director Harry O. Hoyt is a philatelist. No, Geraldine, that isn't a harsh name. Fact is that the popular First National director, who guided the destinies of "The Woman on the Jury," and later took up the reins on "Sundown," when Larry Trimble had to give up the megaphone on account of sickness, collects postage stamps for a hobby.

Most picture celebrities find relaxation in more strenuous fields, but not so Hoyt, who declares that he can gain more genuine mental relaxation and exercise poring over a postage stamp album than by any other means.

Famous in the industry for the many pictures that he has given the screen, Hoyt is equally famous among stamp collectors as a connoisseur of rare stamps. He specializes on issues of the Argentine Republic and has one of the most valuable collections in the world of stamps issued by that country.

Adolphe Menjou and Jean Hersholt, motion picture players, also are philatelists.

THE "PHILINTER" IS ORGANIZED.

(The following despatch from Moscow, sent by Walter Duranty to the New York "Times", appeared recently. The cable message was copyrighted and we are able to publish it by courtesy of the New York Times Co. The developments in connection with this new organization will be followed with a great deal of interest by philatelists the world over. Stamp collectors may well consider the feasibility of devoting some of their spare time, if they have any, to the study of Esperanto. Clipping from Dr. L. C. LeRoy.—W. O. W.)

Moscow, June 22.—The "Philintern," Russia's new international for stamp collectors, was founded today at a meeting attended by representatives of eighteen countries and some fifty delegates of the philatelic societies of Russia.

M. Chuchin, head of the Soviet Philatelic Department, was elected President, with the following Executive Committee: Sherman of America, Gluck of Germany, Kasakof of France, Korovayef of Poland, Gotman of Esthonia and Solomonson of Latvia. Sub-committees have been appointed to draw up a constitution for the new organization, verify the credentials of delegates, arrange further connections abroad, etc.

M. Chuchin made a short speech, referring to the recent rapid growth of the philatelic movement in Russia—the principal Moscow society now has more than 2,000 members—and emphasizing the "non-party" character of the Philintern, which includes collectors of all countries and of all social positions. King George of England, he said, might join it if he wished to do so, no less than the son of a Russian peasant or an American worker. Its aims, he continued, were wholly educational, of general interest and non-political, although the encouragement of foreign interest in Russia could not fail to have the political effect of promoting peace and a better understanding among the nations.

Although the literature sent to members abroad will be for the present in English, French and German, the official language of the Philintern will be Esperanto, and two members of the Russian Esperanto League will be appointed to the Committee of Publications. Encouraged by this distinction, one of these worthies promptly arose and read a long speech in Esperanto, to the dismay of all present save his fellow-Esperantist.

M. Chuchin suggested that for the time being it would be wiser to speak Russian, but the enthusiast replied vigorously—in Esperanto—that henceforth he would never speak anything else at the Philintern meetings, and that the best thing the members could do was immediately to learn "the wonderful new language one day to be used by the workers of the Soviet World Federation."

You know the name—a NUMBER EIGHT!"

HARRISCO SPECIAL COMBINATIONS
have always met with the most enthusiastic receptions. Dealers everywhere know that no other wholesale concern in the world has ever been able to offer anything even faintly approaching them in value.

We are proud, in announcing our latest and finest creation—the great NUMBER EIGHT—to call attention to the total exclusion of the more common stamps, and to the absence of over-catalogued New European issues and slow-selling items of a similar nature.

Every stamp is of unusually fine grade and quality—stamps that would creditably grace the approval sheets of the most particular dealer; stamps for which you would willingly pay one-fourth catalogue or more; British Colonials galore; South and Central American, popular picture sets, etc., etc. Truly a galaxy of good things—all fully guaranteed as to genuineness and condition—and sold under a money-back guarantee if not more than satisfactory.

Only one lot to a customer and positively no orders filled after sixty days! Don't delay and be disappointed—order right now, TODAY!

RE-ENGRAVED CURRENT CHINESE STAMPS.

he re-engraved series of Chinese stamps have been seen, so far only in 1/2c, 1c, 2c, 3c, 4c, 5c, 15c, 20c, 30c,
The most noticeable changes in the design are a row of pearls under large corner character and that the portion around the same is much thinner than in the earlier type. Other changes will be readily noticed by collectors. In the junk design the top ornamentation has been changed to a definite design while the border on left and right sides is narrower and the solid than the etching in the series withdrawn. The whole stamp, in fact, consists of many minor but easily noticed alterations. There is some reference, too, in the shades.

Information regarding new issues and varieties will be gratefully received. We cannot give the address of correspondents.

Transcontinental Air Mail Service.

Under date of July 1st, the Philadelphia Public Ledger editorially remarks as follows:

"Today marks the passing of the transcontinental air mail service from the experimental to the practical stage. Gaps in operation and schedule have been closed up. The service has been systemized, rates fixed, time-tables and routes definitely laid out. With the great demand in business for the saving of time that means the saving of money, it would be surprising if, within a short period, expansion of the present facilities should not be necessary. It is the object to make this new service pay for itself, but too much stress should not at present be laid upon this point. The Government should lead the way in the development of this new means of transportation which is capable of such large possibilities, and all the people should be willing to foot part of the bill, even though there should be no immediate return upon the investment. The expansion of aerial travel and commerce will benefit the whole nation, and we have been slower than others in starting. Inauguration of a regular air mail service is by way of being an epochal event, though it only dimly foreshadows future developments along the same line."

There is not the slightest doubt but what a very good portion of the mail carried on the first day will finally reach a resting place in the stamp collection, and such a souvenir will always be of interest not only to the philatelists, but to the non-collector as well. A few months of operation will possibly find the service in as smooth working order as the present service from New York to Chicago. It is to be hoped that the Department will continue to use a Special Air Mail cancellation for all mail carried in the transcontinental service, but as far as I know at present, the special cancellation will be used on first day only.

There has been such a demand for the stamps that the 8c denomination at the Philadelphia office became exhausted before July 1st, and the 16c was running low. It seems that a great many people have used the service just as a curiosity, and the local post-office has placed two special mail boxes painted red, white and blue to receive letters for this service. One of these boxes has been located in the center of the city at the intersection of our two most important streets, and the second box in a large department store opposite the post-office. By the time these notes appear in print, many of our readers will have had the pleasure of receiving a cover.

1922, 6c Orange, Garfield, Double Trans-fer.

In this column a number of months back, attention was called to the fact that two stamps near the right plate number from the lower right pane of plate 14169 of the 6c orange, Garfield, showed very distinct double transfers. The Bureau's attention was called to these defects, and from information received from Mr. Louis G. Barrett which has been confirmed by the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, shows that the corrected stamps still have slight traces of the original transfer. I am informed officially under date of June 16th that these defects were repaired without the use of the transfer roll. In other words, these stamps become "retouched" varieties. Mr. Barrett describes the re-

MANY OTHER EQUALLY "HARD-TO-GET" STAMPS IN STOCK. SEND ME YOUR 20TH CENTURY BRITISH COLONIAL WANT LIST.

MAXWELL KRAUSE, BOX 345, LEBANON, PA.

touched stamps as follows: "The curved lines of color in the inner white oval frames and through the top of the letters of STATES have been entirely removed; as well as the horizontal line through tops of right spandrel ornaments; but most of the similar line across the left ornaments still remains; and evidently the conspicuous doubling of the circles in the upper corners was overlooked, as they are clearly the same as before the retouching.

Furthermore, on both of the affected stamps, the fluted border at the top where it is interrupted by the oval, has been so cut away on both sides immediately above the TA and ES of STATES that even to the naked eye, whitish spaces are noted at these places, in comparison with the appearance of the normal adjoining stamps.

These hazy spots on the design in connection with the doubled circles in upper corners are then the identifying marks of the retouched plate. It should be mentioned also that the color of these second printings from the retouched plate is a much lighter orange than that used for the earlier ones.

Our collection then of the current series has been increased by still another noteworthy variety, and it remains to be seen whether a further or second retouching will be resorted to, to eliminate the remaining lines, which have been overlooked in the first alterations."

The 1879-1888, 90c Carmine and Purple.

Messrs. Burger & Company have called my attention to a plate variety which they have shown me on the 90c carmine, American print, and the exact variety on a copy within a large block of the 90c purple. This consists of a circular scratch in the plate through the figure "90" in the form of a "C." The scratch going through the entire figure. It is odd that such a variety which can be readily seen with the naked eye has not been noted heretofore.

Precanceled Varieties.

Mr. Albert W. Draves sends for inspection a current 1c wrapper sent out by Gimbel Brothers, precanceled in two lines, "Milwaukee, Wis."

He also sends for inspection an oddity in the shape of a precanceled copy of our first postal card. The cancellation which is printed in black ink consists of bars to obliterate the stamp, and the postmark is in the form of three concentric circles. Within the two larger circles, we find "Post Office at Linton, Jefferson County, Ohio." Within the next two circles, "Groff's Publication Office, Linton J. Groff, P. M.," and in the center circle the date "Mar 2 1881."

Private Coil Varieties.

Mr. Frank Prescott sends for inspection a private coil variety, which I have not seen heretofore, and can tell nothing about it other than Mr. Prescott's remarks. It seems that it was

The Bi-Monthly Journal

A stamp publication distinctly different from anything you have ever seen before.

The July-August issue consists of 36 large pages, profusely illustrated, with a complete line of packets, sets, dealers' stocks, combination lots, philatelic supplies, good collections, etc.

Also a 4-page adventure story about stamps, editorial comment regarding the philatelic scandal-mongers, photographs of our Wholesale Approval Department and a wealth of other interesting reading.

You can't afford to miss this important issue.

MIDSUMMER CLEARANCE SALE

As per a time honored custom, I now offer what stamps I have in excess of my requirements, at prices that ought to move the goods. I do this not because I want to know that old 19th Century's are following U.S. into strong boxes to repose there as a legacy to posterity, that they will never be worth any less than to-day, and will increase in value annually, but "traffic must move", expenses must be met, and money must be on tap for new stock as it comes along. So here I am breaking up a collection and letting you have it at prices the peripatetic dealers will be shocked to see. TERMS—Cash with order. I will send any lot on 48 hours approval to participate in the sale; but cash orders will take precedence. As in most cases I have but one or two of a kind at these prices, please send a supplementary order, say of your remittance. Money will go back in case any are sold before I hear from you. No credit slips. You can't lose. I SAY NOTHING ABOUT CONDITION, because you have your money back without question if you do not think what I send is worth the price or if you are not satisfied. All are as good as you'll find in the stock of the average American dealer, and very cheap at my figures. DISCOUNTS, for cash: 3% on $25.00, 5% on $50.00 and 10% on $100.00 orders—at one time. GET BUSY and let me have an order for what fits into your vacant spaces. I'll do the rest.

TRANSCONTINENTAL AIRMAIL COVERS

Whether you are a collector of airmail covers or not, you will possibly be interested in receiving a cover from this epochal art. I offer one showing the postmark only used from San Francisco at $1.50, one from New York at the same figure. I also offer, subject to prior sale, one and one set only, consisting of 210 covers all different, mailed from each of the ten airmail stations to each of the other nine. The postage in every case is paid the proper amount of new airmail stamps. I doubt whether another set is in existence. Price on application. I can also furnish one of the transcontinental airmail covers, used during the experimental flight in August, 1923, showing New York and San Francisco postmark 10.00. These varieties are scarce.

LOCAL SHANGHAI OVERPRINTS,

offer these two varieties, a complete set, consisting of the 1c green engraved and 2c carmine surface print, overprinted locally at $1.25 for the two stamps, or sets of each at $5.00. Plate numbers can also be furnished—price on application. If you are interested in straight copies, I can furnish these at 25c each, 50c for the two.

him in July 1913 by Mr. H. L. Scherneck, who writes that the variety is a product of the International Commission and contains their perforation. It is a vertical perforation, gauging 10. He states that the Scherneck people took over this company, and cut their slots between the stamps, the falling over the perforations. These slots are of different size than turned out by the Scherneck people or their own machines, and I, therefore, am unable to account for such a variety. The stamps in question are in horizontal pair, and were made from sheet of the 2c imperforated issue of Canal Zone Surcharged on United States.

A few weeks back I announced in my column that a series of postage stamps were about to be placed on sale in the Canal Zone, and that this series would consist of most of the denominations of the current United States issue printed "Canal Zone." These stamps should have been placed on sale May 1st, but it seems that there were difficulties arising because of existing treaties with Panama. These have evidently been straightened out for I am advised by a postmaster in the Canal Zone the series will be placed on sale on May 1st.

PANAMA.—Henry A. Kiehl of Hamilton, submits for our inspection a copy of the new business reply card. The card bears a 1c imprint, but the card is 1/2c in steel blue.

GERMANY.—We have received from R. Roberts the following values in Renten Mark Currency: 3pf brown, olive green, both in the ordinary paper. Also the 60pf claret and the 80pf in the "Anniversary of Postal Union" commemorative, and a 2mk blue showing the Koln Cathedral.

The Edward Ludwig Stamp Co. advertise the portrait on the 60 and 80pf of the German Postmaster General, who, as is well known, elaborated the plan and called the conference held at Geneva, 50 years ago, to the celebration of the World's Postal Union.

ATEMALA.—Mr. Alex A. Cohen writes of the 18th inst. last, sends us of two new surcharged stamps of about 200,000 of each have been printed. The 5 peso of the 1923 issue has been surcharged "1924 UN 25 Cents." in three lines while 50c of the 1921 type bears the over-surcharged "1924 UN PESO" in two lines. Both are in black.

GUAYMAS.—We learn from Mr. F. W. that the 1920 series of Scott's stamps of the 1c, 5c, 6c, 15c, and 20c have been overprinted in purple by a rubber stamp with a signature that seems to cover a half a dozen stamps or more. This, he is informed, was placed upon the stamps by the General Fiscal Agent in order to prevent the use of a large number of these stamps stolen during the revolution. The 2c and 50c also exist.

He also sends a new series which has just been issued, although dated 1923. These are issued on a gold basis, where-in the Hondouron paso is valued at 50c. They are lithographed and show a bust on a pedestal of Dionosio de Herrera, and are in the following colors: 1c olive, 2c red, 6c violet, 10c blue, 20c bistre, 50c, red orange, and 1 paso bright green.

LIECHTENSTEIN.—The Edward Ludwig Stamp Co. report the first surcharged provisional under the Swiss administration has made its appearance. The 7 1/2 rappen, dark blue, being overprinted "5" in red directly over the old value.

SALVADOR.—A new series of postal adhesives is now in process of printing by a German firm, comprising the following values and subjects:—

- 1c violet. National Gymnasium, with inscription "Citius, Fortius, Justius."
- 2c deep red. Monument to Daniel Hernandez (Salvadorean schoolmaster).
- 5c light green. Beltranena: the conspiracy of 1811.
- 6c dark blue. Bridge over the River Lempa.
- 10c yellow. Map of Central America, showing the territory of Salvador.
- 20c. Branches of coffee flowers, forming a wreath.
- 25c grey. View of the ruins and volcano of Izalco, from a picture by Juan Jose Lainez.
- 70c rose. Reproduction of the painting by the artist Maso, in which Christopher Columbus explains his plans and theories to the Dominican monks.

It is stated that Christopher Columbus appears in the new issue at the request of the Pan-American Postal Congress at Buenos Aires.—Stamp Collecting.

FIVE-YEAR HONOR CLUB.

S. E. Moisant, Kankakee, Ill.
Dr. C. W. Hennen, Chicago, Ill.
Dr. L. S. Hapgood, Cambridge, Mass.

In order to make sure that he will not be dunned for his subscription in the immediate future Shirley E. Moisant of Kankakee, Ill., sends us $5 for five years renewal of subscription. Mr. Moisant will be remembered as an oldtime advertiser in years gone by and a real philatelist. We add his name to our list with pleasure.

Through our Chicago office we have received an application for membership in our Honor Club from Dr. C. W. Hennen, secretary of the Chicago Philatelic Society. Dr. Hennen while actively practising as a physician has also established a specialized stamp business, giving almost exclusive attention to the stamps of Holland and Colonies. His interest in philately is indicated from the fact that he has been for many years secretary of the Chicago Society.

Just as we go to press the application of Dr. L. S. Hapgood is received, and we are very glad to enter him as a member of our Honor Club. Dr. Hapgood is located at 6 Garden St., Cambridge, Mass., and his interest in philately has extended over a long period.

DETROIT AWAITS YOUR PRESENCE.

By HERMAN W. BOERS.

All roads and waterways lead to dynamic Detroit for the 39th Annual Convention of the American Philatelic Society to be held here August 12, 13, 14 at Statler Hotel. Ever since last fall the committee of arrangements have been working for its success and everything is being done to make it the banner meeting.

There is going to be something doing and many surprises to attending ones, so we invite you to spend your vacation in Detroit, the fourth city of America with a population of over one million. Here you will meet again the old guard that usually attend, making new friends and meeting those you have had much correspondence with. These incidents will long be remembered after the convention. As a stamp centre it needs no introduction. The new year book of the A. P. S. shows that Detroit ranks third in membership list. Michigan has 135 members of which Detroit has 76.

There are many members who have fine collections, many specializing in United States, others in Revenues, covers, cancellations and foreign issues. Many of these will be on exhibition on Monday night at the Statler.

Last A. P. S. Convention held here in 1890 was the Silver Jubilee with many prominent collectors in attendance. H. M. Mudge was then President. Detroit Philatelic Society consisted of 43 members. Since then many have passed away to the great beyond, others moved away. There are still about 20 of the original left. Amongst the oldest is Brigadier-General C. A. Coolidge, his present number is 64, but originally in the twenties, before the A. P. S. was re-organized. It was through his effort that this city was put on the stamp map (thanks to him). By the way, the General was 80 years old on July 19.

There should be a good attendance at the Convention, as this city is centrally located, easily reached by rail or water. Those who wish to motor here will find splendid roads in Michigan. In a glance at the streets here one can see autos from every state in the Union, Canada and frequently Alaska. Fifty million dollars has been voted by the state for construction of good roads.

Many interesting side trips can be made here covering anywhere from 10 to 50 miles. One of the most beautiful is along the Lake Shores. Detroit is today recognized as one of the interesting cities of North America to visit. No delegations from foreign governments would think of visiting the United States without making Detroit the principal city on their tour.

Some interesting things here:—
It has the largest office building in the world, General Motors Building, located at West Grand Boulevard and 2nd Ave., covering an area of 30 acres, costing 20 million dollars, it accommodates 6,000 tenants.

The new Masonic Temple, corner Temple and Second Ave., is the largest and most expensive Masonic Temple in the world, costing over 4 million dollars, covering a space 190x350 feet, is 207 feet high. It is the home of 32 Masonic bodies. (If a Mason, visit this).

Beautiful Michigan Central Terminal Station, one of the finest in the country, an imposing structure costing millions of dollars. The tunnel under Detroit river connecting with Canada is 2.6 miles in length, including its approaches. It consists of two steel and concrete tubes 21½ feet in diameter. The Canadian and American entrance of the tube, together with the terminals, cost in the neighborhood of 18 millions.

Detroit New Main Public Library, located at Kirby-Woodward, about a 10 minute ride from downtown, occupying a square block; a most beautiful structure costing over three million dollars. It ranks with any in the country. Opposite this there is being erected the new Institute of Art at a cost of several million dollars. A new 23-story Cadillac Hotel, one of the largest in the country, is now under construction.

Henry Ford Hospital, located on West Grand Boulevard and Hamilton. One of the finest in the country. It was taken over by the Government during the war, was U. S. Hospital No. 36. Thousands of soldiers were cared for.

There are many other interesting places here too numerous to mention. Just a glance of the literature that's to be sent out by the Convention Committee will give you some idea of Detroit the Dynamic, the wonder city of the world.

Belle Isle Park—this famous island owned by the people of Detroit, has no equal in the world for beauty and refined, attractive, educational features. It is free to all. It covers 200 acres, reached by ferry boats which leave every 15 minutes. Those who do not care for the ride can reach there by way of Jefferson Ave. car or motor busses, going as far as the Boulevard, here one crosses over the new Belle Isle Bridge, a handsome structure. Many special features are on the island, including an aquarium, with all species of fresh and salt water fish, a beautiful horticultural building with plant life gathered from the four corners of the world; one of the best zoological gardens of America is here, fine bathing beach, public bath house, yacht and boat club, beautiful casinos, miles of canals for boating, a magnificent boulevard for motorists, a five and a half mile shore drive, band concerts and other attractions. By all means see this island.

Many today are under the impression that Detroit makes only automobiles. It

I have a used copy of the 1c Pan American with inverted center. It is a fine appearing copy and is a much scarcer stamp used than unused.

PRICE $65.00

A cash order will not buy this stamp. I want to submit it on approval and I ask those interested to write me. Please include reference—your bank and two stamp dealers preferred.

So that the man out west may have equal chance at first look with the man in the east. I will place each request in a blank envelope and, on August 15th, I will number the envelopes after mixing them. No. 1 will see the stamp first and so on until it is sold.

Visit to Canada—If you have never been out of the U. S., take a car to foot of Woodward Ave., from there the ferry crosses the Detroit river to Windsor, Ont., King George's Domain. Here you can buy souvenir postals and send them to your friends at home. Many trinkets are on sale here that you can remember the trip by. Returning, you can have a fine view of Detroit's skyline and river front, and it costs but a jitney each way. Detroit has plenty of hotels that can take care of visitors, all within a short distance from the Statler.

Detroit's Marine P. O. which is operated as part of the postal system of the Post Office was designed to afford vessel owners, captains and vessel crews, as nearly as practicable the advantages that are used by persons on land. It is the only service of its kind in the world. The first year service in 1895, 47,000 pieces of mail were handled to and from passing boats. In the past year it has increased to about 2 million pieces, to and from boats passing the Detroit river. There are more than 650 boats being served during the season of navigation, about 28,000 deliveries were made during the past season. It is estimated that this service supplies a floating population of 25,000 people. As an evidence of skill, none of these government specialists have had any serious accident, and no loss of life. This station is located at the foot of 3rd Street, and well worth seeing.

CONVENTION PROGRAMME.

Monday, August 11, 8 P. M.

A reception for the guests and an exhibition of stamps by members of Detroit Societies, consisting of specialized collections.

Tuesday, August 12, 9.30 A. M.

Opening business session.
1.30 P. M.
Boat ride to Bois Blanc. A delightful trip on the Detroit river to the mouth of Lake Erie, about 20 miles. This is on the Canadian side, returning about 6.30 P. M., in time for lunch and the auction sale. This sale at 8.15 will be conducted by Mr. Voorhees of Chicago. It will contain some 500 lots. At the same time there will be a special entertainment for the ladies attending the meet.

Wednesday, August 13.

A. M. Regular business session.
At 1.30 P. M. an automobile ride to the principal places of interest of the city. Belle Isle Park, Grosse Pointe and the Ford Factory, showing how autos are made.

7.30 P. M. Dealers' and Traders' Night is on the programme; bring along your duplicates, change them for real money, there will be a lot of buyers there or exchangers. For the ladies, another special entertainment will be given.

Thursday, August 14.

A. M. Business session.
Afternoon is a free for all, go as you please, sort of "learn to know each other more," tell your stamp experience to the other fellow. Go shopping, see Detroit's big stores.

5.30 P. M. The charter members are going to have a reception, the older members should attend this meeting; interesting things may be brought regarding early days of collecting and philatelic matters. Meet at Statler Hotel.

7 P. M. comes the banquet, plenty of good things for the inner man. Prominent speakers will talk on matters of interest to all collectors.

The following members were selected as chairmen of Convention Committees: Dr. Warren L. Babcock, Chairman; Dr. Preston H. Hoskins, Secretary; Hotel and Banquet, Henry M. Look; Printing and Programme, H. J. Kaufmann; Finance, J. E. Scott; Registration, L. A. White; Publicity, Herman W. Boers; Entertainments, A. C. Hutchinson; Ladies, J. E. Scott; Auction and Bourse, Dr. W. L. Babcock; Exhibition, Fred Schmalzriedt.

A. P. S. CONVENTION AT DETROIT.

If it is your intention to attend the Detroit convention of the A. P. S., send in your name at once. The following plan to be present:—

H. W. MacLaren, Cleveland, O.
W. H. Barnum, Cleveland, O.
W. J. Zink, Cleveland, O.
W. G. Whittaker, Cleveland, O.
Dr. J. N. Schneider, Cleveland, O.
R. F. Molitor, Cleveland, O.
F. S. Cramer, Cleveland, O.
F. W. Grant, Cleveland, O.
Fernald Hutchins, Boston, Mass.
H. C. Crowell, Cleveland, Ohio.
Trafton C. Smith, Saginaw, Mich.
Joseph Demers, Saginaw, Mich.
John J. Spencer, Saginaw, Mich.
J. Harold Blackney, Saginaw, Mich.
W. G. Windhurst, Marion, Ohio.
L. A. Davenport, Toronto, Canada.

THANKS.

We take this method of thanking those who were kind enough to send us examples of the opening flight of the transcontinental air mail and those covers that were sent us are certainly interesting memorials on first day's service. We wish each reader who had the kindness to remember us in this way to know that we appreciate his devotion, and it is a satisfaction to record that among the covers were several from esteemed contemporaries, namely, the Stamp Collector's Magazine of New York City, and the Pan American Collector's Journal of San Francisco, California. We make our acknowledgments to Mr. Bach in the east and Mr. Urquhart in the west, co-workers in the philatelic journalistic field, not to mention the others who favored us.

BANK NOTE COVERS
Twelve and Thirteen Cent Rates

Three nice little finds of foreign and registered letters used between 1873 and 1883 yielded enough covers with combinations to make the 12c and 13c rates to permit this offer. Most of the covers carry the registered rate of a 10c and 3c; the 10s being about equally divided between Continental, American and the Re-engraved series. There are some showing the new 12c registered rate, combining 10c re-engraved with the then new 2c red-brown. Many of these are from small towns in the South and West, and are pen cancelled. These are priced in the last column.

BIRTHDAY OF GEN. C. A. COOLIDGE.

On Saturday, July 19, Gen. C. A. Coolidge of Detroit celebrated his 80th birthday, and he will certainly receive greetings from a very wide circle of friends and acquaintances. The WEEKLY and its entire mailing list congratulates our honored philatelist with the length of years accorded him and we wish him many happy returns of the day.

Those who attend the Detroit convention of the A. P. S. will find the General active in promoting the welfare and comfort of the attending delegates. His love for philately is sincere and a few words about his life may not be amiss.

At the age of 18 he enlisted in the 16th U. S. Infantry and served throughout the Civil War.

In 1864 he was promoted to lieutenant of the Seventh Infantry and while a member of this company was wounded in the Battle of the Big Hole, Montana, against the Nez Percés Indians.

He became captain of the Seventh in 1877 and it was at this time he started his first collection, a "general" collection (no harm intended).

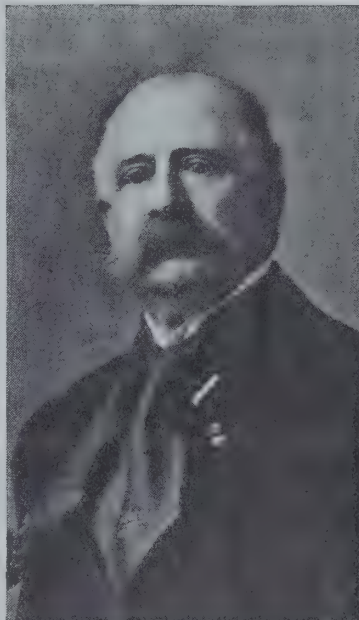

He enlisted in the A. P. S. on its organization and was an enthusiastic collector until 1894 when he disposed of his first collection.

Gen. Coolidge served in the Philippine campaign and in the Boxer campaign, about whose stamps he wrote articles in the WEEKLY. He was made Colonel in 1901 and Brigadier General in 1902, being retired in August of that year.

After his military ambition had been realized he once more turned his attention to stamp collecting and joined the San Francisco Society in 1903.

The earthquake, however, caused the General to retreat for the first time in his life and he moved to Detroit, "Where Life is Worth Living."

His efforts and those of Mr. Alan R. Fernald, the Detroit Society was formed and the General became its first president. It is such men as Gen. Coolidge that make philately world while and it's a treat to see the pleasure he takes in adding a well centered specimen to his collection of U. S. and colonies.

HARRIS & CO.'S JOURNAL.

The current number of the H. E. Harris & Company's Bi-Monthly Journal for July and August is a fine product. It appeared promptly July 1 and consists of no fewer than 36 pages with cover. As a literary feature it has a story of philatelic adventure by Stephen F. Harris entitled "Red Ink Melodrama." The strong feature of the publication is the well displayed Harrisco offerings scattered freely throughout its pages. There are single stamps at wholesale, packets of all kinds, and special combinations that must prove of interest to both dealer and collector. Two pages are given over to half-tones picturing the wholesale approval department with its force of eight employees. A wide range of philatelic supplies is also included in the firm's offerings. The magazine may be had for the asking upon application to the firm at 161 Massachusetts Ave., Boston, Mass.

THE BYRON STAMPS.

By GEO. S. MAVROCORDATO, Therapia, Turkey.

On the centenary of the death of Lord Byron, the Greek Government issued two commemorative stamps, one of two drachmes and the other of eighty leptas. The former one is a reproduction of an oil picture painted in London in 1861, by the Greek painter, Th. P. Vryzakis, and now in the possession of Mr. Tsouderos, Minister of Economy in Greece. It represents the landing of the great philhellene poet at Missolonghi, on the 7th Jan., 1824.

Besides Lord Byron, one distinguishes in the picture several leading Greeks in their national costume, besides priests, soldiers and the great Greek statesman, Mavrocordato. It is printed in black with a violet border.

The 80 leptas is blue, a portrait of the poet taken from a picture by the English artist, Phillips, and adapted by the Greek painter, N. Lytras.

By order of the Minister of Posts and Telegraphs, five millions of each value were issued. They will be in circulation for four months beginning from the 16th April.

They are engraved by the firm of Bradbury Wilkinson & Co., Ltd., in London, who also are the engravers of the Greek bank notes.

GALLANT'S VACATION PACKET

On sale only during the months of July and August. To tell you anything about the Vacation Packets would be only a waste of time. I am the only one who has started to sell Vacation Packets during the vacation months. Many others have tried to sell Vacation Packets, yes, they did, but they only got one order and everyone who has ordered an imitation vacation packet got fooled. It's an old story, you cannot fool the people all the time. To make a packet with a catalog of $10.00 or $12.00 and putting all kinds of trash in, using reprints or high catalogued stamps with bar cancellation or figuring old catalog prices, anyone can sell a catalog value from $10.00 to $12.00 for $1.50, but Gallant's Vacation packets are not made this way, every stamp is genuine, either used or unused, and the total catalog of the 100 all different stamps runs from $12.00 to $15.00. Then sooner you order your Vacation packet, then better stamps can be expected. I have sold during the last six years not 100, not 1000, but over 5000 Vacation Packets and this year I can promise that everyone will be more than pleased. You will find stamps catalog $2.00 each and higher, $1.00, 60c, 50c, 40c, 30c, 25c, 20c, 15c, 10c, 8c, 6c, 5c, 4c, 3c, and in every packet only ten stamps at 2c catalog will be found.

Gallant's Vacation Packet on sale only once a year during the months of July and August. 100 all diff. stamps catalog from $12.00 to $15.00 for $1.55. [51]

NEWS GLEANINGS.

—In a recent issue of the Chicago Journal an editorial appeared with the heading, "Old and New Mail-Carrying," from which we take the following quotation as of interest to collectors:

"Really cheap postage began with the penny black' in England. A firm of stationers agreed to produce them for eight pence a thousand. The first drawing of a 'queen's head' was made by William Wyon, an artist, and the design was completed by Henry Corbould. The engraving of the original steel die was undertaken by Frederick Heath, who was paid fifty guineas for his work.

There are industrious stamp collectors who have in their possession first-hand records of mail-carrying developments in all parts of the world. Some of the earlier postage stamps are now almost priceless."

—We imagine that all the returns are in in the discussion on the question of special stamp, and once more we wish to thank those who have favored us with their views on the subject and to say that the battle has been well fought to a draw.

—The July number of the Collectors Club Philatelist contains as its leading article a biographical sketch of Wm. R. Ricketts by Dr. J. Brace Chittenden, accompanied by a portrait of Mr. Ricketts, that is of unusual interest. Mr. Ricketts occupies a distinctive and honorable place in American philately and it is doubtful whether collectors generally know of the magnitude of Mr. Ricketts' studies, particularly in the field of indexing philatelic literature. Abroad Mr. Ricketts is acclaimed, deservedly, as one of America's foremost philatelists, and an appreciation of his work is generally held there. In the same issue Mr. Ricketts contributes some interesting notes on the better pieces in his library, and the list of noteworthy items is certainly a revelation of the exhaustive manner in which Mr. Ricketts covers, particularly, the field of early literature. The further contents of this impressive quarterly are such as to commend themselves to the serious collector, and it is apparent that the Collectors Club is an institution that is most fittingly represented by its official journal.

—Detroit is prepared to entertain the delegates to the coming convention, and the president has named August 12, 1924, 10 A. M., as the time for the opening session. The familiar name of P. M. Wolsieffer is supplanted by that of Eugene Klein as chairman of the committee on credentials in view of Mr. Wolsieffer's candidacy for the presidency. The entertainment committee has presented a program that seems to be in keeping and visitors are justified in their anticipations of a pleasant time at the convention of the American Philatelic Society.

—The following quotation is taken from a letter that we received recently on the subject of the critical attitude of some collectors, as our correspondent has it: "It seems to me that collectors instead of concerning themselves so much with the proper classification of stamps in their collectibility could give more time to considering stamps that appeal to them and let the others go by default. I think that the suggestion of collecting according to chronology, making divisions according to the years, would eliminate the question of speculative stamps on one hand and of giving the greatest range on the other. The stamp is not to be regarded as something so highly sacred that it will be placed in a niche so far as governments are concerned. Collectors who give any thought to the suggestion certainly agree that such has been the case for a good many years. I doubt whether the old dogs will ever be taught new tricks, but collectors should worry as those who want to collect along formal lines can do so, and those that are more liberal in their exactions likewise have plenty of material from which to make a selection." Our correspondent is rather severe, as we doubt whether it would be wise to attempt to check any reasonable criticism of stamp conditions even though they are within our power or not to change or remedy. Oftentimes a discussion brings out interesting angles, and it is well worth following so long as it is conducted along approved lines.

—The following inquiry has come to us, and we trust that there would be demand enough for sheets of the kind to make it worth the while of some manufacturer to produce them for the benefit of intending exhibitors. A reader asks: "Is there any standard size of heavy sheet with suitable border ruled, with quadrille background that may be utilized by those who wish to make exhibits of stamps in various places, such as shop windows and as wall pictures? I doubt whether there is anything of the kind, but if you know of anything that is suited for the purpose, I should like to know." We do not believe that anything of the kind is on the market, but we can understand how it would be a great convenience for exhibitors to have the sheets at hand.

Dr. L. B. Willey, Middletown, Conn.
Jas. Lewis Howe, Lexington, Va.

We are indebted to Dr. L. B. Willey, Middletown, Conn., for his application for membership in our Five Year Honor Club, accompanied by a remittance of $5. After watching the wrappers for some weeks to keep track of his expiration number, Dr. Willey has come to the conclusion that he will take no chances for any further worry in this direction.

Our longtime friend and correspondent, Prof. Jas. Lewis Howe, of Lexington, Va., enters the Honor Club with this number of the WEEKLY. Prof. Howe is connected with the Department of Chemistry at the Washington and Lee University. He is keenly interested in all that concerns philately and we count it an honor and privilege to add his name to the long list of those who are members of our Five Year Renewal Club.

In an August issue we shall publish a complete roster of the members of our Honor Club and if you are not now a member we shall be very glad to receive your application. We shall be pleased to add your testimonial to the value of the WEEKLY to the great number who have

EDITORIAL.

The opening of the transcontinental air mail service was an event that attracted great public attention, and the newspapers gave much space to the story of the first flight covering it by picture as well as by columns of text. The fact that the first flight was a successful one added to the interest shown by the public, and collectors, of course, took advantage of the opportunity to secure the first trip covers. In Chicago, for instance, there were several special red, white and blue mail boxes in the downtown district that were for air mail matter only, and in the general post-office there was a chute for the reception of matter for the first flight exclusively. The story of the installation of this new service, which is to be a permanent one, has been well told, and it is only necessary to speak of the philatelic phase of it here. In the large cities along the route letters that had come from local and outside points were taken on board, and at the different air mail fields celebrations were participated in by business men and others interested in the progress marked by the establishing of permanent service from coast to coast. A variety of markings were used on the first flight letters, and we assume that the special cancellations, showing the various air mail fields, will be in demand although covers without them but bearing the rubber stamped inscription in four lines: "Via air mail—On first trip of through schedule—involving night flights on Transcontinental Air Mail Route," will be acceptable. Letters sent from Chicago as well as from other points were stamped with the familiar general U. S. air mail stamp showing the two wings. Philatelists certainly added to the tolls of the department through their liberal patronage of this first thirty-four hour coast-to-coast trip, and they received in return souvenirs more or less satisfactory to them. In a practical way it is a comfort for all of us to feel that we are so closely in touch by air mail with the cities on the long route.

We have received from Mr. Charles Horn of Monroeville, Ohio, a picture taken from a newspaper of the section showing the ruins of a home at Lorain, Ohio, and beneath this graphic portrayal of a scene of wreckage are the following lines: "While grown-ups in Lorain were searching the ruins of their homes for valuables, two children spent yesterday afternoon hunting for what was most precious to them. Virginia Lenk lived next door to James Hageman's house. She and James were playing there when the tornado struck the Hageman home at 1134 Fifth St., and wrecked it. Today they searched for hours, then quit victorious. Each had found his treasure! Virginia had recovered her doll and James was happy with his much prized stamp book." The picture shows James eagerly gazing at the stamps in what seems to be a real stamp album.

An echo of the sale of the Rhodesian remainders is heard from Johannesburg, South Africa, where much concern naturally is shown at this portentous transaction. We assume that the protest is one that proceeds through a conviction that the best interests of philately are not conserved by the method of distributing the stamps, and in order that both sides of the question may be presented squarely before readers, we quote the following communication from the Hon. Secretary of the Johannesburg United Philatelic Society, dated June 4, 1924: "I have been instructed by my Committee to write to you with regard to the disposal of Rhodesian remainders to Messrs. Stanley Gibbons Ltd., by the British South Africa Company, and shall be glad if you will publish this letter in your widely read paper. Collectors in South Africa protest in the strongest possible terms against the method adopted in cancelling these remainders with the original post cancelling stamps. Practically all the old post-cancelling stamps in Rhodesia have been collected and antedated to coincide with the date of issue—thus perpetrating a fraud on Collectors, as genuinely postally used specimens cannot now be detected from those cancelled in London. Messrs. Stanley Gibbons' statement of the transaction is not at all satisfactory. Surely if they had the interests of Collectors at heart, and seeing that the stamps had to be sold, a distinguishing cancellation could have been used for the purpose, as was done in the cases of Labuan, North Borneo and St. Helena. Then again, there are many varieties of perforation, some of which are not even mentioned in Gibbons' statement, now being offered to Collectors at fabulous prices. We fail to see how these can ever rank as postage stamps, as none were ever sold in any post-office in Rhodesia. Surely such scraps of paper as the so-called one-pound error of colour could have been relegated to the dust-bin, which is a fitting receptacle for them. The whole transaction, to our mind, is the biggest blot in the history of stamp collecting, and has done the hobby irreparable harm. The question now arises—what is going to be the ultimate fate of all the old plates used in the printing of the stamps of this new 'Seebeckized' Country? Are they also going to be offered to the highest bidder? It is to be hoped that some steps will be taken by philatelists throughout the British Empire to prevent such a sale. If not, we may expect a reprinting of all issues. We understand that the Rhodesian Philatelic Society attempted some years ago to secure the plates for the Bulawayo Museum, but without success. Could not steps be taken to persuade the B.S.A. Company to hand over these plates, duly defaced to the Rhodesian Society or the Rhodesia Museum in Bulawayo?" Looking at this problem as presented by the wholesaling of these stamps to a dealer, it would seem that the weakness that was developed was directly chargeable to the British South Africa Company in seeking a market for the stamps that they were bent upon selling. If the company had taken a high ethical stand the thought of marketing the stamps would not have been acted upon, at least, without proper restrictions in order that the remainders thus disposed of could be identified. It would be a happy finale of the case if the B.S.A. Company could be induced to present the plates to the stamp society or museum as suggested, but it would seem that much pressure would have to be brought to bear on the company which insisted upon the dubious transaction to make it to take such a course.

We have been very much interested in Dr. Botelho's work on philatelic instruction and also upon the comments of Mr. Rich on the first chapter of The Philatelic Instructor as contributed to the issue of June 23. We are pleased that the value of Dr. Botelho's treatises is generally seen, and we certainly wish to commend the interest that men of standing of these two show in this serial, if somewhat elementary work. Especially do we feel a sense of gratitude to Dr. Botelho for preparing the series of articles which we know was written in response to our wish expressed editorially for material from which a philatelist, who is willing to speak on occasion about the attractions of collecting could draw for presenting the theoretic and practical phases of our pursuit to an audience. Consequently, the publication in our paper of matter of the kind is a guide to those who are already philatelists but not necessarily equipped with information to talk comprehensively and use a proper sense of perspective to present collectors. The idea is to present elements that are of unacknowledged kind order that they may be assimilated by the outsiders to whom the appeal must be made. Dr. Rich makes the ingenious argument that "cultivation of orderliness continuity" does not necessarily follow the exercise of the qualities named in the stamp collection, in their application to outside details, but it is to say that the capacity for orderliness in one line of activity is possibly the beginning of a habit of carefulness may extend to other considerations, as dress, business, accounts and so on. By the same token the quality of perseverance that may be said to be required to reach a premeditated goal in stamp collecting involves the bringing into play of stick-to-it-iveness, a synonym for continuity, which, it is not reasonable to say, may extend to other lines of endeavor or interest. Dr. Botelwork certainly develops the subject of "it is intended to expand, i. e., the continuation in attractive form of the thing side of our pursuit which may be absorbed by those who wish to store and thoughts that loan themselves effectively to words before the audience of philatelists; and from indications are apparent, it is evident that the message that he is conveying are not ignored. We know of several readers to whom they have already provided material for the inspirational philatelic talk. The suggestion of Dr. Rich that certain philatelic studies, such as, Education and Philatelic Review, be asked to publish the articles is a good one, because of the admitted constructive value of these philatelic studies and of the refreshing quality that they possess as well.

MOST COSTLY MAIL ROUTE.

from Mr. C. F. Adams, Chicago, we have received an account of the longest and most costly mail route in the world which recently has had some celebrity in our own country in the state of Utah. A number of illustrations accompany this interesting newspaper item, and we take the liberty of making the following quotations from it: "Picture if you can a region into which road builders have not yet penetrated, a region dotted with small cities housing thousands of prosperous American farmers, and then visualize conditions which must necessarily be met by the government in its operation of what is believed to be the longest and most expensive star mail route in the world. Such a route furnishes the chief means of transportation and practically the only means of communication during the winter for the Uinta basin country in the northeast corner of Utah bordering on Colorado. This route is 100 miles long and traverses mountain peaks that at one point reach an altitude of 10,000 feet. No computation is available of the cost of transporting mail over the costliest of all routes, but a postal official conversant with the situation will tell you that every year's operation puts a string of red ink figures on the federal ledger at Washington to the tune of several hundred per cent in excess of the revenue derived.

THE MAGYAR CROWD 102 BLOCKS OF $2.04

This is the finest block packet we have seen in many a long day. Its completeness is a strong point in its favor. There is a block of every Hungarian stamp from No. 127 to 222. Five sets complete in blocks of four! Just think of it, we include the photos of Captain Kidd's five piratical descendants. Why, MAN, this lot of BLOCKS catalogs more than $16.00 and any fellow who doesn't realize that 102 vars. BLOCKS OF FOUR of any country is a bargain ought to have the Piker Trophy (in imitation platinum finish) handed to him on a platter made of a counterfeit 3c piece. It doesn't make any difference as to your political affiliations and ambitions, you should appreciate the Hungarian "DIRT FARMERS" on the small denominations and the Parliament Buildings on the large ones. This indicates that the Hungarians spend a little of their time farming and most of it in Parliament! There is a "CROWD" of BLOCKS awaiting your attention--so order this new "M.C." today.

THE MARK CLIMAX 102 VARS. OF MINT GERMAN BLOCKS $2.04

While we are about it, we will offer you that famous German block "M.C." with 80% of the stamps in denominations 5000Mks to 50,000,000,000Mks. Almost the "whole works" and some of the scarcest provisionals are included.

MUCH MORE CLUTTER 60 FINE MINT DANZIG BLOCKS $2.04

This is the nightingale's negligee all the way from the 5pf to the 500,000,000Mk and the only reason we don't go higher is the fact that the P. M. G. had cold feet and didn't do his stuff on the Billion values. 60 Different Blox $2.04.

THE MIGHTY CONVENTION 102 VARIOUS MINT BLOCKS $2.04

With all this talk about "Third Parties" we are launching a FOURTH Party which will sweep the country. The Platform: Absolutely non-duplicating from the above three parties. Nominees, For President: George Gordon, Lord Byron; For Vice-President, Copernicus of Poland. There are a number of Party managers, office seekers and camp followers too numerous to mention. Vote today and we will tell you why--next week. We promise to amply reward all supporters.

When the above "hot air" has cooled, you will note that we offer 102 various blocks of four for $2.04. The contents is entirely different from that of the other three blocks "M.C.'s" above. The BYRON COMMEMORATIVE set is included and other nice sets. ALL MINT and ALL FINE. This is our big SUMMER SPECIAL.

THE MARVELOUS CULMINATION 300 VARIETIES $1.02

Bosnia, Czechoslovakia, Jugo Slavia, Nicaragua, Roumania, etc. These are the countries most strongly represented in the new edition. Common German, Austrian and Polish items are absent. HIGH VALUES & PROVISIONALS, a very high percentage of used stamps. Can any offering be more attractive?

THE MAGIC COMMEMORATION 20 COMMEMORATIVE PRECANCELS $1.02

Oh, yes, we can deliver the goods. 20 fine Commemorative Precancels including Hardings and they are all nice. 1c, 2c & 5c values and now what more can you ask? No! you have NOT got them all and you certainly would better HURRY. This is a wonderful bargain in Commemorative Precancels and few dealers can equal it if they wanted to.

Summer Address-- 52 PROSPECT STREET, WHITE PLAINS, N. Y.
July and August

Though there are 233,000,000 miles of railroad in the United States, so far not a single mile of it enters this highly productive valley. Yet within this great garden spot, scooped out of mountains, there live more than 5000 persons in about 30 communities, four of which are of sufficient size to have presidential post-offices. Vernal, largest of the towns, is also the terminus of the long mail route, the other end being at Price, terminal of the Denver & Rio Grande Western Railroad, 125 miles to the south and west.

Being modern and living in much the same manner as other prosperous Americans, these 5000 persons need not only food, clothing and other customary necessities of life, but also magazines, phonograph records, and their favorite daily newspaper. In the absence of a railroad or electric line, it is up to the Government to deliver. And it does.

Over mountains and through valleys, equipped with a fleet of more than 30 of the speediest motor trucks, the post-office department keeps mail moving regularly and efficiently in both directions, day in and day out, summer and winter.

The Uinta basin today exchanges honey, wool, alfalfa seed and other commodities from the land for shoes and Paris fashions--at the Government's expense. Ranchers sit beside their fire-sides in midwinter reading the late news and eating fresh dainties from California--while the Government pays the freight."

FIRST TRIP CANCELLATIONS.

Bernard Frank of San Francisco very kindly sends in his renewal of subscription by the first trip of the through schedule involving night flying on the transcontinental airmail route.

We are especially indebted to J. A. Urquhart for special courtesies extended. All three of our offices received covers from Mr. Urquhart and they show quite a variety in markings. A cancellation of ordinary character is used, but on each envelope may be found the following device:--

VIA AIR MAIL.
On first trip of through schedule involving night flying on Trans-Continental Air Mail Route.

The covers from San Francisco all seem to carry the above marking, but one mailed from Cheyenne has in addition a design consisting of the letters U. S. surrounded by two circles, the space between containing the words "Via Air Mail." The familiar two wings are a part of the design. At this writing we have not seen the markings used on mail despatched subsequent to July 1.

The Midwest Stamp Co. sends us a July 1 air mail cover from Kansas City, Mo., but it bears neither distinctive marking nor date of local office receipt. Evidently a wide range of condition exists as regards these covers.

SUBSCRIPTION RENEWALS.

Some of our subscribers need to know our rule regarding discontinuances. We discontinue all subscriptions in arrears promptly the second issue of each month. This means that your subscription should be renewed prior to expiration. The expiration number can be ascertained by consulting your wrapper. No free copies of the WEEKLY are sent out and this rule is as fixed as the law! of the M. and P. Our older subscribers understand our rule and the newer subscribers should get acquainted with it.

TRANSCONTINENTAL AIRMAIL COVERS

Whether you are a collector of airmail covers or not, you will possibly be interested in receiving a cover from this epochal event. I offer one showing the postmark clearly used from San Francisco at $1.50, or one from New York at the same figure.

I also offer, subject to prior sale, one set and one set only, consisting of 210 covers all different, mailed from each of the fifteen airmail stations to each of the other stations. The postage in every case is paid by the proper amount of new airmail stamps. I doubt whether another set is in existence. Price on application.

I can also furnish one of the transcontinental airmail covers, used during the experimental flight in August, 1923, showing the New York and San Francisco postmark at $10.00. These varieties are scarce.

LOCAL SHANGHAI OVERPRINTS,

SCOTT'S NOS. 3298-99.

I offer these two varieties, a complete set, consisting of the 1c green engraved and the 2c carmine surface print, overprinted locally at $1.25 for the two stamps, or blocks of each at $5.00. Plate number blocks can also be furnished—price on application. If you are interested in straight edge copies, I can furnish these at 25c each, or 50c for the two.

United States.Transcontinental Airmail Cancellations.

Since my last notes, I have received letters mailed at the several stations from New York to San Francisco, cancelled on the first day, and it is interesting to note how each postmaster postmarked communications travelling via the air route. The Department had furnished each of the fifteen stations with a rubber stamp measuring $2\frac{3}{4} \times 15/16$ reading in four lines within a rectangle "Via Air Mail—on first trip of through schedule involving night flying on Transcontinental Air Mail Route," and this was used on July 1st, the first day. Some of the stations printed this in red—some in blue—some in purple, and others in black. If the first impression was not clear, quite often a second impression was used. In most of the larger cities the hand stamp cancellation was used to cancel the stamp while several of the towns, such as Cheyenne, Rawlins, Elko, Reno, San Francisco and Bryan used the electric cancelling machines. Most of the cities used a further mark applied by rubber stamp, consisting of the air mail insignia, with wings. The color of this marking, I have found in every case to be the same as the rectangular mark.

North Platte, Nebraska, used a special field cancellation, reading within a circle, "Air Mail Field. North Platte, Nebr.—Jul 2 1924 3 A. M." They also used a special marking consisting of two wings and between these in two lines, "Via Aeroplane Mail."

Rock Springs also used a similar field mark and those that I have seen were applied in black. Some of the stations back stamped the envelopes whereas the bigger stations generally failed to do this unless the letter, was sent via Special Delivery.

I have further found that where letters were mailed from other cities than those on the route, that no special designating postmark was applied. I found this to be the case in an air mail letter kindly sent me by Mr. H. A. Thatcher from Sioux City, and also one from Mr. E. J. Newcomer of Yakima, Washington. I also wish to thank Mr. J. H. Brackett, Mr. R. H. Mowen and Mr. J. William Harmon for first day air mail covers.

I have further found that in returning the covers sent to the several stations that one of the postmasters failed to send me some of my covers, and sent me through error covers addressed to others. If any of our kind readers have received any of these covers addressed to me personally, I would thank them to be so good as to let me know.

HAWKEYE STAMP CO., Cedar Rapids

While on the subject of the air mail and the air mail stamps, it will be noted that the Collectors Club Philatelist, July, 1924, on page 90, endeavors to correct an error in their article relating first flights, which appeared in the April edition. In April, they stated that the 24c stamp was placed on sale on the afternoon of August 21st, too late to sold that day. They now say "In the interest of strict accuracy, we wish to state that these stamps were placed on sale the beginning of the afternoon of that date, but no one called for them before the close of the day." If they want to be strictly accurate, they will again correct this supposed correction, for the stamps were purchased by several people. I, personally, purchased several hundred and mailed possibly fifty on this first day. I know of at least a dozen others who likewise obtained these stamps the date of issue.

Overprinted Provisional Envelopes.

Mr. J. M. Bartels has recently shown me a number of oddities in the way of provisional surcharged envelopes with St. Louis overprint, which were without doubt made strictly to order. This consisted of the 2c on 5c oval die, the on 4c oval die, the two types, that is, type II and type III, both on the same 3c blue envelope. There were numerous other varieties, which I do not offhand recall. I do remember that the party in question kindly made the 2c on 2c amber, which has been the missing error heretofore.

While in Washington recently, I inquired to learn as to whether these overprinting dies had been returned, and find that all but three were received in Washington, and one of the three still out is in St. Louis, so that it is quite possible that these have recently been manufactured.

Rotary Print Stamps in Sheets.

The precancelling of stamps from the rotary press at the Bureau is meeting with such success, and there is such saving to the Department, that a 5 a 10c stamp, perforated 10, from the rotary press may be expected in short order. These no doubt will be followed by one or two other varieties, and it is quite likely that stamps without cancellation will be prepared for general use providing experiments for breaking the gum turn out satisfactorily.

Norwegian Commemorative Issue.

I am informed by the Department that during the last days of Congress, a bill was passed which has since been signed by the President, authorizing the issue next year of commemorative stamps to commemorate the landing of the Norwegians. I understand there will be two stamps, possibly a 1c and 2c, and they may later be increased to include a 5c. It seems that the issue was desired by Senators and Representatives from the northwestern states with large Norwegian populations. If the English and the French and the Germans and the Slavs, and the others who have political backing and votes get busy, we may have quite a few oddities. Surely the Irish deserve a stamp and if all of these events are of sufficient importance to warrant an issue, why should not philately have a stamp for its 1926 International Philatelic Exhibition? I am one of these poor deluded persons, who feel that every issue adds new recruits, for I can recall that it was the odd shape and interesting Columbian issue of 1893, that pulled me into the fold.

"ROUTE OF NEW AIR MAIL LINE FOR THE ACROSS NATION SERVICE."

The Black Area Marks the Region Over Which the Mail Pilots Will Fly by Night on Both Eastbound and Westbound Trips

Pioneer work of the Army and Navy in aerial exploits, capped by the brilliant feat of Lieutenant Maughan in spanning the continent between dawn and dusk, was followed by the definite announcement of the Post Office Department in Washington and in New York recently that all was ready for the transcontinental air mail service, which started on regular schedule Tuesday, July 1.

The trip from New York to San Francisco will consume thirty-four hours and forty-five minutes. The eastward air voyage will require only thirty-two hours and five minutes, this route having the advantage of favorable air currents. Day and night flying will be the rule, but in the night flying a torrent of light flooding the skies from powerful beacons will rival the sun.

THREE RATE ZONES FIXED.

Special postage stamps are provided for the service. There are three rate zones from coast to coast, the rate within each zone being eight cents. It will cost 24 cents to send a letter, via the air route, from New York to San Francisco; 16 cents to points between Chicago and Cheyenne, Wyo., and eight cents to points en route to Chicago.

A special delivery stamp, added to zone postage will insure delivery of mail on the date of receipt where the schedule indicates late arrival in certain cities. Otherwise delivery will not be made until the following morning. In figuring the total time between the departure of a letter and its delivery, allowance must be made for transportation of mail from the landing field to the central city post-office.

A letter leaving New York at 10 a. m., eastern time, will arrive in San Francisco at 5:45 o'clock on the following afternoon Pacific Time. The planes will leave the Pacific Coast at 6 a. m. Pacific time, bringing mail into New York at 5:05 p. m. on the following day, eastern time. The scheduled stops are at Bellefonte, Cleveland, Bryan, Chicago, Iowa City, Omaha, North Platte, Cheyenne, Rawlins, Rock Springs, Salt Lake City, Elko and Reno.

LIGHTING SYSTEM PERFECTED.

In both eastbound and westbound trips the belt of night flying covers a stretch of 1,460 miles from Cleveland to Rock Springs, Wyo. The foremost electrical engineering organizations of the country were called into consultation by the Post Office Department to solve the lighting problem. As a result a total of 5,279,000,000 candlepower will illuminate the air paths from overlapping pools of light and beacons intercepting one another. Added to that the twenty airplanes in the service and in the reserve will carry a total of 10,000,000 candle power light with them, gleaming from every portion of the planes.

J. V. Magee, illuminating engineer for the service, has divided the belt into three units. That between Chicago and Cheyenne, measuring 885 miles, is to be lighted at once. The east and west wings, 335 miles from Cleveland to Chicago, and 240 miles from Cheyenne to Rock Springs, will be utilized as summer wanes and the days grow shorter. Main lighting stations in the central division are located at Chicago, Iowa City, Omaha, North Platte and Cheyenne.

At each of these points two 36-inch electric arc beams of 500,000,000 candle power each have been installed. Where advisable a 5,000,000 candle power incandescent beacon is to be superimposed on the tower of the larger arc. There will also be one of the powerful beacons, or two of the smaller ones mounted on mobile platforms for flood lighting of the field's surface.

LANDING FIELDS ILLUMINATED.

Each field for landing is to have its boundaries outlined with incandescent lamps or flashing acetylene gas beacons. All buildings and obstructions will be outlined with light, and the wind cone will be illuminated. In the center of each field there will be a brilliant red mushroom cluster, low enough for the wheels of the plane to pass over safely.

In addition, divisional fields are to be placed at intervals of twenty-two miles. Each of these thirty-four fields will have an eighteen-inch or a twenty-four inch 5,000,000 candle power incandescent beacon, as well as boundary limit acetylene flashes. Again, at every three miles there will be acetylene flashes on six-foot platforms. In other words, there is a landing field available every three miles of the route from Chicago to Cheyenne in case of emergency.

The big 5,000,000 candle power beacons are visible for a distance of 150 miles. They are set one-half of 1 degree above the horizon and revolve around the horizon three times a minute. The 5,000,000 candle power beacons are visible for 100 miles and will make the circuit every ten seconds. The acetylene beacons of 5,000 candle power are visible nine miles and flash 150 times a minute.

PLANES ALSO WILL GLOW.

Each plane flown at night will be equipped with green navigating lights to the right, red to the left and white in the tail. At the tip of each lower wing there will be headlights of 250,000 candle power, supplied from a 12-volt battery, the current being generated direct from the main crankshaft. One headlight is for distance, and the other for flooding. Powerful flares attached to miniature parachutes also can be released, the parachute sustaining the light in its slow descent, shielding the pilot from the glare.

Post-offices not located on the air mail route may dispatch by rail to connect with the route. Philadelphia, for example, may send its mail to New York or to Cleveland, and a letter addressed to Los Angeles would be transported by air to San Francisco and thence by rail to Los Angeles.—New York Herald.

Never before has a single United States precancelled stamp been as popular as has the Harding. These pretty little "Black Beauties" perpetuate the kindly physiognomy of Warren G. Harding. As stamp collectors, we enjoy searching for the precancels from the 2500 cities which have used it. Some of these cancellations are common; others are extremely scarce. We do not advise you to purchase the more common varieties now. You can obtain them almost any time; but watch for the scarce ones.

* Indicates an electrotype Harding; others are handstamps. All items are normal unless otherwise indicated. Rotaries are perforated 10x10; all others are the flat perforated eleven.

ONE RUBLE RUSSIA, 1913 ISSUE.

By CHAS. G. WILSON.

On the One Ruble value of the Romanoff Centenary Issue of Russia of 1913 (Scott's No. A-29), there appears a picture of the Kremlin, one of the most picturesque and interesting bits of architecture in the world.

The Kremlin of Moscow, the acropolis of that ancient city, has for hundreds of years been the centre of the political and religious life of Russia. For long in the early period of Russian history it was the court of the Emperors, the seat of the nobility and the priesthood. To this day it is a much venerated shrine to the patriotic Russian, the sanctuary of the holy of holies of his country. The Kremlin is a city in itself, triangular in shape, surrounded by a wall surmounted by eighteen towers, and pierced by sixteen gates. The most famous of these gates is the Gate of the Redeemer. Above it is a huge ikon which is said to have frightened and dispersed the Tartar hordes, which centuries ago besieged the citadel. Through the Gate of the Redeemer have driven all the Czars of Russia since Ivan IV to be crowned in the Cathedral of the Assumption. For although Peter the Great abandoned Moscow in 1712, and set up his court in the newly-founded St. Petersburg on the Neva marshes, and there the Czars have ruled for more than 200 years, each has come in turn to the ancient cathedral of the Kremlin to receive anointment with the oil of consecration and the crown of kingship.

Within the Kremlin's walls are crowded palaces, courts, shrines, churches, museums, towers, domes, barracks and gardens—a riot of color and architecture. There are ten churches, scattered among which were (before the Bolshevik uprising) many holy and religious works of art. The Cathedral of St. Michael, the Archangel, contains the bones of many of the Russian monarchs.

Not only was the Kremlin in ancient times the nucleus of the city of Moscow, it was more, it was "the village which expanded into an empire." Behind its walls the dukes of Moscow sheltered from the arrows of the Golden Horde; there Ivan the Terrible held sway over his barbaric Court; there the dynasty of the Romanoffs was founded; and there was born in 1682 Peter the Great, the father of modern Russia. It is the rock on which founded the ship of the Napoleonic Empire. From its towers the Man on Horseback watched the leaping flames sweep the city. Did he read defeat in the lurid skies? When the holocaust was spent the Grande Armée found itself, without food, 2,000 miles from Paris. They mined the ancient walls in a vain attempt to blow it up and then began that long and cruel retreat which spelled death to the soldiers and ruin to an Emperor.

And still it stands, surrounded by its towering walls, slumbering and dreaming of its regal and splendid past, smiling at Lenine's pitiful dream of world dominion, patiently waiting, with the patience learned of centuries, for Russia to throw off the incubus of Bolshevism and once again take her lawful place among the mighty nations of the earth. And in the great moats, which once filled with water, children leap at play and in the dusk lovers come out to hand in hand.

DETROIT AN IDEAL CITY IN WHICH TO HOLD THE A. P. S. CONVENTION.

Above is a view of a beautiful breathing spot in the heart of the business district of dynamic Detroit. The attractively flowered green is called Grand Circus Park for the reason that in the early days of Detroit, circuses were held there. The beautiful Detroit River is but a few minutes walk distant. Note the stately hotels and other buildings in the background. At the extreme left is the Statler Hotel, the A. P. S. Convention Headquarters. Thanks to the Detroit Convention Bureau for the use of the cut.

Enormous Reduction in Prices

Have you read my ad of May 26 in MEKEEL'S WEEKLY? This was an expression of my price-list of March 20, which was not promptly delivered to MEKEEL'S WEEKLY by the post office, so that my ad appeared too late. All prices are considerably reduced. I have one of the largest stocks of Bavarian and German stamps, which I deliver always at cheapest possible daily market prices.

Demand at once my Special Wholesale Price-list for Bavarian and German Stamps and Packets. Enormous Profit!!

AUSTRALIAN AIR POSTS.

By AUTOLYCUS.

Australian covers do not take up a great deal of space in the Air Post collections, but they are notable for including one of the rarest items known to aero-philatelists, viz., the Ross-Smith Souvenir stamp, of which less than sixty copies are believed to have survived.

The first air post flight in Australia took place on July 16th-18th, 1914, when M. Guillaux flew from Melbourne to Sydney, a distance of 580 miles, in his Bleriot monoplane, thus establishing a long distance record. Official souvenir postcards were issued on this occasion and impressed on the back with an oval cachet in violet containing the inscription "AUSTRALIAN AERIAL MAIL—MELBOURNE, VIC. 16-Jul. 1914." Such cards are of considerable rarity.

The next event in the history of Australian air post was the arrival at Melbourne on February 26th, 1920, of Sir Ross Smith on the completion of his sensational world flight from England to Australia, carrying with him a mail of 321 letters. In addition to a receipt mark inscribed "First Aerial Mail—Great Britain to Australia—Received 26 Feb., 1920" each of these letters had affixed to it a souvenir stamp of special design showing the terrestrial globe with England and Australia in outline, a flaming torch between and an aeroplane flying over the top. The stamp was devoid of any indication of value and bore the inscription "FIRST AERIAL POST—ENGLAND & AUSTRALIA" together with the dates "12th Nov." (departure from Hounslow) and "Dec. 10th 1919" (arrived at Port Darwin, Northern Territory). Executed in large square format, they were printed singly on paper watermarked Crown over A and perforated 12. Letters bearing the special stamp and postmark were enclosed in official envelopes and forwarded under cover to the addressees. Very few of them appear to have been preserved so that Ross Smith covers are of the greatest rarity.

An attempt to inaugurate a regular air post service between the towns of Perth and Derby (West Australia) on December 4, 1921, ended disastrously with the crashing of the postal plane and the death of two airmen. Letters carried on the inaugural flight were postmarked with a special date stamp inscribed "PERTH DERBY Aerial Mail, 4/12

/21." After the disaster the mail was forwarded by train to Derby and thence to destination. Following the resumption of the service between Geraldton and Port Hedland on February 22, 1922, and finally between Geraldton and Derby on April 6, 1922, the same postmark, but without date was employed down to May 8, 1922, after which it was discontinued, no discrimination being made between air borne and ordinary letters, excepting the additional postage fee (3d per 1/2 oz.), and endorsement on the envelope "Per Aerial Mail."

Two other air lines are at present in operation in Australia, viz., between Cloncurry and Charleville (Queensland) and from Sydney to Brisbane. Latterly letters conveyed over these routes have been distinguished by the affixing of a green label bearing the words "By Air Mail."—West End Philatelist.

CHRONICLE OF NEW ISSUES AND VARIETIES UNITED STATES.

By PHILIP H. WARD, JR.

Joe T. Lozier Collection.

Mr. Hugh M. Clark of the Scott's Stamp & Coin Company is certainly to be congratulated upon the acquisition by his company of the well-known Joe T. Lozier Collection of Unused United States Stamps. Mr. Lozier has been a collector of choice United States for upward of ten years, and during that time he has acquired one of the finest collections of blocks and singles ever gotten together. His activities were limited to the general issues from 1847 to 1890 inclusive, and he omitted those items, which were not regularly issued, such as certain values of the August, 1861, issue, the 3c scarlet, and the like.

As this collection will, no doubt, finally be broken up, I feel that a record should be made of the main items which it contained.

In the 1847 issue, there is a magnificent vertical strip of four of the 10c, with sheet margins at top and left. Many would no doubt consider this the choice item in the collection. It is in wonderful condition with full gum. Its rarity may be appreciated when it is realized that in unused condition I know of but one block of six and one block of four, that can compare with it. There is also a horizontal block of six of the 5c.

In the 1851 issue, there is a block of nine of the 1c, type II, a magnificent block of fifteen of the 3c, a pair of the 5c, and a horizontal strip of four of the 10c.

As for the 1857 issue, all denominations are represented in blocks of four or larger. One especially choice piece is a horizontal block of six of the 5c, type I, in brown. There is also a magnificent block of four of the 10c, type I. In the case of the 24c, there is a block of twelve with plate number and imprint at the left, the plate number reading "No. 1 P". There is also a block of six of the 30c, and four of the 90c.

In the 1861 series, the scarcer items are the 3c pink in block, the 12c black, a block of six of the 24c, which is exceedingly rare, as well as two blocks each of the 30c and 90c.

In the issue of the following year, we find a block of six of the 5c red brown, a block of four of the 5c black brown, as well as the 15c Lincoln. There is also an irregular block of twenty of the 24c.

In the grill issues there is a block of the 3c grided 13x16, and also of the 2c and 3c grided 12x14. The 2c is an exceedingly scarce item. All of the 11x13 are present in blocks of four or better, and in the case of the 12c, there is a block of nine with the "Z" grill. This is, no doubt, unique. All of the 9x13 issue are represented by blocks, with the exception of the 90c, which is represented by two horizontal pairs. The 24c is present in a wonderful 5x3 block of fifteen, with full gum and well centered. The 30c is in a block of twelve, and as far as I know this is the largest block existing.

Of the 1869 issue, the Lozier collection contains possibly the largest blocks of certain denominations known. Most of these came from the Worthington collection, which was broken up in 1917. There is a block of thirty-two (8x4) of the 1c, and in the case of the 2c there is a block of nine, a block of eight and four blocks of four. The 6c is represented by a block of four, the 12c by a block of four and a block of nine. Of the rare 15c, there is a block of nine, which is possibly unique in this size. There is a plate number block of six of the 15c common type, a block of four, and a magnificent block of twenty (5x4). There is a block of nine of the 24c, which is the largest block known, and of the 90c there is a block of four. The 30c in unused condition must be exceedingly scarce in block form for it is missing. The collection contains perfection cancelled copies of the 15c, 24c and 30c, 1869, with inverted centers.

Of the grided 1870 issue, there are blocks of the 3c, 6c and 7c. The ungrided issue is represented by blocks of the 1c, 2c, 3c, 6c, 10c, 12c and 24c. The latter is a very unusual piece, which also came from the Worthington sale. The block of 12c is a block of eight, and in wonderful condition. The 7c, 30c and 90c are missing, and these by the way are all exceedingly scarce.

Of the 1873 Continental issue, everything is present in blocks, with the exception of the 30c. Of the 7c there is a magnificent vertical block of seven, a wonderful block of ten of the 10c, and a block of six of the 12c. The 90c is represented by a block of four and a block of twelve (4x3). The 2c and 5c 1875 are there, including a block of thirty-six (6x6) of the latter.

As for the 1879 American prints, there is a very unusual piece, viz., a block of twelve (6x2) of the 1c on the hard Continental paper, but with the American imprint. There are also blocks of four or better of all other denominations, including a block of twenty-four (6x4) of the 90c.

All of the 1882 to 1888 are represented by blocks of four or better.

In connection with the Brussels Philatelic Exhibition, the Government made a special printing of small sized Sheets of 4 each of the 5 Frc. Stamp, Scott's type A59, in brown. All were bought up by Speculators and these attractive little Sheets have considerable speculative possibilities.

I offer a complete mint sheet of 4 with full margins.

PRICE $3.75 Post Free.
I only secured a very small lot at a big premium.

Have also this stamp postally used on cover with the special Exhibition postmark.

M. & M. WANTED

In making preparations for a new series of approval books of Match and Medicine stamps, I find my stock has been badly depleted during the past winter.

I am in the market to buy any variety in any quantity, but condition must be fine. I realize that the nature of the use of these stamps resulted in most of them becoming somewhat damaged, but torn and damaged copies are of no use to me whatever.

If you have some cheap varieties or, better yet, some rare ones—a collection or that odd page or two that you started and never went further with and they are in fine condition, send them to me by registered mail with your price or for an offer.

Sealed proposals will be received at the office of the Purchasing Agent of the Post Office Department in Washington until 2:00 o'clock, August 7th, for furnishing these envelopes and wrappers.

At present, the Middle West Supply Company of Dayton, Ohio, has the contract for furnishing this stamped paper, and this concern has been turning out in the neighborhood of eleven million of such material every day. For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1923, the Post Office Department spent $4,902,581 in the purchase of stamped envelopes and newspaper wrappers. Of the 2,721,475,103 stamped envelopes and wrappers purchased by the Department during the fiscal year of 1923, there were 1,434,823,879 printed with special request return cards of 942,550 different forms.

The successful contractor will be expected to be ready to begin delivery of stamped envelopes and newspaper wrappers on January 1, 1925.

I understand that the envelope proposition has become so large, that at the present time there are few firms that are in a position to compete for such business, and it is quite possible that a number of the smaller firms will pool their bids and quote a lump sum figure. The envelope contract some years back was awarded on a similar basis.

Should the new contract be given to a new firm, or should the old firm receive it, there is not any likelihood at the present time of changing the envelope designs.

Canal Zone.

The Metropolitan Stamp Company kindly sends us for our inspection copies of the new Canal Zone stamps, which we listed some weeks back, consisting of the current United States 1c, 2c, 5c, 10c, 12c, 15c, 30c, 50c and $1.00 surcharge in two lines in black "Canal Zone."

Mr. Gerald D. Bliss kindly sends us a copy of the Panama Star Herald of July 3rd from which we quote quite extensively, for the information is of interest to collectors:

"The Taft Agreement between the Republic of Panama and the United States was abrogated June 30, Dr. Eusebio A. Morales, acting Secretary of Foreign Affairs declared yesterday.

Certain reciprocal obligations between Panama and the United States have now ceased, Dr. Morales said, inasmuch as no new treaty has been signed.

Dr. Morales said that the abrogation of the Taft Agreement is the reason United States postage stamps are now sold at Canal Zone post-offices instead of Panamanian stamps with the words 'Canal Zone' printed upon the face of them as heretofore.

'Since last year,' Dr. Morales said, 'the President of the United States was authorized by Congress to abrogate the Taft Agreement and the State Department advised the Government of Panama that the agreement would cease to be effective on April 30, this year.

Negotiations between the two Governments followed at Washington with an effort to find a basis for a new pact to replace the Taft Agreement and so settle other matters pending between the two nations.

On April 30 the new agreement had not yet been signed and President Coolidge agreed to postpone the abrogation until May 31. On May 29 the negotiations were still under way and President Coolidge issued an Executive Order making the abrogation of the Taft Agreement become effective June 30.

Dr. Morales would not comment further on the treaty negotiations.

The postage stamps of the Republic of Panama which have been used in the Zone post-offices for fifteen years or longer, have been superseded by a new issue of United States stamps. This action was announced yesterday in a circular issued by C. H. Calhoun, Director of Posts on the Zone.

This circular states that all Panama postage stamps and other stamped paper, surcharged 'Canal Zone' will be withdrawn from sale at the close of business on June 30 and no sales of such stamped paper will be made after that date.

To replace the present issue of postage stamps there has been issued to Zone postmasters, United States postage stamps, surcharged 'Canal Zone,' in denominations of 1, 2, 3, 10, 12, 15, 30 and 50 cents and $1.00; postage due stamps in denominations of 1, 2 and 10 cents; 1 cent postal cards and stamped envelopes in denominations of 1 and 2 cents.

Though none of the old issue of stamps will be sold after June 30, they shall nevertheless be valid for postage until and including July 31. Stamps of the old issue in the hands of the public after July 1, and until August 1, may be either used for postage or exchanged for other stamps of the new issue but shall in no case be redeemed for cash. Stamped envelopes, unsoiled and in good condition which have not been specially printed by the purchaser, will be exchanged for an equal number of envelopes of the new issue or for postage stamps. If exchanged for postage stamps, only the face value of the stamps on the envelopes will be allowed in exchange. Likewise, postal cards of the old issue may be exchanged for new cards or postage stamps, provided the cards are unsoiled and in good condition. Stamped envelopes and postal cards which have been specially printed for the purchasers will be recognized as valid until the stocks thereof have been consumed, regardless of the date, but will not be redeemed or exchanged.

After August 1, mail matter with stamps other than those of the new issue affixed shall be treated as unpaid and

A Problem Solved Interesting, Early, Inexpensive Covers!

Many a collector, wishing to broaden the scope of his collection without too greatly increasing his investment, overlooks the possibilities of this field. He may think that with the common 3c 1851 U. S. selling at 25c to $25 on cover the pasture is too expensive. Very true indeed of most early issues, but there is one fascinating, historically interesting, and decidedly promising opening, and that is the Italian States. There was very little commerce between the United States and Italy until after 1880 consequently no finds of early Italians in this country, but a member of this firm during a three months search in Italy found two big lots of fine old covers the little cost of which surprised us. The stamps were Roman States, Sicily, Naples, Sardinia, Lombardy Venice, Parma, Tuscany, etc. The cancellations included steamboats, sailboats, railroads, arrivals, departures, Royal Mails, etc. The same things on 3c 51s would have caused almost any U. S. collector to turn 17 back flips without a stop. They were so good our representative gathered up a few hundreds which we offer as they run; all fine nice covers:

CHAPTER III.

Starting a Stamp Collection.

Nothing worthwhile is ever accomplished without prior thought. This trite truism applies very particularly to stamp collecting. Gone are the days of haphazard gathering.

Whether you collect for pleasure or investment, or for both, it is essential that you decide, in advance, on a preconceived objective to be reached, as far as possible, through following out a definite, clearcut main program.

It is well to point out here that any stamp collection, even if begun and continued as a sparetime hobby for pleasure, will turn out eventually to be a good financial investment if slipshod execution be excluded.

To begin aright is to half win the game. But you cannot expect to begin aright without first knowing what the course of your game is going to be. Therefore, let us assume you are unfamiliar with the hobby and the aids available for the convert.

Your general object will be to collect stamps. Your immediate object, however, is to own and keep stamps according to the practice of intelligent Philatelists. As their usual method is to use prepared albums to hold the specimens forming their collections, it is wise that you do likewise.

A stamp album is a book, bound either permanently or by looseleaf arrangement, containing pages titled for separate groups of specimens. Of albums, a large variety is offered by dealers in philatelic supplies. If a novice, without previous knowledge of philately, you should choose a medium-sized album for a general collection, namely: a volume which provides ruled spaces for between 10,000 to 20,000 varieties, representing all known stamp-issuing countries and states.

The beginner is advised to start with a general collection, because he or she will find it affords more scope for self-instruction in the art and science of the hobby. Only after he or she has acquired experience and knowledge, should he or she enter upon the higher phases of the meritorious pastime, on the principle that one should learn to walk before attempting to run.

In these days when women are to be found in nearly all lines of activity hitherto considered reserved only for men, it is not surprising to find philately attracting many enthusiastic followers from among the fair sex. The feminine love of neatness, sense of color shades, capacity to take pains in producing a desired result, and appreciation of things artistic, as well as increasing capacity for research, all conduce to render stamp collecting fascinating to an augmenting number of women and girls. Nowadays, the well-informed girl should know geography, international politics, foreign currencies, and world events, and philately offers to her practical means to acquire information just as it liberally offers her brother. It is, therefore, not surprising that teachers and parents are suggesting stamp collecting to students of both sexes.

Besides a stamp album, the collector should have at least one standard stamp catalog of recent issue. There are several published (in America and Europe) by recognized philatelic houses. These publications are veritable mines of information, and, especially for the tyro, constitute unmatched guides for avoiding counterfeits, forgeries, spurious and similar undesirables. GALLANT'S VACATION PACKET

On sale only during the months of July and August. To tell you anything about the Vacation Packets would be only a waste of time. I am the only one who has started to sell Vacation Packets during the vacation months. Many others have tried to sell Vacation Packets, yes, they did, but they only got one order and everyone who has ordered an imitation vacation packet got fooled. It's an old story, you cannot fool the people all the time. To make a packet with a catalog of $10.00 or $12.00 and putting all kinds of trash in, using reprints or high catalogued stamps with bar cancellation or figuring old catalog prices, anyone can sell a catalog value from $10.00 to $12.00 for $1.50, but Gallant's Vacation packets are not made this way, every stamp is genuine, either used or unused, and the total catalog of the 100 all different stamps runs from $12.00 to $15.00. Then sooner you order your Vacation packet, then better stamps can be expected. I have sold during the last six years not 100, not 1000, but over 5000 Vacation Packets and this year I can promise that everyone will be more than pleased. You will find stamps catalog $2.00 each and higher, $1.00, 60c, 50c, 40c, 30c, 25c, 20c, 15c, 10c, 8c, 6c, 5c, 4c, 3c, and in every packet only ten stamps at 2c catalog will be found.

Gallant's Vacation Packet on sale only once a year during the months of July and August. 100 all diff. stamps catalog from $12.00 to $15.00 for $1.55.

MARKET IN MODERN COLONIALS.

Malta.—Although the summer season is now in full swing, it is difficult to detect much slackening of enthusiasm. The demand for modern colonials continues apace, and there is no doubt the next catalogues will show many more increases. A few months ago the writer drew attention to the possibilities of Malta stamps, and since that was written a further sharp appreciation has taken place. It was mentioned that the 2s6d mult. CA of 1919 was priced at 175frs in Yvert-Tellier's Catalogue, and nearly full catalogue has been paid for this stamp in France, whilst over £1 is now obtained for it in London. At the beginning of the year it could probably be bought at 5sh. Another stamp which has shown a similar rise is the 10sh script wmk. stamp with "Self Government" overprinted, which was, until recently, regarded by many as the commonest of the St. Paul stamps, now fetches £3 at auction. It is now apparent that the 10sh stamp with CC watermark, which is priced higher than any in the catalogue, is in reality the commonest of the five. This is not surprising, when we consider it was in use for about twenty years, whilst all the other 10sh were in use for less than one year. The lower values have also increased and all the 2sh K.G. stamps are worth watching, with the 2sh "Self Gov." CA as the chief rarity. Malta, along with the other Mediterranean colonies of Gibraltar and Cyprus, are more in demand on the Continent, and the latter colony in particular is worth watching—the number of changes of late have been numerous, and some varieties have had a very short life, so that we may see some stately advances like in Malta.

German Colonials.—A correspondent recently asked "What are the financial prospects of German colonial issues?" This is really outside the scope of these notes, but if I may be permitted to digress, it is well known that these have advanced recently on strong German and other Continental buying, as presumably the Teutons, having lost their Colonial Empire, all wish to possess emblems of its former greatness. A few of the colonies, like Togo, Samoa and S.W. and East Africa, may quite legitimately be added to a British colonial collection, but used copies should be secured as far as possible—these are the most interesting and valuable, and the more certain to increase in value if bought at reasonable prices. The postal authorities in Berlin are still selling off, from time to time, parcels of the mint stamps. Some of the mark values on watermarked paper are varieties prepared for use (?) and never issued at all in the colonies.

There are some scarce varieties in the higher values of German East Africa, and the 60 heller appears a scarce duty in either state. The stamps of East Africa and Uganda so curiously overprinted "G.E.A." suffered somewhat from over-speculation, but it is quite likely that prices will rise again, as it is a set every colonial collector likes to show, and no Government remainders exist. The script watermark set is also likely to improve, having had a very short life. It is worth noting that these stamps were always sold at 2sh per rupee.

Detectorlators.—Some trenchant remarks have recently been published on the subject of financial increment in philately, and that the increase in numbers of the "Delector" is tending to spoil or degrade our hobby. This may be to a certain extent true, as with certain ill-balanced persons who cannot consider the financial aspect of their hobby without becoming quite obsessed with that aspect alone and oblivious to all its other manifold charms.

It is difficult to see what effective steps can be taken to suppress the Delector and Speculator.

Part of the trouble is probably due to the difficulty many amateurs have of disposing of their duplicates or collections, at a satisfactory price. Of course, for rarities, important collections, or items of topical or popular demand, there is little trouble, but for ordinary small collections and duplicates, there has not, until recently at least, been any very satisfactory market. Many a dealer, unless they happen to be varieties he is short of or has a brisk demand for, will only offer a small fraction of their value. Most collectors, therefore, accumulate more and more duplicates until they are tempted to start dealing. Exchange pure and simple is unfortunately not in much favour in this country, and the exchanger is often left to the mercies of the foreign exchanger who is always willing to send parcels of common European stamps for "nice Colonial sets or rarities."

The "Script Blues."—Information is slowly filtering through as to the numbers issued of some of the Script 2½d blues. Many collectors have fancied the 2½d St. Kitts-Nevis as the best of the bunch, others, the 2½d Gibraltar; about neither of which any statistical information has been published. The 2½d Trinidad was very scarce in the Colony, and now we read that only a comparatively few thousand of the 2½d Antigua were printed in blue, a number of which were sold by the Crown Agents. As this is a stamp still obtainable quite cheaply, those looking for a little flutter in these popular issues might consider them as a very promising investment, which may easily show a 300% rise in a year or so.—Philatelic Magazine.

THE FERRARI STAMP AUCTION.

Spirited Bidding by Messrs. Theodore Champion, Hugo Griebert, T. Allen and Warren Colson.

FIRST DAY.—PARIS, 18th JUNE.

The auction sale of the great collection of M. Ferrari de la Renotiere was resumed at the Hotel Drouot this afternoon, this being the tenth sale already held in connection with the Ferrari collection. There did not seem to be quite so much public interest in the proceedings as on the occasion of the last auction in April, but the dealers and experts were well represented and there was again some brisk bidding. A total of 234 lots was offered today, and the amount realised for the day was 803,180 francs.

The greatest interest of the day was aroused by a very fine specimen of the British Guiana 2c. black on pink, of 1850, used with the initials J.B.S. across it, for which it quickly became evident that there was keen competition. The bidding was run up to 50,000 francs, at which price it was eventually knocked down to M. Champion (Paris).

The next best price secured was an 1861 "wood-block" error Cape Good Hope, 4d. red, of which only perfect unused examples are known. It was sold eventually for 41,400 francs.

A 12d Canada black, 1851, mint, unusually fine specimen, attracted much attention, and after the bidding had run to 27,500 francs fell to Mr. Lichtstein (America).

M. Champion was also the purchaser of a British Guiana, 1850, 4c black yellow (papier pelure), cut square used. For this he paid 20,000 francs.

A square-cut British Guiana, 1850 black on orange, used, with the initials E.D.W., fetched 16,000 francs.

Another Cape of Good Hope, 1861, roneous 1d blue, used, an excellent example, sold for 13,300 francs; another British Guiana, 1851, 4c black blue, unused, was run up to 13,000 francs while a British Guiana, 1850, 12c black on light blue, fetched 12,500 francs. This last example was a fine specimen bearing the initials E.D.W., and with figure 2 inset.

A 4d deep blue Cape of Good Hope 1861, unused, sold for 11,300 francs.

Mr. T. Allen (Wanstead) was the purchaser of another British Guiana which aroused very spirited bidding. This was a 4c blue, of the 1853 issue, fine example, used, which ultimately went for 36,000 francs.

SECOND DAY.—19th JUNE.

When the sale was resumed today lots were on the whole less important than yesterday, and the total sum taken at close was 594,390 francs.

The biggest price of the day was 47,500 francs, paid by Mr. Hugo Griebert for a block of six 8d orange-yellow New South Wales of the 1851-54 issue, gummed and unused, a very fine set is understood that the purchaser was buying on behalf of the American collector, Mr. Arthur Hind.

Mr. Warren Colson, another American, paid 23,000 francs for a block of ten 1d carmine New South Wales of the 1851-54 issue, mint, a remarkably fine piece.

Some New Zealand stamps also fetched good prices, M. Champion, the expert, paying 18,000 francs for a fine example of the 3d lilac of the 1860 issue.

Among other outstanding prices of the day were:—

New South Wales, 1851-54, 3d green, fine block of four, gummed, unused, 12,000 francs.

THIRD DAY.—20th JUNE.
The third day of the Ferrari Sale was disappointing, and the total for day was only 488,700 fcs.—considerably the lowest of the three days.

The best price of today was paid by Lichtenstein (America), for a set in Zurich of the 1843 issue, 6rp black pink, horizontal lines, with framing delete at the base, the eighth stamp cancelled, unused. This was an unusually fine set and the price was run up to 21,000 francs before it fell to Mr. Lichtenstein.

The next highest price was secured for a single unused example of the Geneva black on green-yellow double 5c—an excellent specimen which fetched 10,000 francs.

The prices as a whole today ruled considerably lower, the best after these:

—Switzerland, 1860, One shilling orange, unused, 10,100 francs.
—Switzerland, 1857, One shilling version, unused, a particularly good specimen, 8,000 francs.

—Switzerland, 1850, a block of four 2½rp black red, apparently new but defective (cross not outlined), 8,400 francs.

The total taken during the three days of sale was 1,886,270 francs, and the final impression is that more had been expected. It was remarked that the interest in the sale appeared to be considerably less than on the occasion of the auction of April last, and on the last day in particular there was little of the spirited bidding which was observed in April. Unusual reticence was observed in regard to the names of successful purchasers, but it may be noted that the principal bidders on the closing day were Mr. Lichtenstein, Hampton, Mr. Griebert, Mr. Allen and Mr. Roberts.—Philatelic Magazine.

The Australian Philatelist says that a new one penny green Australian one-cent stamp has been issued on the paper. The explanation is that the authorities found a stock of the old one-cent paper and utilized it, but the printer says that he will continue to use the one penny value. Our temporary advisers collectors to watch their values very closely.

UNITED STATES CANCELLATIONS.
By F. O. SELIANOFF.
PART II.
Short reference list by names on various objects and hand-stamped designs and postal markings used for cancelling the U. S. mail from the time of the first stamps up to the abolition of all such cancellations at the beginning of this century. Very rare cancellations are found in the later part.
In our last articles we have been dealing mostly with cancellations more or less in accord with the special catalogue, but are now coming to the more interesting part, Part II, where we will try to list Postmasters, hand-stamped markings and designs by groups which so far have not been taken up by the special catalogues. Except for Mr. Ritchie's and other writers' efforts in the past, no serious attempt has been made to class this most interesting branch of postal markings.
We have placed the Gridiron cancellation in the first group. This cancellation being one of the very first used (and if we are not mistaken is of English origin). It was used on our first issue of stamps, the 5 and 10 cts. 1847, and continued to be used on all the different issues up to the present time and is now being used in a small uniform oval type, at 3rd and 4th class post-offices:—
Group
1. Gridirons.
2. Circles.
3. Squares.
4. Diamonds (playing card canc.).
5. Triangles.
6. Stars (and combined).
7. U. S. and U. S. Mail.
8. O. K.
9. Animals.
10. Shields.
11. Caricatures.
12. Pumpkin heads and Jack O'Lanterns.
13. Anchors.
14. Propellers and Turbines.
15. Year dated.
16. Skull and cross bones.
17. Fraternal Orders.
18. Wearing Apparel.
19. Liberty bells, Flag and Union.
20. Wheels.
21. Crosses.
22. Trees, leaves, plants, etc.
23. Hearts (playing card cancellation).
24. Tools and Implements.
25. Planetary (globes) crescents.
26. Fruits.
27. Geometrical.
28. Allegorical.
29. Arrows, spearheads, Bow and Arrow.
30. Targets.
31. Checkers.
32. Thumb and finger impressions (rare).
33. Balloons, kites.
34. Horizontal and vertical lines.
35. Scarifying Patent C.
36. Monograms.
37. Irregular cancellations.
38. Town cancellation in block and colorless letters (very rare).
39. Letters.
40. Numbers.
We have thus been able to distinguish and separate the various markings in a total of 40 different groups and will now take the reader through each group separately where he will have a chance to know each object in its special group by its own name, where and when it was used by naming the stamp on which it was used and, if possible, name of Post Office.

GROUP I—GRIDIRON.
This is a cancellation known to almost every collector of stamps except in rarer instances like: Square, Triangles, Oblongs and Octagons and Combined form. Suffice it to say that it was used at 90% of all Post Offices. Varieties: Plain from 3 to 30 bars, in Circles, in Ovals, in Squares with and without frame, in triangles and in combination, also a special colorless within frame (the rarest in this group is the triangle and the combined). About 200 varieties in all.
Some rare post-offices with gridiron cancellations: Bellevue, Idaho, green; Adin, Calif., magenta; Placerville, 1858; Galt, 1869; Petaluma, Alameda, 1887; San Jose, 1859 and Bachaco, Calif., 1868; Lock, Ohio; Mascoutah, Ill.; Homer, Ill.; Galesburg, Ill.; Bengon, Mich.; Coldwater, Mich.; Chase, Mich. (obsolete); Orwigsburg, Pa.; Virginia City, Mont.; Oxford, Ala.; Holden, Mo.; Auburn-dale, Mass.; Chenango Forks, N. Y.; Starkville, Miss.

GROUP II—CIRCLES (Single).
A single ring or circle of various dimensions and thickness first appeared on the 1857 and 1861 issues. Most plentiful in the 70's and 80's and 90's. Is not a common cancellation. The very smallest and very biggest are the most uncommon, is very attractive in a clear or colored cancellation. Varieties about 50. Is also a combined cancellation. Here are a few of the rarer post-offices who used the circle cancellations: Poway, Petaluma, Colusa, Valley Springs, Mokelamni, Hills, Calif.; Pleasant Plains, Garden Plain and Franklin Grove, Ill.; Corpus Christi, Laredo, McKinney, Texas; Almont, Mich.; Cannon Springs, Pa.; Carson City, Nev.; Elkader, Iowa; La Crosse, Wis. and Vails Gate, N. Y.

THE BI-MONTHLY JOURNAL

A stamp publication distinctly different from anything you have ever seen before.

The July-August issue consists of 36 large pages, profusely illustrated, with a complete line of packets, sets, dealers' stocks, combination lots, philatelic supplies, good collections, etc.

Also a 4-page adventure story about stamps, editorial comment regarding the philatelic scandal-mongers, photographs of our Wholesale Approval Department and a wealth of other interesting reading.

Albert C. Munson, 412 Broadway, Houston, Texas, writes:

"I enjoy the Bi-Monthly as much as MEKEEL'S; there is no other paper, house organ, journal or circular of any kind wherein one can find such extraordinarily good stamps—and at such reasonable prices."

You can't afford to miss the important July-August issue.

EDITORIAL.

For a good many years a thought has been expressed at different times that there might be some danger in handling mixed quantities of stamps that may come to the dealer. In fact, occasionally a note of alarm was sounded in the columns of the lay press that danger lurked in old stamps from different countries, and while we always combatted any expression of fear of the kind, we felt that it would have been better had we been able to have floored the ghost for all time. Now, however, we are gratified to see that the redoubtable Dr. Evans in his column in the Chicago Tribune comes out flat-footedly in favor of immunity for the postage stamp on the score of disease-carrying capacity and in large, bold letters reassures a dealer's wife in the following words: "No Danger From Stamps. Mrs. F. J. writes: 'My husband is a dealer in old stamps and, as such, handles them continually. Is there any danger of contracting any diseases such as tuberculosis, or anything else that the person who originally used the stamps might have had?' Reply: No."

Thus the fangs of the ferocious germ are filed and he must admit that stamps are his Waterloo.

In trying to promote philatelic amity among all classes of collectors we sometimes encounter some odd opinions in respect to the different representatives from the beginner to the advanced collector. For instance, we have had a letter from a collector who has had a reputation for studious philatelic research and we are surprised to learn that he says that the day of the intensive student of philately is done. He recalls that ten or more years ago the WEEKLY gave a good bit of attention to several correspondents who proclaimed the value of the symbolism of stamps, and our friend now says that he believes that so many stamps of attractive features demand his attention that he is not going to spend all his time with only a few stamps.
This is an unusual sort of letter, and we are of the opinion that it is not to be taken in a literal sense rather than a figurative one. A letter recently received from a beginner expresses the hope that the time will come when he will have several copies of the one penny black of Great Britain, a stamp that he thinks is worthy of all veneration and he says that a wealthy collector would be

We have received a copy of the Honolulu Star Bulletin for May 31, 1924, in which there is an article headed, "Seeks Light Here on Hawaiian Stamp Mystery," illustrated by a picture of fourteen of the Hawaiian Missionary stamps that were involved in the Grinnell-Kle-mann case. The article is nearly three columns in length and tells of Mr. Grinnell's efforts to find the so-called missing link that will establish the genuineness of these stamps. We quote: "Grinnell firmly believes that the stamps are genuine, and appeals to any reader who may have information on the subject to assist him in clearing up the missing link in their history that will vindicate his judgment, further substantiate the documents in his possession and prove beyond all possible doubt that these are real Missionary stamps of the early date which is ascribed to them." Mr. Grinnell speaks of further evidence that he has uncovered and he asks that anyone who may be able to add to the store of information regarding the Missionary stamps to enlist in his cause, as he is determined to vindicate the reputation of the stamps that are in his possession.
This article is one that is well prepared and covers the history of the case from the time of the court decision and it bears testimony to the perseverance of Mr. Grinnell, whose conviction that the stamps are of a real Hawaiian printing is more unshaken than ever before, if possible.

The London Daily Chronicle of June 23, 1924, prints an article entitled "The Wembley Stamps," that is a review of the stamp displays at the exhibition.
From the tone of the article one would judge that stamps make little impression in the aggregate and that they are "almost as difficult to find as a needle in a bottle of hay." New Foundland is represented as a governmental exhibitor, but the showing that is made is not creditable to that colony. As the writer says, the stamps that are on view seem to have been placed there by accident and "to have been exhibited by favour." All in all it is apparent that stamps by no means are a feature of the exhibition.

and we are somewhat surprised that the opportunity to attract the attention of the public to philately, as well as to cater to the collector, has not been well improved.
However, it is somewhat significant to find that in a great daily newspaper a real critique of the stamps in an exhibition sense is given place.

* * *

We cannot understand how in this day and generation there is an editor of a big newspaper here and there who has no conception of what philately has grown to be. We are ready to grant omniscience to many of the able editors, but are puzzled and chagrined to find that a few of our idols have minds of mush when it comes to recording their mental slants on our pursuits. For instance, recently we quoted an editorial from the Philadelphia Ledger, one of the best newspapers that ever left the format and showed that for a man who must keep abreast of the times the editor was lacking in an ordinary appreciation of philately in its present day development.
While we suppose that we should be inclined to quibble about the opinion of the submerged citizen who is as blind to the attractions of philately as the chap was to the primrose on the river's bank, we think that it is very reprehensible on the part of the editor to whom so many readers look for inspiration to give the wrong psychology on stamp collecting. An ignorance of the kind should be censured by the management of a publication as the half truths often are as misleading as downright mistakes.
Philately should be regarded as having a title to correct representation in the newspapers as much as any other subject, and when it is treated in a vague, uncertain way by a writer, he should be reprimanded by the power above him in the manner that his attention would be called to misleading statements in regard to other topics on which he might try his pen. Some time ago, a humorous item appeared in print to the effect that philatelists were "spiritless creatures," and while the intention of the writer was humorous, yet we must assert our rights when it comes to correcting mistaken opinions, with conviction or else it will be thought that we deserve the belittling appellation in reality. When a newspaper speaks unwarrantedly about philately it should be made aware of its association with stamp collecting is involved would be interesting. It is known that there are collectors who begin to gather stamps before they know others did the same and a recital of the reasons for their inclination regards stamps as objects of collection and have its value.

 We are now within sight of the date of the annual convention of the American Philatelic Society at Detroit, beginning August 12. Assurances come that attendance will be large and with important consideration settled favorably, there is no reason why the convention will not be the most interesting ever held. Each year the gathering attracts the added prestige of and involvement in philately and not a few members take pride in participating in progressive measures that are acted upon at the time. As usual the convention of the American Stamp Dealers Association will be held the day before that of the national collectors organization and we believe that at the dealers' location the determination to elevate commercial standards in this country will be backed by plans for giving greater impetus to curtailing the misapplied enterprising of the dealers who do not meet ordinary demands of fair treatment. This connection we may say that the opinion of Mr. J. M. Bartels as president of the 'dealers' society is assured. We have no doubt but that he will endeavor to increase the power of this organization whose work becomes more official as the years emphasize its offices.

SUBSCRIPTION RENEWALS.

Some of our subscribers need to know our rule regarding discontinuances. We discontinue all subscriptions in arrears promptly the second issue of each month. This means that your subscription should be renewed prior to expiration. The expiration number can be ascertained by consulting your wrapper. No free issues of the WEEKLY are sent out under this rule as is fixed as the laws of the M. and P. Our older subscribers understand our rule and the newer subscribers should get acquainted with it.

THE MELLON CUTTING 300 VARS. OF FINE STAMPS $1.02 CATALOGUING $12.00

Candidly, the Mellon Cutting is about the neatest thing ever sold for $1.02. About this time of the year a fellow is looking for bargains and if you like bargains why don't you "Cut yourself a piece of MELLON and make yourself at home"?? Of course it is easy enough to get a lot of 300 vars. to sell for 10c, but The Mellon Cutting isn't that kind of a packet. This "M. C." is the biggest value we have ever offered for $1.02, and that is going some. We are just cleaning up a lot of odds and ends that are in quantities too small to advertise. Then there are a lot of very recent issues—provisionals, high values, etc. We are far too busy this Summer to dispose of these stamps in the ordinary way—hence The Mellon Cutting.

This is the ideal way to buy stamps in the Summer and we have all plans laid for the delivery of 1000 Mellon Cuttings per week. Do not fear that the number of orders, or the press of other work, will injure the quality of The Mellon Cutting. Each packet will contain 300 varieties of the stamps and will catalog at least $12. ORDER THE MELLON CUTTING FOR A RAINY DAY IN CAMP. IT WILL DRIVE THE "BLUES" AWAY. TOO. THERE'S NOTHING LIKE THE MELLON CUTTING. Prompt deliveries guaranteed wherever you are or are going to be.

THE MIGHTY CONVENTION 102 Var. Mint Blocks Incl. Byron Comm. Set $2.04

As we are still selling dozens of THE MARK CLIMAX—102 Blocks of Germany, almost all of them values 5000mks and up—at $2.04, THE MUCH MORE CLUTTER—60 Blocks of DANZIG, including many of the scarcest provisionals and high values—$2.04. THE MAGYAR CROWD—102 Blocks of HUNGARY, cataloging about $16.00 and including many complete sets—$2.04. We have had to search the countries of the earth to make this new "M. C." non-duplicating with these three others. No pains or expense have been spared to make this the finest collection of blocks obtainable.

If you want to order 102 Blocks of Germany, 60 Blocks of Danzig, and 102 Blocks of Hungary TOGETHER WITH THE MIGHTY CONVENTION—366 Mint Blocks for $8.16, we will include four mint blocks extra and they will be dandies.

THE MAGIC COMMEMORATION 20 PRECANCELS COMMEMORATIVE $1.02

LOOK HERE! 20 all different Harding and Commemorative precancels for $1.02 and we will say right now that they are fine ones. 5c per stamp—and you won't have all of them. 1c, 2c, & 5c Commemorative and a few packets have 3c Victories included. A real SUMMER SPECIAL. Far below the lowest retail prices.

If you prefer, we can offer you 32 Varieties for $2.04. We call this The Magic Commemoration EXTRA and we can guarantee splendid value.

EARLY LOW VALUES SPECIALIZED.

Regarding the interesting two cent brown-red of the 1883 issue, R. L. Hustis of Milwaukee says:

"I checked up Major Bonesteel's figures, as shown in your lists in MEKEEL'S of Dec. 17, on about 150 covers that I had and got very nearly the same proportionate results. And I am forced to draw the same conclusions, that the plates became badly worn in late '85 and were certainly recut or new ones made.

In checking up the dots as sent you by Mr. F. A. Kuhn and described Dec. 10, I found that they appear on or near an imaginary horizontal line through 5th pearl and from the medallion to the left outside the stamp to at least ½ millimeter, as described. But I found some on stamps which do not have the heavy shade. I am sending you an example of this.

I am also including what appear to be examples of wear on the plates, or it may be that the inking was poor, altho I doubt this from the excellent printing of the rest of the stamp.

All the above convince me that these dots were used as limit marks in some way, either in the re-cutting of the plates or in laying out the new. And as these dots do not appear to be at all rare in the 2c greens following, is it not only possible but probable that the same new or renewed plates were used, still being good.

Were the original plates so soft that they wore, so few in number that too numerous printings wore them and made re-cutting necessary? When recut, was not the shade added to make the stamp more artistic and relieve the flat look by making the shield stand out? And, finally, were not new plates added, shaded like these recuts?

I am inclined to answer 'yes' to all these suppositions. But cannot some actual information be obtained from a reliable source and settle this question? As to the enclosed covers and stamps, altho I have made pencil notations on them and numbered them, I might help you further by listing them here.

No. 1. Shift. Left side, from the bottom of the ornament of curved border enclosing "UNITED," etc., down to the 7th pearl, a shift ½ millimeter to the right and ¼ mm. upward, evidenced by 10 lines half way between the lines of the border of stamp, a tapering dot in the curve of the ornament and the same in the 1st to 7th pearl inclusive, a line in the white oval frame showing the curve of the pearls and extending from the center of the ornament to the 7th pearl. All lines and dots get lighter toward the lower limits of the shift. Right side, the shift has about exactly the same limits but extends toward the outside of the stamp instead of the inside as at the left.

No. 2. Worn plate? No lines to left of "2." Date 1885 by date of letter enclosed.

No. 3. Worn plate? Shield frame weak at lower left, shade of "2" partly missing at left, queer shade below nose. scratch (?) extending from end of queue to 14th pearl and then at right-angle to edge of shield. Date 1885.

No. 4. Shade of "2" weak at left. 1885.

No. 5. Dotted in white oval opposite 6th pearl, no shade below shield. (Look this over carefully yourself.)

No. 6. Dotted in white oval between 4th-5th pearl, rather light shading. 1887.

No. 7. Very clear. (May be new plate) 1887. Dotted outside of stamp opposite 6th pearl. Apparently dotted on both side of space between 5th-6th pearls (2 dots.) (Heavy ink, perhaps?)

No. 8. Dotted in white oval, 5th-6th pearl. No shade on shield at middle left of "2." Shaded plate. Year unknown.

No. 9. Slightly shaded. 1886. Twice (?) dotted. At outer edge of white oval, 5th-6th pearl, and at outer end of horizontal border line of stamp exactly opposite.

NOTE: The position of these dots is as nearly as possible in the middle of a straight vertical line between the top and bottom of the stamp. The slight deviation above or below is no doubt within the limits allowed the engravers if it was used as a layout mark! Put your glass on No. 7 which I have marked with fine dividers. Remember, too, that drawings and engravings are usually laid out from center-lines. The deviation to the left or right may have a minor reason if the reason for the mark itself is found. Who made the original plates? Who re-cut these plates? And who made the new plates? Someone ought to be able to get this history or may already have it.

Yours truly,

R. L. HUSTIS.

Mr. Hustis' samples show the various things that he describes so accurately. The shift that he speaks of as No. 1 is one of the finest the writer has seen. It is unusual in that the shift apparently is through the middle of the stamp only. A point that he does not mention is that the shading lines on Washington's cheek are badly shifted throughout the center portion of the stamp.—Ed.

THE INTERNATIONAL PHILATELIC EXHIBITION IN NEW YORK IN 1926.

By PHILIP H. WARD, JR.

A further meeting of the Board of Governors of the Association for stamp exhibitions was held at the Collectors Club in New York on Wednesday, July 9th, at which time the special committee appointed for the purpose, made recommendations regarding the exhibition to be held in New York during the fall of 1926.

The Board with minor changes accepted the report. It is almost understood that the exhibition will be held on the fourth floor of the Grand Central Palace, which has a space, excluding aisles, of upward of thirty thousand square feet. It is to be hoped that a week or ten days in the latter part of October may be obtained.

The committee having the exhibition in charge will consist of: Alfred L. Liechtenstein, President; Arthur E. Owen, Vice-President; C. M. Ams, Secretary; Theodore E. Steinway, Treasurer; together with the following as members of the committee: J. M. Bartels, J. B. Chittenden, H. M. Clark, P. G. Doane, Eugene Klein, John A. Klemann, Edward S. Knapp, Harry M. Lewy, H. L. Lindquist, John N. Luff, L. B. Mason, J. C. Morgenthau, Charles J. Phillips, Edward Stern, Herman Toasperm and Philip H. Ward, Jr. This committee was also given authority to add to its number.

A very comprehensive list of honorary vice presidents has been selected, and it is not thought advisable to announce this list at this time, as there is no doubt quite a few additions will be made before it reaches its final form.

The committee at present is working upon a detailed list of classification of exhibits, and it is expected that this list will be circulated quite extensively among societies throughout the country, so that it may be constructively criticised, so that when the final form appears, the exhibition will be of such magnitude, that it will include collections of all types.

20TH CENTURY UNITED STATES

Numerous collectors have written me after receiving selections in accordance with their want lists, advising that certain items that I have sent them have been on their lists for months. I have always endeavored to keep on hand a very substantial stock of 20th Century United States in blocks and singles in mint condition, including those elusive die, type and perforation varieties. Most every collector will find a stamp here and there missing, and if I might be favored with their want list, I am confident I can furnish the variety that cannot be secured elsewhere. My stock of these issues today is second to none.

I also carry on hand a very wonderful lot of early issues of the United States, and while my stock is not nearly so complete as in the late varieties, I am always in a position to send out fine things to serious collectors.

I am also in the market at all times to purchase fine properties or even single items in the stamps of our country. I also solicit selections of scarce Confederates, Carriers, Locals on cover and all of the Departments in superb mint blocks.

COSTA RICA.—We have received from Mr. Paul C. Standley, a copy of a new 2c stamp of very small size and in green color. Mr. Standley writes the following information regarding it:

Today I have received a copy of one of the smallest postage stamps ever issued, apparently, sent by a friend of mine in Costa Rica who is not himself interested in postage stamps, but who knows that I am. I judge this was issued about June 15.

The reason for the issuing of this stamp is rather curious, as I heard it when in Costa Rica this year. The 2 céntimos postage is that required for post-cards to foreign countries (American) and in the interior. An ordinary card mailed to the United States requires either four or five lines of address, with the result that tourists complained bitterly that after their cards were addressed there was no room to place the large stamps now in use in Costa Rica. The government promised to remedy this, hence the present stamp.

The following account of the person whose portrait appears upon the stamp is taken from a local history published in San José:

"Don Rodrigo Arias Maldonado, governor ad interim of Costa Rica from 1662 to 1664, after the death of his father, Don Andrés, undertook in 1662 the reconquest of Talamanca, and as a result of his good tactics succeeded in reducing many of the Indians who lived along the Rio Tarire, but immediately afterward they revolted again.

"The following year he organized a large and costly expedition and made a new attack upon Talamanca. Upon this occasion he found the town of Conamare, and when the undertaking seemed to have succeeded, his men treacherously turned against him, and left him alone in the heart of the Talamanca country. The Indians, who were greatly attached to him because of his kindness, conducted him safely to the nearest settlement of the Spaniards.

"The King later on rewarded Don Rodrigo with the title of Marquis of Talamanca and with an annuity; but he, wearied of the vanities of the world, retired to the cloisters of the Order of Bethlehem in Guatemala."

It is doubtless as a brother of this order that he is pictured upon the postage stamp.

In this connection, since references in secular literature to postage stamps seem to be popular just now in MEKEEL'S WEEKLY, the following may be cited. It is from "Dottings on the Roadside in Panama, Nicaragua and Mosquito," published in 1869, by Bedford Pim and Berthold Seemann, the latter one of the most famous and one of the earliest explorers of the natural history of Central America. In March, 1866, "After leav-

We assume that in practically all the lists the Sydney view and Capri triangular were given place, as well as the penny black.

—At the tenth auction-sale of the Ferrari sale held in June in Paris we notice that the British Guiana 1850 two-cent black on rose, used, brought 50,000 francs, while the 1856 four-cent black on blue, used, realized 36,000 francs. These prices must be added the French government tax of 17½%.

—The story of the scramble for the five franc Montenez type at the Brussels Exhibition is being made the subject of many moralizations in the press of Europe and there must have been high old times at the sale which with the ticket sale at a world's championship ball game in this country.

—Mr. Olaf J. Olson of St. Paul, Minnesota, was in Chicago on one of his occasional trips to that city and he again affirmed his faith in collecting as a means to make the busy man forget how he is. Mr. Olson's stamps have increased in such numbers that his album is on the point of being called such in a figurative sense.

THE RIDDLE OF RHODESIA.

By FRED J. MELVILLE.

The sale of the remainders of the Rhodesian stamps by the British South Africa Company has created some little excitement among collectors, and, as the details of the transactions involved have not hitherto been disclosed with precision there has been, not unnaturally, a good deal of misunderstanding as to the facts of the case.

It has been no secret for months that a considerable stock of the Rhodesian stamps remaining in the hands of the British South Africa Company at the time of the institution of Responsible Government for the Colony of Southern Rhodesia (October 1, 1923), has been for sale. This stock comprised a large amount of face value and some millions of stamps of various issues, and the Colonial Government had been pressing for the realization on these stamps; it is the Colonial Government, we understand, not the Company, which benefited by the sale.

The stock has been on offer to the stamp trade for some time, but it was too large to be sold outright at face value, or anything approximating to face value. To sell off at considerably below face value was to strike a serious blow to dealers and collectors who had invested in these stamps at or over face value during the period of their currency or since. As Capt. H. R. Oldfield in his secretarial page of the London Philatelist (October, 1923), says:

"There were rumors that it was possible these remainders might be sold to dealers at a reduced price. This was a very serious matter which would affect thousands of collectors throughout the world who had purchased these stamps at face value."

The rumors were probably not without foundation, but there were no buyers for the heavy stock, and Messrs. Stanley Gibbons, Ltd., as anxious as anyone to protect the interests of those who had invested in the stamps at or over face, made an offer for the entire stock, subject to its being canceled. This they did to save the stamps being thrown on the market as unused remainders.

The cancelling of the stamps was done by the Company, in London, and it is the least satisfactory part of the transaction that the stamps were canceled in such a way as to involve a deception upon collectors of used stamps. Postmark chops were procured from Rhodesia for the purpose of cancelling the remainders, and however the matter may have been regarded by the officers of the Company at the time it appears to us an unfortunate, if not improper, proceeding, that they postmarked them with ante-dated postmarks. We regard postage stamps as documents, as sacred as any other official documents, and we do not see how anyone can justify the application of a postmark dated 1913 on some date in 1923 or 1924. It is an abuse of the official evidence of the postmark.

The stock so canceled was duly handed over to Messrs. Stanley Gibbons, who re-sold the lot in its entirety, and the bulk has gone abroad. Collectors will realise, however, that the comparatively cheap offerings of certain Rhodesian stamps, postmarked and with full gum, are the result of the sale of the remainders and as the gum is easily removable the value of genuinely used stamps of this issue is likely to be affected. But we understand the number of sets of the various issues was quite small.

This is the transaction which has caused rather more commotion and been more far-reaching than the facts justified. There have been reports that along with the stock was a large quantity of printers' waste. This is clearly not the case; there was neither proof, waste, nor irregular varieties included in the transaction. As all students of Rhodesian stamps know there have been on the market for years certain spurious varieties, so-called roulettes, imperfs., etc., obtained from printers' waste some years ago, and which are readily identified as they are on a totally different paper from that used for the issued stamps.

We are glad to make this clear, for it was only recently announced by Messrs. Stanley Gibbons (Monthly Journal, Feb., 1924), that the Rhodesia portion of the Catalogue "is being re-written and will contain some important additions and discoveries." This announcement has been all-too-readily connected up with the sale of the remainders, but it has been within our knowledge for some time that Mr. A. B. C. Dyer, whose intimate knowledge and vast collection of Rhodesian stamps has placed him in the forefront of authority on Rhodesian philately, has been engaged in the preparation of this section of the Catalogue. Mr. Dyer may be counted upon to present the Rhodesian list as it should be, full and complete, but entirely free from fictitious or fanciful varieties. The old printers' waste freaks have long been known for what they are, and are not likely to be given any new lease of philatelic currency in any standard catalogue.

As to perforation varieties, such as the scarce 13½, and the rare 14 by 15 perfs., one of the leading dealer specialists in Rhodesian stamps examined the entire stock of the remainders without finding any of these rarities.

Yet another matter has brought complications into the Rhodesian stamp news lately, and which has been supposed to be connected with the sale of the remainders. This is the £1 stamp printed in the wrong colors, viz., carmine and purple, instead of red and black. This was recently chronicled on the authority of Mr. T. Allen in the Fortnightly and other papers.

The history of this variety is a curious and interesting one. A small stock (eleven sheets of 50) of the £1 stamp was printed in carmine and purple, and was sent out to Rhodesia, but the chief post-office held them back from issue as they were in the wrong colours and were likely to be confused with the 10d stamp printed in the same colours. The stock was subsequently returned to London, and was offered for sale by the Company, but who was going to buy a large parcel of unused £1 stamps?

The business acumen of the stamp dealer is not less keen than that of his fellows in other trades, and the best offer the Company obtained for the misprinted £1 stamps was a stiff price for two sheets of 50 stamps conditional upon the absolute and guaranteed destruction of the balance. The sale was concluded on these terms, and the incineration of the balance of 450 £1 stamps must have been a moving ceremony for the philatelists who witnessed it.

It is thus quite correct that the stamps were printed in error, and equally correct that only 100 exist. But the exact status of the stamp is that of many other stamps which have been given catalogue rank, namely of a stamp prepared for use but never issued. It was even more clearly prepared for use—being sent out to the Colony for issue—than the 1d carmine-red Cape triangular, CC watermark, for example, which was never sent out to the Cape.

The circumstance of destroying the stock all except 100 stamps may be criticised in some quarters and it is probably a rare occurrence in the stamp trade. But it cannot be alleged to be an improper proceeding, and it has its time-honored parallel in the old book trade, the trade in prints, engravings, and objets d'art where rarity is a principal factor in value.—Stamp Collectors' Fortnightly.

CONFEDERATE PRINTING PRESS IS CURIOUS RELIC.

By VIRGINIA LEE COX.

(We are indebted to various subscribers for this most interesting article from the Richmond "Times-Dispatch." The name of August Dietz is of course very familiar to philatelists, both north and south.—W. O. W.)

Tiny, according to our modern standards, quaintly old-fashioned and almost absurdly simple in design, one of the first presses on which money and stamps of the Confederate States of America were printed, and probably the only one in existence today, has at last come to rest in a modern printing shop in Richmond, which still is, in a traditional sense, the capital of the Confederacy.

Though the little hand-press has long been inactive it now holds the position of honor in a big museum room at The Dietz Printing Company, probably the only printing plant in the South, or in America, which has sacrificed valuable floor space to sentiment. And in the center of this valuable floor space, dedicated to preserving historic curios and objects of the graphic arts, the little old Confederate hand-press, still with the transfer of four Confederate notes on its small, old lithographic stone, is a mute reminder of a day that is gone, and of the progress that has been made since then in the South and in the printing business.

It is not known exactly how many presses were in commission for printing the Confederate stamps and money. There may have been half a dozen, or more, but this survivor now in The Dietz Printing Company is No. 3 of the old battery. It was first the property of Hoyer & Ludwig, lithographers, of Richmond, who were commissioned to do some of the printing work of the Confederate government.

When the Confederate government was organized one of its immediate difficulties was the question of obtaining Confederate money and stamps for its use. At first, when the provisional government was established at Montgomery, Ala., a number of designs and proposals were submitted by Northern concerns, but when hostilities actually began and all the Southern States seceded one by one, it was impossible to allow enemy institutions to print the South's money and postal currency. There were then no large Southern printing concerns and Postmaster General Reagan experienced great difficulty in securing artists and printers who were capable and equipped to execute the large contracts of the Confederate government.

Confronted with the urgency of having money and stamps printed, and by such difficulties of getting it done, both the Treasury and Post Office Departments turned to Hoyer & Ludwig, lithographers of Richmond, and commissioned them to proceed with the work. Both Hoyer and Ludwig were Germans, Hoyer a goldsmith and a man of considerable means in his day, and Ludwig a most skilled master of his art, able to both draw his designs and do his own printing.

To the craftsmen of today the output of the old Confederate press No. 3 will doubtless appear most crude, as it undoubtedly was. But it sufficed in its day, and the fear of the government that the lithographed money and stamps could be counterfeited more readily than steel-plate printing was quieted by the argument that the coarser the design, the more difficult detailed imitation would be, an argument in which there is a good deal of truth, master printers tell you.

However crude the little press may have been it was decidedly picturesque when it was in operation. Then a burly negro, probably wearing blue jeans and with a colorful red bandanna tied around his neck, stood patiently turning its handle, grinding out Confederate notes of all denominations, which finally came to be worth not even the paper they were printed on, so little did the government have to back them. And near him, waiting to take the damp sheets of "notes" from the press, stood dainty Southern ladies, some of them members of the South's most prominent families, forced into the then ignoble position of working by the patriotism which ran high through the South, and by the fact that the loss of their fathers, husbands and brothers in the war had made it necessary for them to be bread-winners for their families.

The press worked quite simply. Its stone, quarried in Bavaria, like all lithographic stones, had an affinity for water and grease. The design was drawn with a greasy crayon, or engraved, on the stone. The stone was then wet with a sponge, and the design being greasy, the water receded from it. The ink roller was then passed over the stone, and, since printers' ink is also greasy, the water on the rest of the stone rejected it, squeezed off by the ink roller, a sheet of paper, with padding of other sheets, placed over the stone, a copper sheet, smeared over with tallow to prevent sliding, placed over the paper, the bed of the press lifted, the handle turned, and the stone, with its design and layers of paper, passed under the scraper, where the actual printing occurred in the passage. The damp sheets of paper, which had become Confederate notes after such a process, were lifted off the stone and quite simply hung up to dry on clothes lines.

To the modern lithographic craftsman, expert in the intricate lithographic processes of today, this old-fashioned method of printing money will sound too absurdly simple to be real. And yet it was in precisely this simple manner that the money of the Confederate States of America, and its stamps, too, were printed. And, though, to the modern lithographic craftsman the old press appears a pigmy beside the big newspaper presses of today, all their thundering noise cannot drown the clarion voice of history which this modest hand press helped to make.

The old press was presented to August Dietz by Hudson P. Hoen, of A. Hoen & Co., lithographers, of Richmond and Baltimore. August Hoen, one of the founders of the firm, was the first to introduce in America Senefelder's discovery of printing from stone. He was the inventor of the lithocautic process, the basic principle of the halftone of today. The Hoen secured the printing press when they acquired the Simonds & Keiningham plant, which had secured it from its original owners, Hoyer & Ludwig. Mr. Dietz served his apprenticeship under the last living printers and lithographers of Confederate currency and stamps, of whom Frank Baptist and Richard Hendrick alone survive.

Other invaluable relics keep the old lithographic press company, where it proudly stands in the center of the museum room at The Dietz Printing Company. There is a replica of the Thomas de la Rue, of London, electrotype of the Confederate five cents postage stamp. The plate originally contained 100 subjects but it was captured by an Ohio trooper and cut into sections for distribution among his friends. One fragment is now in the Ohio State Museum at Columbus, but through action of the Ohio Legislature it was lent to August Dietz, and for his use sent to Richmond, where he made a replica of it. The plate is of the original 5 cents blue, altered to 10 cents. It was positively identified by Frank Baptist, of Richmond, who printed the 5-cent stamps at Archer & Daly's in 1862, having been detailed from Parker's Battery to do so. Fifty-six years after this he superintended the printing of stamps from this same plate at The Dietz Printing Company.

In one of this unique museum's cases there is also a steel transfer plate from Archer & Daly's steel plate printing establishment, upon which may seen transfers of the Confederate cents and 20-cents postage stamp made from the original dies. There a replica of the only coin said to have been minted in the Confederate States the one cent piece.

From the walls surrounding the printing press, pictures of Richmond's master printers, many of the long since dead, look down on the objects decorating the large room entirely sacred to the graphic arts. The pictures are framed in antique, mahogany frames. In the cases, the museum are other Confederate relics and valuable curios of the graphic arts. There are autographed letters of General Robert E. Lee, General Stonewall Jackson, General J. E. Stuart, and General Reagan. There are specimens of master printers from Asia, Africa, Europe and Australia. There are books printed in the seventeenth, eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, among them an old Bible, Martin Luther's original translation. There is an almanac of 1862, containing the names of members of the Confederate Congress. There are copies of the Southern Illustrated News printed in Richmond in 1862, and propaganda illustration from Southern Literary Magazine, in actual wood cut—a remarkable example of craftsmanship under the most trying conditions.

There is a small book of St. John's Gospel, which ran the blockade during the War between the States, sent through by Dr. Moses D. Hoge, of Richmond's most beloved ministers of the old days. And there is a copy of some of the writings of America's first printer and patron of printing in America, Benjamin Franklin. This book, printed in 1794, is rather lengthily entitled, "Works of the Late Dr. Benjamin Franklin, Consisting of His Life, Written by Himself, together With Essays, Humorous, Moral and Literary."

One easily believes that the old Confederate printing press, after the eventful and uneventful years of its career, is in good company in the room in which it has been placed.

THE COLLECTING INSTINCT.

By PAUL FLOYD CORNISH.

Away back in my barefoot days I lectured broken pottery, rusty nails and sunflower seed. Later on I made a box of my mother's love letters, curing a nice lot of 1870-71 covers and some fancy cancellations. My first stamp was a one cent blue Columbian stamp which came on the family mail. At age of 18 I took a position in a small town far from home and among strangers. It was then that collecting meant more to me than any other thing I can recall. I purchased a small album and a one pound lot of mixed stamps, these with the lot of stamps on approval which I received every week, I spent many happy hours during those years away from home.

As soon as I had established my home and settled down to a life of industrial work the collective instinct came back again with the result that I have been dealing in stamps for about 15 years. But first of all I am a collector, a general collector of everything that stamps. Used and unused, U. S., foreign, single, blocks and pairs. Numbers, precancels, cancellations, covers are all grist when they come to collective mill. Stamps have called out into the wide open spaces and into the heart of the big cities.

I have formed many pleasant friendships and business relations in handling stamps. I have never found a greater joy than the fun I had back in that country town with a thirty cent stamp and a pound of mixed stamps.

PHILATELIC WANDERINGS IN PERU.

By W. GARDNER.

Peru, one of the Western Republics of South America, is a country teeming with philatelic interest. Its history takes us back to the romantic period when the Incas were the rulers of tribes of energetic and peace-loving Indians. After a period of isolation, the nation was distracted by the coming of the Spanish adventurers—peace again being restored when Spanish power was destroyed.

To-day, Peru is a very progressive country, in spite of its drawbacks. Peru lacks harbours for its shipping, and means of communicating with the interior. Earthquakes are frequent—Callao and Lima have both been seriously damaged by visitations.

In primitive Peru mail carriers had been established before they were thought of in Europe. At the end of each stage of about one-and-a-half leagues, all along the road, were small houses wherein were stationed, night and day, two Indian messengers. One of these received the message to be carried from the preceding messenger, who shouted it whilst he was approaching the station; so that when the latter actually reached it the other was already on his way to the next post. Remarkable speeds were performed by these messengers, and it is stated that they covered the distance from Cuzco to Quito, some 1,200 miles or more, with the windings of the road, in twenty days, or 2,400 miles for the double journey. A day's staging of 120 miles was a common performance, and it is to be recollected that high mountain passes had to be crossed en route.

The Founder of the Peruvian Empire.—Two men intimately connected with the early history of Peru are Manco Capac and Francisco Pizarro. A portrait of Manco can be seen on the 2c stamp of 1896. He is wearing a broad-brimmed velvet montera or cap, which is trimmed with red and blue ribbon. Several legends have been woven round the life of this Indian ruler. One states that a wise woman, Mama Huaco, be thought herself of making civilised beings out of the savages inhabiting these regions. She gave birth to a son, whose father, she said, was the Sun. He was a handsome child, and she hid him in a cave in the island of Tiahuanac in Lake Titicaca. The mother worshipped him as the king and lord of those regions; and the Indians hearing of his birth and origin acclaimed him as the Inca and their ruler. The child was Manco Capac, or Almighty Child, and he grew up marvellously wise and prudent. Another legend tells how Manco and his three brothers set out from their mountainous refuge to find fertile lands. On the long journey into the unknown world, Manco rid himself of two of his brothers; the third perished on the site of Cuzco. Here Manco established himself, built a Temple of the Sun, and extended his dominion over the surrounding country. His successors reigned four centuries, till the Spaniards came.

Pizarro, whose features adorn the 5c value of the same series, was the conqueror of Peru. He came from Spain to Panama in search of gold, and finally made his way down the western coast of South America, where he heard tales of the marvellous wealth of the Incas. The news he sent home was well received by the Emperor Charles of Spain, and he was given command of a conquering expedition. Pizarro captured the ruling Inca, and refused a ransom of a room filled with gold, later having the Indian ruler executed and having the proffered ransom confiscated. After a formal entry into Cuzco, Pizarro turned back to the coast and founded Lima. In the struggle to gain dominance over the country, he caused a lieutenant of his to be beheaded. The man's son in 1541 murdered Pizarro in the palace at Lima.

The City of Lima.—Lima is the Capital of the Republic, and is one of the premier cities of South America. It was founded by Pizarro in 1535, and was called Ciudad de los Reyes, or City of the Kings. Many fine buildings and statues found in the city are represented on several Peruvian stamps. On the 10c value of 1907 we have the Exhibition Buildings. A national exhibition was opened at Lima in 1872, and the buildings planned by Don Manuel Fuentes included a palace, theatre, gardens, picture gallery and concert room. In front is the handsome Paseo or Promenade of Colon, at the head of which is the fine Columbus monument. When the exhibition was over the buildings on the southern side of the city were allowed to remain.

The Columbus monument finds a place on the 2 sol. stamp. It was removed from the Alameda or Avenue to near the Exhibition Buildings. On fete days the society of Peru gathers here, for the avenue of tropical trees leading to the monument is considered to be the finest in South America. The monument is built of pure marble, and represents the Genoese discoverer raising from the ground a poor Indian woman.

Two excellent institutions that have been of great value to the inhabitants of Peru are the Medical School, Lima, shown on the 20c value of 1907, and the Municipal Institute of Hygiene, shown on the 12c of 1905. The Medical School is one of the largest national buildings in Lima.

The Hippodrome of S. Beatrice, on the 1 sol stamp, 1907, is a finely laid-out place, where horse races are held, and is a great centre of attraction in the season—July to December. It belongs to the Jockey Club, and some interesting meetings are held.

Lima boasts of two other beautiful statues. The 1c of 1907 shows the Bolognesi Monument, dedicated to the memory of Col. Francisco Bolognesi who lost his life in 1880 in defence of Morro Fort at Arica against the Chilians. He refused to surrender, and his head was pierced by a bullet. The monument is carried out in marble and bronze. The other statue is that erected in honor of San Martin. Its picture adorns the 5c of 1907. It is the most beautiful of all the statues erected in five public squares of the city. It shows Lima, and there are many in the thirty-the famous General proclaiming the Independence of Peru.

The G. P. O. at Lima.—The General Post Office at Lima is a magnificent and ornamental structure of pure white stone with massive bronze railings to the windows and surmounted by imposing bronze statues. It was built during the Presidency of Dr. Nicolas Pierola. The Post Office is open to the public day and night, and every day of the year, Sundays included. On the 2c stamp of 1898 a fine view of this building is seen. The national flag is seen flying over it. The flag has three perpendicular stripes—red, white and red—in the centre of which is a white shield bearing the Arms of Peru.

A traveler in Peru writes thus of the postal service: "All those who have lived in Latin-American countries have experienced the difference which a good and a bad postal service can mean to pleasant and profitable residence; and whether he be a visitor, dependent perhaps upon the mails for his future guidance, or a permanent resident who relies upon it to conduct his business transactions, the regular and dependable dispatch and distribution of the mails are of the greatest importance. In Peru, no branch of the Peruvian public service has been more radically reformed than this, and to-day the Postal Department is found to be among the most efficient of any in the Republic. Not only is correspondence faithfully and speedily delivered, but it is absolutely, and at all time, safe from pilfering or suppression. Over so extensive a territory as that of Peru, the organisation of a thoroughly efficient postal service has been a matter requiring much care, patience and time, but it has been effected, and the results are entirely satisfactory. Pace has been kept with the rapid increase in the trade and population of the country, and this expansion augments day by day. Although, by a special regulation of the Government, the receipts of the Post Office do not find inclusion in the General Revenue, in practice they are sufficient to meet all the ordinary expense, while for the past five or six years they have yielded a considerable surplus. The steadily rising income derived from the sale of stamps, fees on parcels, extra postage upon correspondence, and commission upon money orders, now enables the Post Office to deal fully and without hesitation with all matters of expenditure coming within its department."

Beasts of Burden.—On the 1866 issue we find some of the animals of Peru depicted. The 5c has a picture of a llama and a vicuna on the Andes. The other values show an alpaca and a vicuna. The ancient Peruvians completely subdued and domesticated the llama as a beast of burden. They are the most prized possession of the upland Indians. The llama is about four and a half feet high, and the colours of the flocks vary. They are generally brown, with shades of yellow and black, frequently speckled and more rarely white. The males are trained to carry burdens, while the females are kept in the pastures. A llama can carry a load of 100 pounds, but when the weight is too much he lies down and will not move till part is taken off. The daily journey is about twelve miles, because these animals do not feed at night, and so must be allowed to graze during the march. When resting, llamas make a humming sound. A flock of llamas journeying over the mountains is a strange and beautiful sight. They proceed at a slow measured pace, with necks erect, and gazing eagerly on every side, and their Indian masters treat them with great kindness.

Having one of the largest stocks in the world I am disposed to satisfy all wants of a collector. Please send your lists with references or cash deposit.

I SPECIALISE in sendings of Wholesale consignments of Picture Sets from Nyassa, Liberia, Borneo, Siam, Persia, Costa Rica, different British, French, Spanish and Portuguese Colonies, etc., etc. Also new issues and novelties, as well as old issues of all countries, principally from Europe, and medium and rare single stamps, whole collections—large and small—of the whole world.

I send selections on approval to reliable dealers who furnish the usual commercial references. I do business only with good stamps, and have nothing to do with variable prices in consequence of the different rates of exchange, as, for instance, from Germany, Austria, Poland, etc.

I HAVE NEW THINGS IN STOCK DAILY.

I have the entire remainders of the Seebeck issues (Ecuador, Honduras, Nicaragua and Salvador), with over 1,000 varieties.

I also prepare stocks for those who wish to enter the stamp business and are able to invest from £10 to £1,000, with payment on account and the rest with credit payable by easy instalments. This service includes instructions and help as far as possible.

SPECIAL CONSIGNMENTS.—I often get enquiries for special consignments which I can only deal with from time to time, and then only to those of my customers who send me regular orders. I always do the best I can to satisfy them either small or large sendings, also rarities and collections, etc.

My prices are in French francs, Swiss francs, dollars, Bohemian crowns, pounds sterling, etc.

The alpaca is a species of the genus llama. It also is used to carry burdens, and inhabits the mountainous parts of Peru. Its general form resembles that of a sheep, but its head and neck resemble those of a camel.

A llama is emblazoned on the Arms of Peru. The first regular issue of Peruvian stamps shows the Arms of Peru, on a shield, above two branches surrounded by flags. The first article relating to the Peruvian Coat of Arms reads as follows: "The Coat of Arms of the Peruvian Republic shall consist of a shield, divided into three fields, to wit: one of sky-blue to the right, on which shall be a llama looking towards the left; another of white to the left, with a cinchona tree; in the base a field of red, with a cornucopia, from which flows coins of gold. The emblems symbolise the riches of Peru in the three natural kingdoms. The shield shall bear as a crest a civic crown (laurel wreath), and on either side a flag, and standard with the national colours."

The old Coat of Arms, as designed by San Martin, may be found on the 1874 issue. It was formed of an oval crown of laurels having a sun within, rising from behind a range of mountains, bordered by a calm sea. The Indians say that the first Inca, Manco Capac, was a child of the sun. Manco was given a sceptre of gold, and was told that wherever this should sink into the earth a city was to be established. Journeying northwards and advancing to the valley of Cuzco, the imperial city of that name, was founded for the sceptre of gold, so runs the fable, buried itself in the ground at this point and disappeared from view. One other view is shown on the 1c of 1898, and that is the Suspension Bridge over the River Paucartambo, one of the navigable waterways connected with the Amazon. This bridge is in the volcanic region, and a splendid view of the Andes can be obtained when crossing the bridge.

There is much more to be told about the stamps of Peru, its provisionals, obtained from the Pacific Steam Navigation Co.; the British stamps, used here before Peru joined the Postal Union; its grilles and curious overprints; its fiscal stamps used for postal purposes, and the stamps issued during the struggle with Chili. To the stamp student Peru is a country that will keep him interested and delighted.—Stamp Collector.

SAU STAMP CO.
Nassau St. New York, N. Y.

JAMAICA PICTORIALS OF 1920-21.

Written for MEKEEL'S WEEKLY.

These stamps were issued in a chronological order which is at variance with the denominational sequence, the 1½d for instance, was issued as far back as July 4, 1919, and the 1d was issued last on Oct. 3, 1921, and as the values range from ½d to 10sh, it will be obvious how irregularly in point of orderly sequence of value, the several values appeared.

I will deal with them here in order of value, giving the date of each issue, and those who will, may reconstruct the chronological order from the data provided.

The Half-Penny stamp was issued on Nov. 12, 1920, on white paper watermarked old type C A multiple upright.
The format is transverse rectangular, in two vertical panes of 80 each, i. e., 8 x 10, perforated 14 comb. The central portion of the design portrays the building which housed the Jamaica Exhibition of 1891, and is printed in blue. The frame is printed in olive green. At the top is the word "Jamaica," with the value in white numerals on coloured ground, within an ornamented double circle, on both sides. At the left and right respectively, are the words "Postage" and "Revenue" in small white letters on solid colour, reading vertically from the top, at the bottom are the words "Jamaica Exhibition, 1891" in white on solid color, and below are two branches of the cocoa-nut palm, crossed at the stems and tied with a ribbon. Those who have seen this palm, will recognize what an impossibility is depicted by that ribbon, probably a one inch rope could effect what that ribbon is made to do, but I don't think much less would answer, no doubt this is a case of "artist's license." The whole is printed by typography.

The official record of the stamp, copied from the Gazette of Nov. 11, 1920, is as follows:

"The following is the description of a half-penny adhesive stamp to be used for postage and revenue purposes. This stamp will be put into circulation on Friday, 12th November, 1920.

The design of the stamp is denoted by a representation of the main building of the Jamaica Exhibition.

The denomination ½d (in a circle) is shown at the top, in right and left corners, and between is the word JAMAICA. At the bottom of the design are the words and figures JAMAICA EXHIBITION 1891, and underneath are two palm leaves crossed at the end, and tied with ribbon.

The colour of the borders of the stamp is light green and the design is of light blue.

C. C. MANTON,
Deputy Stamp Commissioner."

The Exhibition was promoted to advertise Jamaica, and although it resulted in financial loss, it has been made evident that the expenditure was fully justified, and that the policy of the Governor, the late Sir Henry Arthur

Blake, has been vindicated.

The building was erected on a plot of land at the north of Kingston now occupied by the schools conducted under the Wolmer Trust, but the area of the grounds and of the subsidiary buildings, extended to and included that now occupied by the Mico College.

The Exhibition was opened by His Majesty, the King, then Duke of York, on his third visit to the island, made specially for the purpose. His previous visits had been made in the company of his elder brother, the late Duke of Clarence, when both Princes were visiting parts of the Empire, and in the course of his cruises while serving in the Navy. The Exhibition was kept open for five months, Jan. to May, and attracted a large number of visitors, not only locally, but from the States and Canada as well.

No special stamp commemorative of this event was issued, but a branch postoffice was opened in the building for the convenience of visitors, and a special cancelling stamp was used. It was of a circle, divided by spandrels into four equal segments. The words "Jamaica Exhibition" appear in the curve of the upper half of the circumference, and "Post Office" in the lower, with the figures of the date in the centre. The Post Office Department contributed to the exhibits by showing its collection of stamps.

The Penny stamp was issued on Oct.
3, 1921, on white paper watermarked old type C A multiple sideways to the right.
The format is upright rectangular, in two panes of 80 each, i. e., 10 x 8, set side by side, perforated 14 comb. The central portion of the design depicts an Arawak Indian woman seated under a shed, her back to the light, and the only visible apparel, is several strings of beads around her neck; she has between her legs a frame of some kind on which she is kneading a white frothy substance.
A tub or bowl at the right, and two very modern looking hammocks, at the back and hung from the roof, complete the vignette, which is printed in red. This is set in a frame printed in orange which shows at the top the word "Jamaica" in white Roman capitals on solid colour, with the figures of value 1d in color on white set in small double rectangles of color and shaded, on both sides. At the left, right, and bottom are shown Arawak implements, weapons, and pottery.
Immediately below the vignette are the words "Arawak making Cassava" in color, and the whole is typographed.
The stamp is innocent of the usual words
"Postage" and "Revenue," but its use for those purposes has been legalized by

WASHINGTON, D. C.

the official announcement in the Gazette of Sept. 29, 1921, as follows:

"The following is the description of a penny adhesive stamp to be used for postage and revenue purposes.

This stamp will be put in circulation on the 3rd Oct., 1921. The design of the stamp is denoted by the figure of an Arawak woman seated on the ground in front of her hut preparing Cassava. At the top of the design is printed JAMAICA in white on orange background and on each side on a shield the denomination 1d. At the bottom of the design is printed in orange on a white background the words "Arawak making Cassava." At the sides and bottom of the frame are shown Arawak implements, weapons and pottery.

The colour of the stamp is a light red set in a frame of orange with a white border.

Dated this 27th day of September, 1921.

J. A. McNEIL SMITH,

Actg. Deputy Stamp Commissioner."

There has been a deal of controversy in the local press relative to the true meaning of the word "Cassava." Some claim that the Arawak woman is performing a miracle, as the name Cassava is that of a plant which grows an edible tuber, from which both starch and a kind of meal may be manufactured; others state with some show of authority that the name is equally applicable to both plant and product. The evidence seems to be strongly in favour of the last.

The Penny Half-Penny stamp was issued July 4, 1919, on white paper watermarked old type C A multiple sideways to the right. Varieties of watermark, upright, inverted, reversed, inverted and reversed, exist. The format is transverse rectangular, and the stamp has been officially described as "maximum" in size. The printing is from an engraved plate of 40 subjects, 8 x 5, and the perforation is 14 comb.

The design depicts the departure of the first contingent from Jamaica in 1915, for service in one of the theatres of war. The following official description is copied from the Gazette of July 3, 1919:

"The following is a description of the 1½d adhesive stamp to be used for Postage and Revenue purposes which will be put in circulation on the 4th of July, 1919.

The design of the stamp is denoted by a representation of the Jamaica Contingent embarking—at the right hand corner is a profile of King George the Fifth surmounted by a crown and underneath the profile are the figures 1½d. At the left hand corner are the words "Postage and Revenue" while at the top of the stamp is inscribed the word "Jamaica" as also one penny half penny.

The stamp is printed on green paper.

Geo. S. THOMSON,

Deputy Stamp Commissioner."

Almost all of these official descriptions are loosely worded and often incorrect, as for instance the statement that the stamp is printed on green paper, the paper of some sheets did have a slight greenish tinge apparently derived from a plate not wiped quite clean, but such a thing as a printing on green paper does not exist.

The stamp is so well known, that a detailed description is not necessary here, but a variety of some note, double impression on part of the stamp exists, and apparently a very large number of plates have been used up in the two and a half years of its life. Printings on old CAC paper from at least five and probably six plates are known, i.e., no number and showing variety of double impression, no number and normal, and numbers from 1-4. The stamp was issued on script paper on Feb. 2, 1921, and the following are the plate numbers observed to date (Nov., 1921), no number, numbers 1-12. The plate numbers 1-4 are known on both papers, 1-3 are in small figures which appear on the bottom right corner margin, 4 is in larger type on the left margin just above the register mark on that side. Nos. 5-12 are known on the script paper only; Nos. 5, 6, 7 and 8, appear immediately below the register mark on the bottom margin; Nos. 9, 10, 11 and 12, appear in much the same position but to the left of the mark.

The Two-Penny stamp was issued on February 18, 1921, on white paper watermarked old type CA multiple upright. The subject is treated in up-rectangular style, in one sheet from an engraved plate of 80 subjects, i.e., 10 x 8, perforated 14 single line. The central portion of the design depicts a view of King's House, at Spanish Town. This city, said to have been called "St. Jago de la Vega" by the Spaniards, was their capital and seat of their government of the colony from 1523. It continued to function in the same manner under British occupation, until April, 1872, when the seat of administration was removed to Kingston, which from that time until the present has been the capital.

The building shown on the stamp was the official residence of the former governors of the island up to 1872, and is on one side of a square in the old town, on all other sides of which are official buildings, used as such up to the present. The Record Office, containing the archives of the island, Law Courts, Post Office, Police Station, etc., are all housed in these buildings, except the King's House which remains unoccupied.

The trees and other flora which appear in the foreground of the vignette, are growing in a small park in the middle of the square. This park is a comparatively recent addition, as in the days of the town's glory, the square was used for military display, especially on the opening of the local Parliament, the details of which were planned, as far as local conditions would permit, in limitation of the pomp and splendour seen at Westminster, but the principal achievement seems to have been a frightful waste of time. This central portion of the design is printed in indigo blue, and is set —about Mutuality

Mutuality and progress began in the Garden of Eden, and ever since, have ridden the bumps, hand in hand, in spite of their worst enemy, "Procrastination." Now, frankly, where would we all be today had old Father Adam procrastinated and where they were then, and worst of all, OLD DOMINION APPROVALS in all probability, would be selling Fig Leaf cancellations to the angelic Adam in compensation to the serpent's grand array of specialized watermarks and attractive shades. Surely, such a catastrophe, so narrowly averted, should bring home to you the immediate necessity of eliminating, like our ancestor did, procrastination from your vocabulary, and counsel writing us at once for one of our specialized approval sendings. One good lot compels another and each one will emphasize what MUTUALITY is, when applied to modern stamp dealing and OLD DOMINION APPROVALS in particular. You can't improve upon RETURN POST!

This stamp in the same design and ors made its appearance on the new er watermarked Script CA multiple, or about November 4, 1921. The nge of paper was not officially nord, and so far as is now known, it s first issued from the Cross Roads
O. on the date named.

The Twopence Half-Penny stamp was ed on February 18, 1921, on white er watermarked old type CA multiple right. The design is treated in upht rectangular style, but somewhat ger than those preceding, as its asurements are 31mm x 26mm. The ing is in one sheet from an engraved te of 60 subjects, i.e., 12 x 5, perford 14 single line.

The central portion of the design is uted in deep blue, which on some mps has the appearance of grey ck, and portrays the return and land-of one of the Contingents from ive service abroad. It is therefore, in ne sense a companion stamp to the d, and both serve to record a war vement of which Jamaica may well proud. I think, but am subject to rection, that it was the first colony in Empire to adopt conscription but not of the 12,000 men raised and sent to p in the huge Imperial task, was a script. The law was there, and registration of the male population of the Isd was carried out, but no draft was r made. These 12,000 men only bene Imperial troops, in so far as main-ance was concerned, when aboard the nsport. £1,000,000, of Great Britain's r debt was assumed by the Legislae, a free gift of sugar valued at 0,000, was sent to England, two aéro-nes were purchased and given, and a al of about £25,000 was raised for the eral funds for charity, two hospital s were endowed, and comforts of ny kinds for the sick and wounded e forwarded, and all this without the of any philatelic impost, except ½d.
d and 3d War stamps, which of urse, was primarily a tax on the popuon of the island. The Jamaica Con-gents saw service in France, Belgium, ly and Palestine. In the last named atre, they were brigaded with the New landers under Field Marshal, Lord enby, and his despatches disclose a e record for them. Their greatest t was the taking of Damieh Bridge.
l this series of stamps, attempting as does to record the fact of their participation in the war, is strangely remiss

Hammondsport, N. Y.

in not featuring their greatest military achievement, which in a plethora of great deeds, has been deemed worthy of record by the military authorities.

The frame of the stamp is printed in blue, lighter in shade than the centre, at the top appears the word "Jamaica," in white block letters set in a curve on a lined ground, on both sides the value
"2½d" is printed in blue on a small white square set in another lightly shaded. At left and right are draped Union Jacks, that on the left appears as a distress signal, the flag is upside down. Below the vignette are the words "Return of a contingent 1919" in small coloured letters. At left and right are white rectangles on which the words "Postage,"
"Revenue," appear respectively, in tall thin coloured letters; between are two flags crossed, and above them is the dove of Peace.

The error of the flag was admitted by the Crown Agents as theirs for having passed the proof, and they engaged to have a new die prepared at their expense; we may therefore assume that the original drawing, which was made in Jamaica, was correct.

Varieties of watermark, inverted, reversed, are known, and many sheets show a surface bluing of the paper.

About November 4th, the stamp was noted as on issue at the Cross Roads
P. O., on the new script paper, but no official notification of the change appeared. The only official record of the stamp, deals with its first issue, and appears in the Gazette of February 17, 1921, as follows:

"Stamp Office, Kingston, 15th Feby., 1921.

The following is a description of a 2½d adhesive stamp to be used for postage and revenue purposes. This stamp will be put into circulation on Friday, 18th February, 1921.

The design of the stamp is denoted by a representation of a contingent returning from active service.

The denomination 2½d is shown in a square at the top of the design, in left and right corners. Between the denomination is printed "Jamaica." Under the design are the words and figures "Return of a Contingent 1919." At the bottom to the left the word "Postage" is printed on a label, and to the right, also on a label, "Revenue" and between these are flags crossed and a dove above.

On each side of the design is a Union Jack. The colour of the stamp is blue.

C. C. MANTON,
Deputy Stamp Commissioner.

The Three Penny stamp was issued on April 7, 1921, on white paper, watermarked old type CA multiple upright.
The design is treated in transverse rectangular style, printed in one sheet from an engraved plate of 80 subjects,
i.e., 8 x 10, perforated 14 single line.

The central portion of the design is printed in deep green, and depicts the landing of Columbus at Jamaica, said to have been on May 3, 1494. The spot is claimed by some to have been St.
Anns Bay, by others Dry Harbour, but as the two points are relatively close to each other, and there are the remains of a very old Spanish settlement at a place called Seville, which is between the two disputed points, the point of actual landing may have been this, in any case it is not philatelically important. In 1503, when on his fourth and last voyage, Columbus was forced through illness, to spend twelve months in the same vicinity, and thus began the Spanish colonization of the island. Their administration may not be dealt with here, but it will be of interest to note that under their rule the indigenous Arawak Indian disappeared, and under the British occupation has not been known, and until the appearance of the current 1d stamp, were only noted as supporters to the arms of the colony.

The centre described, is set in a frame printed in blue, which varies to ultramarine. At the top, and forming partial border is a row of ten pineapples, at both ends of this is a shield on which is a white circle in which is printed the value
"3d," the shields being supported by crossed branches of laurel. Between these, "Jamaica" is printed in white block letters, and immediately below, "Postage Revenue," in white letters of varying size arranged in a curve to conform to the top of the vignette. The sides are made up of ornamented panels giving the effect of a moulding, and immediately below the vignette are the words and figures, "Jamaica discovered by Columbus, 1494" in small white letters and figures, below this is another partial border of twelve pineapples, the mould-

NEWS GLEANINGS.

—We have received the official prospectus of the Winnipeg stamp exhibition and philatelic convention to be held September 17-20, inclusive 1924, at the Marlborough Hotel, under the auspices of the Winnipeg Philatelic Society, Manitoba, Canada. The program is one that gives a variety of information about the forthcoming exhibition and meeting, and judging from the news of the exhibition awards, the success of the display is assured. The president of the society says that an adequate number of exhibits is anticipated, and he gives thanks to the Yorkton Stamp Society who held a meritorious exhibition last year for that society's co-operation. We believe that the forthcoming affair will have the effect of giving even greater stability to philately in the public mind than ever before, in Canada.

—Lest it be thought that all our readers are of the opinion that philately will stand all the advertising of a proper kind that it is successful in getting, we wish to quote from a letter that we received some time ago, as follows: "I readily understand that you and those who have a professional or financial interest in philately can use all manner of persuasion naturally enough, to induce collectors to spread the gospel, as you have had it, but it does seem something to marvel at that so many collectors are willing to go to the trouble to induce outsiders to take up stamps. Personally, I feel that I owe philately nothing so long as I pay for such stamps, that I may get and which I may collect in the manner that suits me best. The rousing cries to rally to the support of collecting leave me cold, and I suppose that there are a few collectors like myself who are not particularly in favor of the broadcasting of philately. Yet there is room enough for all of us, and I suppose that we can get along in all our varieties of opinions without serious quarrels." It probably escapes our friend that a good many collectors, feeling that they get a real pleasure out of stamp collecting have the impulse to share their enjoyment with others. Hence, their wish to present a possibility for pleasure to those who know nothing of our pursuit.

—Mr. Charles S. Smack, of St. Louis, was a visitor recently to Chicago, and while Mr. Smack recently sold his collection of U. S. stamps, he retained a host of other countries and we suspect it will not be long before he again is after our own stamps, as well.

—Under date of July 17, 1924, the following notice was sent out by the International Bureau of the Universal Postal Union, advising accession of the Union of Socialistic Soviet Republics,

Russia, to that body in the following words: "I have the honor to inform you that, by note under date of June 24, 1924, the Swiss Federal Council notified the governments of the countries of the Postal Union of the accession of the Union of Socialistic Soviet Republics (Russia) to the Universal Postal Convention concluded at Madrid, on November 30, 1920. The note adds that the accession should be considered as effective June 24, 1924. —PAUL HENDERSON, Second Assistant Postmaster General."

—The Postmaster-General in line with acquainting the public with the advisability of patronizing the air mail is issuing various notices telling of the advantages of the service. In reference to the several complaints that we received regarding the unsatisfactory stamping with special postmark or otherwise of the air mail first flight, we refer those who have written, to the opening paragraphs in the notice submitted to the public by Postmaster-General Harry S. New under date of July 16, 1924, as given in our Chronicle columns of this issue.

—The Stamp Lovers League, composed of the following clubs, Philatelic Society of Hudson County, Philatelic Society of the Oranges, Newark Stamp Club, Rutherford Stamp Club, Passaic Stamp Club, Brooklyn Stamp Club, Workmans Stamp Club and Yorkville Stamp Club, will hold their quarterly meeting at the Park Hotel, East Rutherford, N. J., on Monday evening, August 18. The Rutherford Stamp Club has prepared an elaborate program for the entertainment of the delegates and all stamp collectors are cordially invited to attend. Charles M. Ams, the well-known Gambia specialist, has promised to exhibit his collection. Any information that may be desired as to the activities of the League or the Rutherford Club will be furnished by the president, W. O. Stabe, 89 Feronia Way, Rutherford, N. J.

Some of our subscribers need to know our rule regarding discontinuances. We discontinue all subscriptions in arrears promptly the second issue of each month. This means that your subscription should be renewed prior to expiration. The expiration number can be ascertained by consulting your wrapper. No free copies of the WEEKLY are sent out and this rule is as fixed as the laws of the M. and P. Our older subscribers understand our rule and the newer subscribers should get acquainted with it.

THE BI-MONTHLY JOURNAL

A stamp publication distinctly different from anything you have ever seen before.

The July-August issue consists of 36 large pages, profusely illustrated, with a complete line of packets, sets, dealers' stocks, combination lots, philatelic supplies, good collections, etc.

Also a 4-page adventure story about stamps, editorial comment regarding the philatelic scandal-mongers, photographs of our Wholesale Approval Department and a wealth of other interesting reading.

Albert C. Munson, 412 Broadway, Houston, Texas, writes:

"I enjoy the Bi-Monthly as much as MEKEEL'S; there is no other paper, house organ, journal or circular of any kind wherein one can find such extraordinarily good stamps—and at such reasonable prices."

MODERN MALTESE.

By W. E. HUGHES.

Readers will apprehend, I feel sure that I do not lack any appreciation of other excellent and interesting items in the Philatelic Magazine if I confess, I must, to an especial thrill of pleasure when I find therein an article "Philatelia" on the "Market in Modern Colonials."

Some little time ago I was fortunate enough to visit Malta and, since then, have felt kindly towards the issue of this small but important section of the British Overseas Dominions. Malta is a self-governing community, and the loyalty of the inhabitants to the other peoples of the British Empire is undoubted.

To my knowledge, I have not seen "Philatelia" in the flesh, so that I am more pleased to find that he and I are in agreement as to the scarcity of some of the more recent issues. The granting of the status of self-government was highly appreciated in Malta, and the consequence was that, when the stamps were overprinted to celebrate this important occurrence in Maltese history, the local demand was considerable, and the stamps without overprint were neglected. Large numbers of stamps are used in Malta for fiscal purposes, even price tickets in shop windows having to bear stamps of from 1/4d upwards. The P. O. people realize that the local demand would be large and overprinted the great bulk of their stock, which, at the time, was fairly considerable.

I had not noticed what "Philatelia" points out, namely, that the ever-watery Yvert catalogues the MCA 25c without overprint at 150 francs, but I am not surprised. Michel, the German in his 1924 catalogue refers to this stamp as the most elusive of modern Maltese stamps, and it is the only one he does not price. He quotes a price for the rare 10sh MCA, but not for this 25c MCA without overprint.

The values which were on sale in Malta during the currency of the "Se Government" issue were:

Without overprint—
CC 10sh.
MCA 1/4d, 2 1/2d, 2d, 6d 1sh (emerald throughout), 2sh, 2s6d, 5sh.
Script, 1/4d, 1/2d, 1d, 2d, 2 1/2d, 6d, 2s 10sh.

The 10sh CC had been originally issued in 1899 and thus had a long run, but it will be remembered that in 1919 the 10sh MCA was issued to the extent of 1530 copies (according to the Postmaster's letter to Whitfield King & Co. and after these were sold out there were no 10sh of any sort available at Malta).

Wanted U. S. 10c 1857, Nos. 49 and 50, Singles, Pairs, Strips and Blocks. Will buy for cash or what other U. S. you might need. A. H. SCHUMACHER (A.P.S. 4653) Harold Ave., Houston, Texas

ne MCA values had mostly been lable for a long time, excepting the orange-buff and the 1sh emerald hroughout, which had been put on sale less than a month before the over-ving. Still, it is very like human re to find that nobody thinks any-g of a stamp until it is hard to come and many of the MCA without overt are undervalued even today from scarcity point of view, and this is cially so with the 3d orange-buff and emerald throughout, which are un-non without the overprint. It must remembered that so long as one could stamps at the Malta Post Office there little inducement for dealers either or at Valletta to lay out money in a t which would carry no interest, so is one reason why the "Self Govern-" overprinting caught the market
t of stock, and once the P.O. stock overprinted there was no chance for rs to replenish, as the supply was off at the source.

to the scripts, the 1/4d, 1/2d, 2 1/2d, sh and 10sh were all new. The 1d
t was on sale first during December,
The others (excepting the 2d) out even later. The 2d was issued in 1921 and had by far the longest of all. For a common value it is ably relatively scarce mint, as a consignment in April, 1922, was sold as a 2d value but overprinted farthing," owing to a shortage of atter value. The 2 1/2d script is com-overprinted, as 204,000 were treated but I have not seen a 2 1/2d script out overprint in used condition. No t they exist that way, and I merely ion it to show that the 2 1/2d script is bly undervalued like the rest. The ript without the overprint is a good p, and so is the 2sh. The 10sh script out overprint is something of a dark ad, and speaking in the language of market place, may go to quite high s. So, altogether, there are quite a er of recent K.G. Malta items with ct possibilities.
th regard to "War Tax" stamps I no interest in these, but am cond that if handled properly they l improve in value. It is nobody's

UNITED STATES CANCELLATIONS.
By F. O. SELIANOFF.

Before continuing on Group 3, I wish to remark; that it is not quite clear why there should be a tendency of leaving a gap of ten years in the 19th century cancellations, when 1900 is practically the end of all such cancellations. True, there may be collectors who do not collect as late as the 20th century; some collect only sixties, others the seventies and so on. Later, I shall by illustrations, show that the '93 Columbian and the later issues have as fine an assortment of cancellations as in any of the prior issues.

Cancellations in all groups from 1 to 40 are to be found in black, blue, violet, magenta, purple, ultramarine, red, pink, orange and green.

GROUP 3.—SQUARES.

They are in various dimensions, broken, in frames, with ornaments and in combination, etc.; small solid square, reversed inside a larger square, small square in a broken circle, 4 squares in a block; 6 squares x 6 triangles in a circle; colorless square in a large square surrounded by four triangle blocks; large square with open center; very large solid square; large square with round colorless center surrounded by 4 oblongs and 4 small corner squares; 4 squares with colorless square in the center; 2 small squares and two spearheads, one arrow with four tails two lines, one oval; small square inside a larger square cut up in diagonal lines; square with colorless square in center surrounded by four short lines; small colorless square in solid square surrounded by a curved frame (very rare); large square with colorless center, Wash., D. C.; large solid square Sta. B Phila.; square (solid) Atsion, N. H. (rare). It is estimated that there are about 100 varieties on all issues from 1861.

GROUP 4—DIAMONDS (Playing Card Canc.)
This cancellation is better known than the previous: in single and double (rare); 4, 6, 8 like the more common ones; 4 diamonds and 4 spades set in circle (very rare); 4 diamonds in circle divided in the middle, the division resembling a white cross, N. Y.; Single solid diamond, Humelstown, Pa. (rare); diamond same as New York, Evergreen, Cal. (obsolete); 6 diamonds in a circle, New Orleans; 8 diamonds, New York, 4 diamonds, San Francisco; 5 diamonds, Ridgefield, Conn., 1858 (rare); 7 small diamonds, North Baltimore, Ohio; 8 diamonds, Waterbury and New Orleans; single diamond between two solid triangles; 4 diamonds divided in center and surrounded by ornaments; diamond with open center; diamond with round colorless center; 8 small diamonds in circle set wide apart; 4 diamonds arranged so as to form a cross; 6 diamonds surrounded by 12 arrows; diamond set in two ovals leaving small openings at the end of the diamonds cut up with horizontal lines (rare); 4 diamonds in a broken circle, N. Y. On all issues since '61, about 100 varieties.

GROUP 5—TRIANGLES.

Different sizes and combinations: Triangle, open center Wash., D. C.; double ditto, Wash., D. C.; triangle in circle, Pickford, Mich. (rare); solid triangle, Gilroy, Cal. (rare); diamond, open center same as Wash., Colchester, Conn. (rare); 4 large triangles, 2 with open centers and 2 with colorless line, Chicago, Ill.; small triangle in large round block, Sewickley, Pa. (rare); neat triangle in circle, (?)ick, Ind.; triangle small; solid triangle in center; 4 triangles, the ends

EDITORIAL.

We have had a visit from Mr. George H. Grinnell, Los Angeles, California, whose fame as one of the principals in the great Hawaiian Missionary Stamp case is writ in indelible ink and for the better part of a day we listened to his story detailing his course of procedure to establish the genuineness of his stamps. That Mr. Grinnell has been indefatigable in his efforts to prove his case is shown by revelations since the decision of the court that the stamps were not what they purported to be. Assistance comes to Mr. Grinnell from all quarters, since the interest in the case is universal and we are impressed by the systematic manner in which he is conducting his canvass and with results that he has obtained. Speaking with authority based on documentary evidence, he says: "Mrs. Hannah Child Shattuck was the mother of the man who gave me the stamps. She was born in Nelson, New Hampshire, in 1806. Mrs. John S. Emerson, a missionary to Honolulu, was Ursula Sophia Newell, born in Nelson, New Hampshire, in 1806. Her father was Reverend Gad Newell and Mrs. Shattuck's father was Amos Child, who was a selectman of Nelson, New Hampshire. At that time, the population of Nelson was less than 150. I have just received a letter from the son of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Emerson, missionary to Honolulu, in which the son says that he has in his possession his mother's diary and he finds in it, this entry. We do not make an attempt to quote the memoranda literally, even though we shall use quotation marks: "October 9, 1835. Upon visiting Honolulu, I received a package containing infant's clothing, together with a bit of paper attached, saying that the bundle was from Hannah Child Shattuck. This little memento from my dear friend and school companion was very pleasant to receive, as it showed that she had not forgotten me, but I do not know from whence it came. I presume, however, from Pepperell, Mass., and I will enclose a letter in the box going forward to you this season and ask you to forward the letter to her if you know where she is." Mr. Emerson goes on to say that he has no doubt but that the receipt of this little present from his mother's former school companion and friend was the beginning of a correspondence that was continued until after the stamps in question were issued. It is only fair to Mr. Grinnell to say that he has a much better basis for

It is evident that the complaints that collectors have lodged with the Department against the removal of stamps, particularly from foreign mails, are being given attention by the Department. Earlier in the year, the Department issued an order in which the practice was stigmatized as being particularly reprehensible and postal employees were cautioned in no uncertain terms against removing postage stamps from any class of mail. The fact that the Department then, said that complaints were increasing rather than decreasing may be attributed to the fact that collectors, asserting their rights, acquainted the authorities with this petty form of thievery when they experienced it. At the time, postmasters were requested to take any necessary steps to secure the mail matter from violation through the removal of stamps. Latterly, we called attention to an exasperating case, where the Walloon stamps were taken from an envelope that had been registered to a collector from the Washington philatelic agency. We assume that the Department has taken cognizance of this complaint and it has again advised postmasters in the large cities, at any rate, asking that employees give attention to the ruling of the Department in regard to safeguarding the stamps; and now clerks and carriers when handling foreign mails, where the absence of stamps is noticeable, are instructed to call the attention of their supervisors at once to the irregularity before the mails are sent out or delivered. Collectors, as the ones who are the chief sufferers from this form of pilfering are really very tolerant and so long as they know that disciplinary measures are in force will be satisfied that the Department does not rest easily under conditions that are indifferent to the removal of the stamps. As postal employees become aware of the fact that the offense is viewed with gravity by the authorities, they no doubt will heed the rule which in some cases, no doubt, is broken unknowingly.

The Department is doing much to make popular the use of air mail, and post masters have been the recipients of a sheet, bearing the following words, that they are requested to place in the lobby: "Air Mail. The words 'Air Mail and Also Adequate Postage' must be placed on all mail going to any part of the journey by the New York to San Francisco air mail route. Harry S. New, Postmaster-General." We have received a number of statistics showing that the first flight was well patronized, but it is now necessary to ensure a regular usage of this means of transportation if it is to be successful. We have no doubt that when the public becomes aware of the fact that the convenience afforded by this method is often to be quoted in dollars, it will rally to the support of the air mail and give it the patronage that it so well deserves. We understand that the future has in store a number of supplementary routes that will act as feeders for the main line. "In line with the intention of the Department to give publicity to the air mail, we acknowledge the receipt from Mr. H. F. Rech, of Chicago, of a copy of the new cancellation used on the first day in Chicago, July 18, which shows a picture of an airship with the inscription, "Air Mail saves time." This cancellation is a striking one, and we have no doubt that the effect of the marking will be such as to stimulate interest in and use of the air mail.

A stamp dealer calls attention to some of the experiences that he has had in dealing with collectors who buy the cheapest stamps, and while many of the instances that he cites are interesting and amusing, the following objection that he names does not fall under the classification aforesaid. He asks, what is smaller than the chap who substitutes stamps on the approval sheet made up wholly of stamps priced at one cent each. He says that often he finds substitutions on sheets of these stamps and not alone are poorer specimens placed in the spaces occupied by the better ones, but that sometimes the common two cent U. S. stamp is given the place of the other stamp. Of course, many of the offenders are boys who, however, should be just as careful in observing the rules of right as their elders, even though stamps of small value are involved. It may not be known that the various protective associations maintained by dealers have a way of keeping rather close watch on the record of stamp buyers, be they young or old in years, and that they will find that a breach of good conduct will be placed against them. It is only to be expected that irregularities of any kind will be subjected to more condemnation as years go by than they have been heretofore because as the necessity for transacting business on an approved scale is emphasized, methods will improve affecting both the buyer and the seller. Europe is pretty well organized in this regard, and it is only a question of time before the dealing interests combine to make their business worthy of the high regard by handling customers according to the most advanced principles, with corresponding demand that custom observe the rules of fairness in their relations with those from whom they buy stamps.

It has been said that the American dealer has been at fault in handling business from Central Europe and that he has something to answer for in the treatment of some of the European dealers. We have received many complaints about the carelessness or weakness of our dealers in transactions that have been entered into with dealers in Central Europe, in particular, and while we have spoken at different times about the record that some of the dealers there have made, complaint, yet we are glad that we say with sincerity that many of the controversies that arose when the European were so free in sending their wares to dealers in this country arose from misunderstanding. Business methods vary in different countries, of course, and it is sometimes not easy to get on common ground when the two concerned are nations whose business methods seem to be at variance. In some cases, the question of honesty was not involved so much as the manner of procedure, and we have a clear idea was not had by both parties to the deal as to the exact nature of the chances for differences were manifested. Latterly, a period of adjustment seems to have succeeded the somewhat chaotic conditions that were in vogue some years ago, and we believe that a better feeling is now existing between middle European dealers and our own than has been the case for some time past. It takes no little patience when a long time is required for the completion of a transaction, and in some cases there have been called to our attention, among comedies have been caused by crossing of letters to and fro, in explanation of the position of the two persons in argument. As the philatelic world comes closer knit in its component parts, much of the disorganization that follows foreign business will disappear, and between the dealers of any standing who ever, the difficulty of interchange will gradually decrease.

We now speak for the last time of the necessity of members to decide once about attending the conventions in Detroit. We believe that some who thought of going will find that circumstances flatly oppose their intention, and the consequence is that they will not be present when the convention is called to order. To make up for these omissions it will be necessary that some who have been undecided about going to Detroit make their decision favorably. The at-

The Third Assistant Postmaster-Gen- l has just issued an order asking tmasters to withhold from sale for purpose and "to report the quantities the department in order that proper osition thereof may be authorized" he six cents, sixteen cents and twenty- r cents airplane stamps of the 1918 e. It is directed that postmasters ll be careful not to withdraw from r report quantities of the new air stamps now being used on the air route between New York and San nisco. The reason given by the de- tment for the withholding of the nps of the 1918 issue is a desire to id confusion in the postal service ough the sale of the 1918 issue for ment of postage on mail matter in- led for the new transcontinental air l service.

THE MELON CUTTING

300 DIFFERENT "SLICES" "THE BEST YET" $1.02

Of course you have bought packets before. Almost every reader of MEKEEL'S has bought one or another of our "M.C.'s." Nevertheless, we believe that THE MELON CUTTING sets a new mark in packets. 300 fine stamps that catalog $12.00 and more are not easy to gather together. There are no torn stamps, no stamps with "bar canes" or pen cancellations, no U. S. or Canada, no reprints, NO TRASH of any kind. When we say that The Melon Cutting catalogs $12.00, we use Scott's 1924 edition for all the "slices" listed therein and figure 2c each for the many stamps contained in The Melon Cutting and which had not been issued when Scott's 1924 Cat. went to press. HERE IS REAL VALUE FOR $1.02.

We had expected to tell you how THE MELON CUTTING was conceived of, and remind you that two years ago we created "A New Thing." There are many things that we might tell you about THE MELON CUTTING. The best way to tell you how good this "M.C." is—is to show you one. Send that $1.02 today.

THE MIGHTY CONVENTION 102 BLOCKS FROM MANY COUNTRIES $2.04

field widened as subsequent issues come forth. Furthermore those cheaply and easily acquired blocks will later be property difficult to duplicate even if possible.

Many collectors of long standing are turning their attention to blocks, that is to say they continue to collect singles of obsolete issues but intend to collect only used blocks of four of current and future issues, believing that this will be the principal way of collecting in the future. There is a solid appearance in a set of stamps composed wholly of blocks of four and the owner experiences a feeling that he possesses something that everybody has not nor will be able to obtain after the issue becomes obsolete. What pleasure is there in having something that anybody else can get, he argues. This is how these collectors look upon a block collection. And there is something sound in their argument.

I know a block collector in Massachusetts who is frantically writing to all the leading dealers in the world as well as advertising, trying to get four or five denominations in used blocks of four of a certain set that was current two years ago which he could have got then at face value but neglected to do so. Of the higher values of the set, of which the highest is only $1.00, I believe there are absolutely no hopes of his finding. I feel confident that used blocks of four of them do not exist. Of the unused there are blocks in plenty and to spare everywhere, but unused blocks have no higher value than the single stamp plus four. He is offering up to 10 times face value for each of several of the denominations knowing that he can sell at this figure and perhaps more any time he may wish to realize cash for them, as not only he but many others are interested in the used blocks. He has spent more in advertising and postage than the blocks themselves would have cost him when current. Suppose he does find one or more what rapture in the capture!

If there is a block club in existence I for one have never heard of it and should like a line from its secretary who is invited to write me through the editor of MEKEEL'S. If there is not such a club then a big need will be filled by its inauguration and anybody who may take up the secretaryship of same is sure of a big reward from the first day of its inception as there are no greater enthusiasts than block collectors who often have duplicates or give up collecting certain countries in favor of others, thus providing constant material for the other members.

There is no doubt that the future will reveal some marvellous collection of blocks of four by virtue of the gradual absorption of lesser collections. A considerable time, however, must elapse before somebody's block collection becomes world famous because this form of collecting is of comparative recent popularity, but the fact that many collectors can now number the blocks in their collections by thousands proves that the famous collection is on its way. These collectors are ever on the lookout for long sought items and a block club would sound to them like an El Dorado.

The commonest stamp seems to lose its cheap look when in a block of four and if you haven't yet found this out look at a well centered used block of four of the Harding 2c.

INTERNATIONAL CHAMBER OF PHILATELY.

By CHARLES M. AMS,
101 Park Av., N. Y. City.

A plan has been considered for some time by several collectors of prominence to establish a permanent International Chamber of Philately, stamp bourse, or general rendezvous for the collectors and dealers of the world, such location to be central, convenient to the hotels and transportation lines, and easily accessible. Well ventilated and light rooms of ample proportions are to be leased, comprising every convenience in the way of assembly and trading that the collector or dealer may require, with counters, a safe, etc.

It is to be a stamp center in every sense of the word, and it is proposed to establish fellowships or memberships of different classes with nominal annual fees. It is not intended that such an enterprise shall in any way compete with dealers or encroach upon their rights, in fact the commercial side of philately is not to be considered except only in so far as it pertains to the maintenance of the enterprise. Its functions are to be exclusively educational, the distribution of information helpful to the collector, etc., which advantages are more detailingly enumerated below. Other sources of income might be the renting of part of the space for auctions, a stamp bourse with a trading membership, meeting rooms and headquarters for stamp societies, etc.

To establish this movement it will be necessary for public spirited philatelists to subsidise the enterprise for a year or two until it is self supporting.

Among the advantages that such a chamber would be capable of rendering are the following:

Social intercourse and the cultivation of good fellowship.

Stamp bourse with a trading membership.

Information on new issues.

International information.

Auctions.

Stamp exhibitions.

Publishing an epitome of international auctions, classified for ready reference.

Opportunity to subscribe to international philatelic literature.

Permanent reference library—current literature on file.

Club meeting rooms to be rented to stamp societies.

SCARCE U. S. COIL

1914, 2c Die III, Sidewise, Scott's No. 453. The Die III, sidewise coil, of the 2c rotary print issue of 1914-15 on watermarked paper has always been a desirable variety, and until recently I have never had a sufficient number of this stamp to be able to offer it publicly. It will be recalled that just as these Die III plates were going into use, that the watermark was changed—hence, the variety is not in existence in large quantities. Scott prices it at 50c.

I offer superb copies at 40c each. 75c a pair, or $1.50 for a strip of four. If you want a line pair, this can be furnished at $1.00, or a line strip of four at $1.75.

The Die I of the same stamp can be furnished at 8c for a single, 15c a pair, or 30c a strip. Line pair at 25c, and line strip at 40c.

If there is anything else that you desire in coils at the present time, I can furnish practically everything with the exception of the early rarer varieties.

United States.Norse-American Centennial Stamps.

In my notes of a few weeks back, reference was made to new stamps that would be issued next year in commemoration of the landing of certain Norwegians.

I take pleasure in quoting from the Scott's Monthly Journal of July, wherein they reproduce a copy of the joint resolution, which passed both Houses of Congress, and was later signed by the President.

"In the Senate of the United States May 26 (calendar day, May 29, 1924).

Mr. Norbeck introduced the following joint resolution, which was read twice and referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

JOINT RESOLUTION

Authorizing and requesting the Postmaster-General to design and issue a special postage stamp to commemorate the arrival in New York, on October 9, 1825, of the sloop Restaurationen, bearing the first shipload of immigrants to the United States from Norway; and in recognition of the Norse-American Centennial celebration in 1925.

Whereas, the sloop Restaurationen—the 'Mayflower' of the Norsemen—on July 4, 1825, sailed out of Stavanger Harbor, Norway, with fifty-two emigrants on board; and

Whereas, this vessel, after a perilous and romantic voyage through the British Channel and by the way of the island Maderia, reached the port of New York, on October 9, 1825; and

Whereas, the coming of the sloop Restaurationen with her human cargo to our shores is to be commemorated by a centennial celebration at Minneapolis, Minn., in June, 1925, which centennial is also to be observed by descendants of the Norsemen throughout the United States: Therefore be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Postmaster-General is authorized, and he is hereby requested, to design and issue a special postage stamp of the denomination of 2 cents in commemoration of the arrival in New York, on October 9, 1825 (sic), of the sloop Restaurationen, bearing the first shipload of immigrants to the United States from Norway, and in recognition of the Norse-American Centennial celebration in June, 1925."

In this country we have an extensive and varied ancestry. So far we have only commemorated a few of them. If all the others demand celebration issues our Post Office Department will be kept busy for a long time to come. We must not forget the German who brought beer and sauerkraut to Hoboken, the Irish who police our streets and boss our politics, the first organ grinder from Italy, the first pack-peddler from Central Europe, and a lot of other forebears. When we have finished commemorating the immigrants, we might turn to national events. Think of stamps issued to honor Mrs. O'Leary's cow that started the Chicago fire, the first tin Lizzie, Bryan's first Presidential candidacy, and the return of the White House cat!

New 10c Playing Card Stamp.

In my notes of a few weeks back, advised that the Bureau was preparing plate for the 10c playing card stamps to be used to pay tax on playing cards in accordance with the tax law of 1924 recently signed by the President.

Prof. M. Lewy kindly favors us with the first copy of this stamp that has come to our attention, and we find it similar in size to the former small Class A stamp printed in the same deep blue, rouletted and somewhat similar in design. In center, we have in large figures enclosed within a white circle "10." Around the bottom "Playing Cards" and the word "Cents" within a ribbon in the center at the bottom. Across the top find "U. S. I. R." and in the four corners we find a diamond, heart, club, spade.

Transcontinental Air Mail.

It seems that the Post Office Department has received quite a little complaint regarding the carrying of mail via Air Mail route, in view of the fact that communications sent forward on which the extra postage has been paid, are being carried by rail. It is my opinion that this is due to the fact that the 8c stamp is in green, similar to the 1c, and the 24c is in red, similar to the 2c, and in handling mail quickly the postmaster's attention is not attracted to the stamp. This is especially so as its size is similar to the ordinary stamp.

The Postal Bulletin of July 17th contains the following notice:

"Office of the Postmaster-General
WASHINGTON, July 16, 1925

The department is receiving reports showing that mail intended for dispatch via air mail with special postage paid, being erroneously handled and dispatched by rail transportation.

The attention of all postal employees is again invited to previous instructions given, and postmasters are urged to give this their special attention, seeing that all mail intended for air-mail dispatch conspicuously indorsed or stamped with the words 'Air mail,' whether special air mail stamps or their equivalent are used. These words should be placed immediately above the address near the right hand side.

Letters fully prepaid at air mail rate must be kept in air transportation so as it is expedient to do so, and except when made only where origin or destination is off of air route. In advising the public as to proper postage rates, postmasters may give advantage of first or second zone rates, if mail can be forwarded by rail in ample time for connection with planes at intermediate point on route, thus securing same time of delivery at destination. The zone rates cover all postage required where office of dispatch or delivery is off of air mail route, thus requiring rail transportation.

If postal employees are urged to cooperate to the fullest possible extent to ensure the public receiving the service they pay for, and thus are entitled to receive. Special reports must be made of all errors in handling or dispatch of mail letters by those receiving same en route or at destination.

HARRY S. NEW,
Postmaster-General.

On the back page of the same bulletin is a large notice, which postmasters are requested to post in the lobbies of the post-offices for the general public. The notice reads as follows:

"AIR MAIL"

The words "AIR MAIL" and also adequate postage, must be placed on all mail requiring any part of its journey by the New York to San Francisco Air Mail route.

HARRY S. NEW,
Postmaster-General.

POSTMASTERS—Please keep this posted in the lobby.

Mr. Carl F. Egge, General Superintendent of the Air Mail Service, in his report submitted to the Second Assistant Postmaster-General under date of July 1, advises that despite several severe tropical storms, service over the transatlantic air mail route continued without a default of a single mile from July 1 to July 15th inclusive.

Mr. Egge called attention to the fact that air mail planes during that period flew 80,000 miles, of which 26,550 were flown at night over the 885 mile artificially lighted airway between Chicago and Cheyenne.

The Department has announced that extra postage beyond the regular air postage will be required on mail addressed to foreign countries where the postage rate is applicable. To countries where the International rate applies, the air mail postage will be held as covering the portion of the postage fee accruing to the United States, and only three additional will be required for the ounce and one cent for each additional ounce or fraction thereof.

The Department is under the impression that a re-alignment of world mail rates will be brought about as a result of the establishment of the new transatlantic air mail service. European routes now routed via the Suez Canal for Africa and the Orient may be diverted to New York, which oftentimes will shorten transit time as much as two weeks.

AFGHANISTAN.—The Philatelic Magazine informs us that although the old kingdom of Afghanistan still remains aloof from the Universal Postal Union, it continues to issue new postage stamps. One lately has been issued of the design, including the plumed helmet worn by the Amir, crossed swords and a laurel wreath. Its face value is 10 paise, and it is intended to commemorate the sixth anniversary of the accession of the Amir Amanullah.

ALGERIA.—Four further values are to hand from Mr. Denton Hepworth, viz.:—Overprinted "ALGERIE" on contemporary adhesives of France: 10c green (Pasteur) (overprint in black); 25c blue (Sower) (overprint in red); 50c blue (Pasteur) (overprint in red); 1fr lake and green (Merson type) (overprint in black).—Stamp Collecting.

BARBUDA.—According to advices received by the Philatelic Magazine the project of special stamps has been abandoned and Barbuda will revert to the general Leeward Islands issue without overprint.

BRUNEI.—Mr. Lees informs us that his last consignment of the 10c purple on yellow, CA, are on orange-yellow paper, which includes varieties with watermark inverted and reversed.—Stamp Collecting.

FRENCH COLONIES.—An awful avalanche has broken out in the shape of sixteen different provisionals of the denomination of 25c on 2fr and fifteen 25c on 5fr—thirty-one in all, examples of which are just to hand from Messrs. Whitfield King & Co. They comprise the following:—

(Surcharged in black, except where stated otherwise.)

Cameroon.—Surcharged on current pictorial adhesive (Moyen Congo overprinted "CAMEROUN"): 25c on 2fr carmine and olive-green; 25c on 5fr blue-grey and vermilion.

Dahomey.—Surcharged on pictorial type of 1913: 25c on 2fr chocolate and orange-yellow.

Guadeloupe.—Surcharged on pictorial type of 1905-07: 25c on 5fr blue on orange.

Guiana.—Surcharged on pictorial type of 1904-07: 25c on 2fr blue.

Guinea.—Surcharged on pictorial type of 1913: 25c (in red) on 2fr brown and dull orange; 25c on 5fr blue and black.

Ivory Coast.—Surcharged on pictorial

Madagascar.—Surcharged on pictorial type of 1908: 25c on 2fr olive and blue; 25c on 5fr chocolate and violet.

Martinique.—Surcharged on ethnographic type of 1908-09: 25c on 2fr purple-brown and grey; 25c (in blue) on 5fr purple-brown and venetian red.

Mauritania.—Surcharged on pictorial type of 1913: 25c on 2fr violet and red-orange.

New Caledonia.—Surcharged on ship type of 1905-07: 25c on 2fr carmine on azure; 25c on 5fr black on orange.

Niger Coast.—Surcharged on (provisional) pictorial type of 1921: 25c (in red) on 2fr blue and green; 25c (in red) on 5fr black and violet.

Oceanic Settlements.—Surcharged on pictorial type of 1913-15: 25c on 2fr green and brown; 25c on 5fr blue and violet.

Reunion.—Surcharged on pictorial type of 1907: 25c on 5fr sepia and rose.

St. Pierre and Miquelon.—Surcharged on ship type of 1909: 25c (in blue) on 2fr brown and violet; 25c (in blue) on 5fr grey-green and brown.

Senegal.—Surcharged on ethnographic type of 1914: 25c on 5fr violet and green.

Somali Coast.—Surcharged on pictorial type of 1915: 25c on 5fr black and rose-red.

Togo.—Surcharged on (provisional) pictorial type of 1921: 25c on 2fr carmine and olive; 25c on 5fr black and yellow.

Upper Volta.—Surcharged on (provisional) pictorial type of 1920: 25c on 2fr blue and green; 25c on 5fr black and violet.

Wallis and Futuna Islands.—Surcharged on (provisional) ship type of 1920: 25c on 2fr carmine on azure; 25c on 5fr black on buff.

LIECHTENSTEIN.—Supplementing the announcement in our last issue, the Times recalls that prior to January, 1912, Austrian stamps alone were on sale at Vaduz, the capital, but in that year separate vignettes were introduced, bearing a portrait of the ruling Prince Johann. New stamps were substituted in 1918, 1920 and 1921, making a total of more than 70 varieties issued by the principality to date. Since January, 1921, the management of the Liechtenstein postal service has been entrusted to the Swiss post-office department, and the stamps now current have their values expressed in rappen and francs, instead of heller and kronen, as in the case of previous issues. They are the work of the Viennese artist, Luigi Casimir, and the vignettes depict views in and around Vaduz.

Provisional. Meanwhile Der Postwertzeichen Sammler records a provisional: "5" in red on 7 1/2c deep blue.—Philatelic Magazine.

LIBYA.—Messrs. Whitfield King & Co. show us the pictorial quartette described last week, the colours of which are: 20c green, 40c brown, 60c blue, 2 lire red.—Stamp Collecting.

MACAO.—The currency of the five values enumerated in our March 29th issue is, of course, in avos, and not centavos as indicated. Continental correspondents report issue of seven more, viz.:—1 1/2 avos yellow-green, 4 1/2 avos saffron, 14 avos purple, 32 avos chocolate, 58 avos claret, 3 patacas pale blue, and 5 patacas red.—Stamp Collecting.

RUSSIA.—Dues. In addition to the 1, 3 and 12 kopeks surcharged on Kerensky stamps, chronicled on May 31, Der Postwertzeichen Sammler lists: 5, 10, 32 and 40 kopeks on 45sk blue.—Philatelic Magazine.

SWITZERLAND.—Our Ipswich friends send us three provisional Postage Dues, viz.:—Postage Due type of 1910; original value obliterated by new denomination in black figures in red frame, 10 on 1c, 10 on 3c, 20 on 50c.—Stamp Collecting.

TRANS-JORDANIA.—Commemorative. On the occasion of the visit of the King of the Hejaz to Trans-Jordania, the Briefmarken Rundschau states that the already-overprinted stamps were disfigured with a further three-line inscription commemorating the occasion: 1/2 piastre, red; 1 piastre, blue; 1 1/2 piastres, violet; 2 piastres, orange. The issue consisted of 9805 sets, which were sold out in three hours.—Philatelic Magazine.

YUGO-SLAVIA.—A new series is in preparation, which, except for 20 and 50 paras, will only contain dinar values.—Philatelic Magazine.

ESSAYS of the old CLASSICAL STAMPS of the EARLY ISSUES of SPAIN up to the so called DON CARLOS STAMPS which are included

WE ARE KEEPING OF THE SAME

The Finest Collection Existing in the World

The said ESSAYS, which I could acquire only by chance, belonged to Mr. Moens, the oldest stamp dealer of the world, who no doubt may be considered as the symbol of the philately.

There are many ESSAYS which are lacking in the biggest specialised collections, some items are quite unique. Many in different colours and designs which are unknown since they were not adopted at the time. There are essays in lithography, engraving, typography, copper-print, embossed—printing, etc., misprints in most interesting executions. Further, the early stamps of the Deputy Chamber and the Senate, things of Andalusia, etc.

The Colonies are also represented profusely.—The forgeries are especially interesting, more particularly those of the classical issues which were made with a view only to do prejudice to the Postal administration. There are many used items, some were produced in a very sly way. In most cases the Postal administration did not notice the forgeries.

As we have stated already, the collection contains many unique pieces of which there exist but one or two copies altogether. Remarkable among the unknown proofs are the marvelous designs and colours, the fiscal, police and commercial stamps in all possible colours, including essays of the latter. The collection is of the highest interest and of an inestimable value. It contains, moreover, scarce telegraph stamps, as well as essays of the same Brief. You are offered here a unique collection really fit for purposes, containing hundreds and hundreds of different kinds. A specialist in Spanish stamps cannot do without such a collection; he must have it.

I am ready to send the collection out for examination upon request against postage should it not be possible to come to business.

Perhaps it would be possible for me to retail in the case of a considerable purchase.

SPECIALISTS, don't miss this opportunity which will not occur again by asking us at once for particulars.

PHILADELPHIA FINDS.

In Paris there is in progress the sale of Count Ferrari de la Renotiere's world-renowned stamp collection. The Count died at Lausanne in 1918. He had bequeathed his collection (valued in 1920 at $3,000,000) to the Berlin Postal Museum, but the French Government confiscated it as alien property. It had taken more than half a century to build up the treasure.

The sale began in 1920, after an American had offered $1,875,000 for the stamps and had met with a refusal. By August, 1922, four of the five divisions of the collection had been sold. Its crown jewel was the noted one-cent British Guiana stamp of 1856. King George made a bid for it in vain; it went to a Utica enthusiast for $32,000, or more than 3,000,000 times its face value.

Every great collection contains certain very valuable examples of postage stamps issued in the forefront of the last century expressly for the use of Philadelphians.

In October, 1920, at 311 Walnut St., workmen uncovered one of the most interesting philatelic "finds" ever made in this country.

In the attic were discovered moldering trunks and dilapidated boxes containing many letters addressed to William Meredith, the lawyer, who at one time was Secretary of the Treasury.

They passed into the possession of Dr. Samuel Woodhouse, of this city. Among them were a number of the "carrier envelope" stamps—not bits of paper affixed, but mere imprints with the words "U. S. P. O. Paid 1 cent." or "U. S. P. O. Dispatch. Prepaid one cent."

In conversation, Dr. Woodhouse, who is one of the directors of the Pennsylvania Museum at Memorial Hall, explained how the stamps came to be where they were.

"After a fire in 1873 in William Meredith's office, the papers were moved out on the sidewalk.

"One of his grandchildren had the papers stored in the garret of Mrs. Biddle's residence at 311 Walnut St. In conversation with this granddaughter in 1920 I learned of the existence of these letters and was allowed to examine them.

"Meredith seemed to have preserved everything in writing that ever came to him. Unfortunately, the very period at which postage stamps would have been most valuable coincided with his tenure as Secretary of the Treasury, when letters going to or from his office received the official frank and were carried postage free.

"Moreover, many stamps were in the burned furniture, and so were mutilated or destroyed.

"But I sold about a thousand dollars' worth for Mr. Meredith's granddaughter and was allowed to retain a few for my own collection, of which I have since disposed.

"This was one of the outstanding 'finds' of stamps in this city.

"But it was another great event in local philatelic annals when 'Al' Henkels, of the Fidelity Trust, a brother of Stan. V. Henkels, bought the collection of Vito Viti, who had been a prominent importer from Italy to Philadelphia about 1850.

"This treasure-trove contained innumerable letters from Italian states, such as Tuscany, which surrendered their independent jurisdiction with the unification of Italy.

"The so-called 'lira' stamps of Italy were all well known, and this was presumably the largest group of them to be found anywhere. Since then, whenever there is a record of a sale there is likely to appear the entry: 'Part of the Vito Viti collection.'

One of the most prominent among the "proprietary" post-offices in Philadelphia was established in 1845 by D. Otis Blood.

lic Ledger office. He took over a letter delivery service begun by a man named Halsey. The charge for delivering letters anywhere within the city was a cent, and several hundred letter boxes were put up at convenient points, even inside stores and public buildings.

The stamps had the device of a messenger jumping over the Merchant's Exchange cupola and other designs. Collections were made every two hours by numerous carriers. The service—which ultimately passed into the hands of Charles Kochersperger & Co.—was continued until 1861, when the postal service became a Government monopoly.—Phila. Sunday Ledger.

SELANGOR.

By R. F. HEALY.

We come to those states which were federated under the title of the Federated Malay States in 1896. Selangor, although the smallest of these, is by far the most important. Its European population, exports and less isolated townships account for this, and as the seat of the present Government is situated within the boundaries, we will take it first. The state takes its name from the Selangor River, and we hear of Bugie Malays settling at Kuala Selangor early in the eighteenth century, from which stronghold they asserted something of a dominion over the surrounding country. In later days the Malays took possession of the old Dutch fort at the mouth of the river, which was shelled by H.M.S. "Rinaldo." The appointment of a British Resident in November, 1874, brings us to the question of postage stamps, and the first of many provisionals appeared four years later.

This was the 2c brown of the Straits Settlements, watermarked Crown CC, which was overprinted with a Crescent and Star and the initial "S" within an oval. This overprint was applied both in black and in red, and the red device was also applied to the 2c brown, watermarked Crown CA. Later on we find the 2c brown and the 2c rose overprinted with a capital "S" in black. According to the catalogue, these provisionals appeared between 1878 and 1882, but really very little appears to be known about their origin, and official records are not very helpful in the matter.

The 2c brown with CC watermark was overprinted "SELANGOR" in elongated sans-serif capitals in black during 1881, and in the following year the 2c brown and 2c rose, with the CA watermark, were similarly treated. There are many varieties of setting and some of these are found on all three stamps. The general varieties common to all are wide "S"; wide "EL"; and wide "E." Then there are the varieties which are found on one and sometimes two of the provisionals, and these are as follows:—2c brown, CC: "S," "E," "A" and "N" wide; "SELAN" wide; "SEL" and "N" wide; "E," "N" and "G" wide; wide "N." 2c brown, CA: "S," "E," "A" and "N" wide; "SELAN" wide; "SEL" and "N" wide; "SEL" "N" and "G" wide; "E" and "ANG" wide; "ELANG" wide; "SE" and "N" wide; "S" and "N" wide; "S" and "A" wide. 2c rose: "E" and "A" wide; "S" and "L" wide; wide "A"; wide "L"; wide "N"; narrow "A"; narrow "L"; all letters wide.

This overprint was followed by a number of other renderings of "SELANGOR" in different type, both with and without stop, and all on the 2c rose. This appears to have been successful in using up all the 2c stamps available and to create a fresh supply of this denomination 6,000 of the 24c green of the Straits Settlements were overprinted and surcharged in three lines in varying type. There are four distinct types of this overprint and one sub-type, and it is in this last that the error "SELANGOR" exists. It was in the first printing only and occurs on the forty-fifth stamp on the pane.

These overprinted Straits stamps were in use in Selangor for nearly thirteen years, as it was not until 1891 that a definite series was prepared for use in these semi-independent states of Malaya. Apparently each state made its own requisitions, and stamps for Selangor were ordered from England in May, 1891, being on sale some four months later. These were the first of the "Tiger" designs, and show the king of the jungle pouncing out from his native element. Later we find him on other stamps, and he now adorns the white, red, yellow and black flag of the Federated Malay States; two of his family are supporters of the Arms, and there is a more or less life-like representation of him on most of the carriage doors of the F.M.S. railways. These keyplates had been prepared by Messrs. De La Rue, but, like all the Tiger designs, they were intended for local use only, Straits Settlements stamps being added if the letters were intended for other places.

1c green (October, 1891).
2c rose (October, 1891).
2c orange (May, 1895).
5c blue (October, 1891).

No three cents duty was included in this brief series, and to remedy the deficiency a number of the 5c in rose were surcharged "3 CENTS" in black, and appeared about November, 1894. There would appear to have been some demand for an 8c value too, and this denomination in the current type was announced in the philatelic press during

On the 1st July, 1896, Selangor joined the federation of Malay States, but no change was made in the stamps until the general issue was introduced in 1900. Just prior to this change, however, a one cent value was created by surcharging a number of the 50c (1895) "One cent" in one line, a single bar obliterating the original value. At the same time a shortage of the 3c denomination was filled by charging the same 50c stamp "Three cents" in two lines. There is a variety "in cents," and the 1c on 50c is to exist double.—Philatelic Magazine.

"FRANK"

By EDWIN B. HILL, Ysleta, Texas.

For C. M. Y.

It was early morning. The river was out of its banks. There was consternation in the Pass City and its environs. Wild rumors had frightened the residential section, and fears were rife that the suburbs would be inundated. Therefore, I put spurs to the flivver, and hiked down the valley to make the usual studies in determining the volume of water passing a certain point. The flood had not reached the station, so I bounced along the thing my friend, Mish, calls a road,—said road leading to the filing cabinet designated as his office and habitation.

The flivver paused. Through the open window I described a recumbent form. "Blay-a-a" went the throaty baritone of the honk, and the recumbent Mish kicked the covers off and called out:

"Be with you in a minute! Been up all night waiting for the water, which didn't come. Water is sure one liar. It never keeps its promise!"

Mish then grabbed a pair of trousers, flirited the garment in the air, lay on his back, inserted his legs in the crevices, sat up, and the deed was done. It was executed with high art, in approved cowboy style. I shall some day practice it, but I never hope to equal Mish. I shall have begun too late.

"Come in!" yelled Mish. "The dog won't bite. He's a new dog. I named him Frank. He's got the elements of a collector in him. He's begun on bones. Maybe he'll come to stamps, later. You see, somebody mislaid him. Collie. Full blood. Saw him up-town, and we took to each other. He followed me home. Nice dog. Likes his new name, too."

Mish looked critically at his latest possession, whose tail waved responsively. Then the dog arose, came over, and laid his head on my knee, looking up at me with all the tenderness and affection that well-bred dogs show to those who love them.

Mish watched him. Then he sighed.

"That dog, now. Some one cared a lot for him. He just went and lost himself. Think some one passing through must have mislaid him, sort-of. Anyway, he's mine."

Mish disappeared into pigeon-hole.

No. One—my characterization of his kitchen—and presently I heard him discoursing to the scenery in language somewhat common to the cow-camp.

"This here oil stove just nacherly refuses to get hostile," declared Mish.

There were certain muttered ejaculations which followed, and then the odor of coffee,—delicate and delicious. It was the cowboy brand, with the desired bite in the making.

I mildly declined breakfast, but little urging was necessary to impel me to draw up and go to it.

"How come percolated coffee, Mish?"

I questioned.

"Sign o' civilization," declared the imperturbable. "Got to have some signs besides a six-gun an' spurs an' saddles an' riatas an' 'taps' an' things."

I looked upon my friend with cynical amusement. His reference to the spurs won me. That was a joy between us. Lang syne I coveted a pair of large-rowel Mexican spurs which were handmade and beautiful to behold. It is true, I had a pair, and also an odd spur; but, then, like books and stamps, no matter how many one may have, one may not have too many. That's me! I collect spurs as one collects old China, or pewter (for which I confess to a weakness, along with candlesticks,—principally candlesticks), and anything pertaining to them gives me manifest pleasure. And guns,—six-guns, especially. Did I not trade two ancient six-guns, one with the trigger filed for "thumping," the other a double-action which worked two ways, for an automatic which an old-time cowboy declared he'd carry no more, because you had to stick the derved thing in a bucket o' water to stop it from goin' off.

"Yes, sir," he declared. "That there automatic is some gun. I'm afraid of it, sir. Why, it gets the habit,—shoots about a ton o' cartridges which you ain't got onct it gits goin' right. Me fer the ole six-gun, with the filed trickker."

Now we are both happy, but I look with reverence on the automatic. It is too deadly for this old-timer. As a souvenir,—yes; but for action,—well, I hope to acquire another "six," some day.

But we were speaking of spurs.

"Got an odd spur for you," said Mish. "Got it but can't find it. Must have—say, did I already give it to you? No? Then I don't know where it is. No, it ain't in my war-bag, either. Must-a lost it."

I expressed my deep and pained regrets.

"Well, anyway, I got a pair o' spurs for you that are the real thing. Got to get 'em off the chappo whose wearin' 'em, first. No; oh, no!"

Mish denied the implied hint that perhaps the aforementioned wearer might object. They were Mish's spurs. He had merely lent them.

The dog, Frank, sat watching and listening. I spoke to him, and he came once more to be caressed.

"Speaking o' stamps," said Mish, between bites, "did I tell you about that kid up-town whose uncle gave him a collection? Funny thing, too. The kid sure appreciates it. Lent it to me to show you."

Mish arose, prowled into pigeon-hole No. 2, and came forth with a tiny loose leaf album, of the home-made brand. He handed it over.

Here were the 1847 issues, two of each; and the 1851-56, and the rest through 1875. Then the Departments were complete. It was a young man's collection, formed, I was told, before the present-day purist came into being, to destroy the interest of the poor in purse who sought to emulate him.

"The kid's uncle picked up the collection one day, and gave it to the boy,—thought he might get interested. He sure did. Never added anything to this one, but got another album and started in,—U. S. A., all issues, from 1875 on, Match and Medicine and Revenues. And he's sure got some collection. We'll give it the twice over some day soon."

I studied the stamps, and their arrangement. There was no set method of mounting, although the stamps were hinged on thicker paper than obtains at the present day. Hinged they were, and the order was geometric. I puzzled over it. When I looked up, Mish was rolling a cigarette.

"Some class to it. Sure. Uncle was an engineer. Lettered fine. Notice that. Also the way he planned it all."

It was art, and once the key was disclosed the rest was easy to determine.

"Now the 'taps' you see there.
That was as far as Mish got. Frank, the dog, arose, went into pigeon-hole No. 2, and came back with "tap" in his mouth, which he laid at my feet. He went back, and returned with the other "tap." Mish and I laughed and laughed. They were Mish's own particular pet taps,—not intended for me, although I was covetous.

"Now, ain't that pure dog? He sure knew what we said, now, didn't he?"

Then Mish looked at me quizzically.
"I done told you I'd make a collector out o' him yet. You see, he's already begun—on 'taps'."

Then we went forth together—plus Frank—to see if the water was further betraying our confidence.

THE FIRST ISSUE OF HUNGARY.

By HUGO GRIEBERT.

It was as late as 1871, when a special set of stamps was introduced for the then Kingdom of Hungary. The issue of this series, consisting of six denominations, seems to have been of a provisional character, having been produced by lithography, as only a few months later some of the values made their appearance engraved and printed from copper plates. It is surprising how very little has been written about these stamps; even in Austria or Hungary, philatelists were satisfied with a description of colours and shades or perforations, perhaps quoting the firm of paper makers which had supplied the paper used for the production of these stamps.

The word "lithography" should have spurred on some of the well-known writers on the Continent to try to unravel the secrets of this first issue; especially to investigate, whether it were not possible to distinguish varieties or lithographic flaws, which might have helped to find the secrets of production, with which one would have been enabled to "plate" the various values. I do not know of anyone who ever tried to look for varieties in this issue; if so, he must have given up this difficult task, as nothing has ever been published upon this subject.

Often enough I came across certain values, principally the 2 and 3 kreuzers, which originally were stamps cut from envelopes that had been "doctored" by adding a forged perforation. Although slightly differing in shade, their real status could only be told by experts, especially as the envelope stamps were also lithographed.

I resolved therefore, if possible, to follow up certain transfer flaws, that were easily distinguishable in some of the easily, but soon saw that the task was not an easy one and that, even if I were to take the commonest value, the 5 kreuzer, for my study, I should have to procure quite a quantity of this value.

None of these stamps were issued with outer margins; pairs or blocks are extremely rare and most difficult to find, all of which tended to make my work very irksome. It took some years to enable me to say to-day that an original sheet of any of the values contained 100 stamps, printed in 10 rows of 10 stamps; further, that transfers were made of 10 stamps (one horizontal row of 10), which was transferred upon the stone and then repeated nine times to make up the sheet of 100 stamps. Horizontal pairs or strips will thus show different varieties, while vertical strips always show one variety only.

I gradually collected 145 copies of the 5 kreuzers, and was able to recognize the ten varieties of a horizontal row, but owing to the great scarcity of pairs I found it impossible to allot every stamp to its exact place in a horizontal row. Although this is not of great importance, as the ten varieties have now been established, I should have liked the work completed, and I hope that someone else with great patience will bring this work to a successful end.

Before giving a detailed description, I wish to add that I have found also the ten varieties of the 10 kreuzer, and that none of these ten varieties can be found in the envelope stamps; fakes can therefore be easily identified, as they do not possess any of the distinguishing marks of the adhesive stamps.

It may interest my readers to know that some twenty years ago the collections of Richter Lajos of Budapest are said to have contained an entire original sheet of the 3 kreuzer, but I suppose that this sheet has been broken up long ago; anyway, since the sale of this celebrated collection nothing has ever been heard of this treasure.

DESCRIPTION OF THE TEN VARIETIES OF 5 KREUZER.

Owing to the difficulty of procuring unused specimens, in most cases used copies were illustrated, but all show clearly the distinguishing marks of the various varieties:—

Variety 1.—(a) There is a break with two small spurs in the lower part of the left vertical outer frame-line. (b) One pearl in the inner circle at left is unshaded, and (c) the two inner circles are connected with each other by two small coloured lines in the northeast corner. (d) The white circle surrounding the rosette in upper right corner shows a break where it joins the scroll below. This, however, is not apparent in all copies of this variety.

Variety 2.—(a) The "k" shows a prominent notch in the upper part of the vertical stroke. (b) Two spurs in the extreme lower left corner are plainly visible. (c) There is a coloured dot in the space between the neck and fillet; (d) also a coloured dot on the inner circle just to the left of the orb of the crown. (e) The two outer white circles are broken, northeast of "r."

Variety 3.—(a) There is a break in the lower outer frame line towards the left. (b) The white circle surrounding the upper left rosette is broken where it joins the large central circle.

Variety 4.—(a) The upper part of the numeral "5" has a coloured dot, (b) and the "k" shows a prominent flaw at the foot of the first down-stroke.

Variety 5.—(a) There is a split in the lower part of the nose. (b) The "k" shows a break in the upper part, and (c) the "r" has a coloured dot near the top. (d) The two outer frame-lines in the extreme lower left corner are connected by a small coloured line. (e) There is also a dot outside the frame-line at top left.

Variety 6.—(a) Two small breaks in the left outer frame-lines are noticeable. (b) There is a small white space in the background before "5."

Variety 7.—(a) The white outer circle round "5" is broken in northwest. (b) There are two small flaws in the center of the upper outer frame-line.

Variety 8.—(a) Shows a small coloured dot at the right on the inner circle, about level with the tip of the nose. (b) There is a small dot outside the right vertical outer frame-line; (c) also a break may be found in northeast corner of the upper horizontal frame-lines.

Variety 9.—(a) In the left upper corner outside the design of stamp a coloured dot is visible. (b) In the inner part of the arms below a diagonal line is added, running from the central vertical line to the top of the small inner shield.

On comparing the above description with the original stamps, it will be seen that at least six or seven varieties can easily be recognized, while the remaining few will require a closer examination; though, I wish to repeat again, that only ten varieties exist, and that I was able to classify every one of the 145 stamps that served me for this study.

I may add that the 10 kreuzer value has given me less work than the forego-

NEW YORK CITY 1926.

MAMMOTH INTERNATIONAL PHILATELIC EXHIBITION IN OCTOBER, 1926.

By FRED J. MELVILLE (Stamp Collectors Fortnightly).

Mr. Melville very kindly sends the Managing Editor an advance proof of an article appearing in the Stamp Collectors' Fortnightly of July 19. Quite naturally Mr. Melville takes a great interest in the coming exhibition and his personal note to the editor is as follows:—

"It is good news that New York is to be the center of the next great International Philatelic Exhibition and in the preliminary announcement on this side I have tried to indicate what I feel sure is the spirit in which the enterprise will be supported here."

The year after next will be America's Philatelic Year. It will be the turn of our cousins across the Pond to claim the co-operation of the entire philatelic world in the creation of the greatest philatelic exhibition ever held in America, and probably greater than has been held elsewhere.

Progressive in all things America has made enormous strides in philatelic development since the last great international stamp exhibition was held in New York in 1913. The time has come for the United States to take its due place in organized philately to show what American philatelists have been doing, and to gather together in the States the cream of the collections of the world in friendly competition.

America's call will not go unheeded in Great Britain, for philatelists here will be all out to extend the fullest support to the organizers of the forthcoming New York International Philatelic Exhibition. The support that is sought is the participation of every philatelist as an exhibitor and as a visitor to the great show.

I feel confident that, remembering the splendid co-operation of American philatelists in the recent London Exhibition, and in many other of our British philatelic enterprises, the philatelists of this country will rejoice to have the opportunity of sharing in the assured success of the great enterprise America is planning for 1926.

My purpose in thus prominently giving the preliminary announcement of the forthcoming exhibition, is to ensure that all in this country who have good things to show will decide early to participate, and will use the ensuing interval in perfecting and preparing their exhibits so that Great Britain will shine with distinction in the American exhibition. Two years, as we found in London, is none too long a period to devote to the making of a great international exhibition success. It is none too long a time to have to nurse and cultivate and study a collection to enter along with the highly-studied collections which have been growing in numbers and in richness in the United States.

The proposal to hold an exhibition in America in 1926 has been in the air for well over a year, and the original idea was to hold it in Philadelphia in connection with the proposed general exhibition in commemoration of the Sesquicentenary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence. I think that the Philadelphians are well-advised, and have been actuated by the most public-spirited good will, in inviting the Collectors Club of New York, in conjunction with "The Association of Stamp Exhibitions, Incorporated," to transfer the scene of the exhibition from Philadelphia to New York.

The organization under these circumstances is sure of a brilliant and distinguished success. At the call of the Club and the Association are many men of highly-proved ability in business, in commerce, in finance, in science, in art, and in philatelic acumen. The Subcommittee appointed to consider the preliminary plans for the exhibition has for chairman Mr. Charles J. Phillips, whose great knowledge of stamps and stamp matters, together with his verve and energy, will be of great value to the organization. Along with him are Mr. Theodore E. Steinway, a trustee and one of the greatest benefactors of the Collectors Club, Mr. J. Murray Bartels, one of the most experienced experts in the United States, Mr. John Klemann, the genial head of the Nassau Stamp Company, and Mr. Philip H. Ward, one of the most prolific and gifted writers on United States stamps in recent years.

So much for the preliminary announcement. We shall need no prompting to accord our enthusiastic support to the Exhibition Committee, but let us here in Great Britain take as our guiding principle—or "slogan" is the word during the great Advertising Convention in London just now—the two words, "Be Prepared."

Dollar Cover Bundles

Hundreds of these bundles of United States original covers have been sold by me in the past year. My extensive buying constantly gives me a change of stock—today I get covers from California and tomorrow from Maine.

I cannot say just what these bundles will contain, as hardly any two are the same—but I do guarantee each bundle to contain at least twelve different covers—all containing United States stamps used in the period of their issue and mostly prior to 1890.

Your money back if unsatisfactory is my definite guarantee. "Dollar Cover Bundles" are an advertising "lead" with me and I make them up so as to prove satisfactory in each instance, giving more than one hundred cents in value for the dollar.

THE EARLY RISE AND DEVELOPMENT OF THE CHINESE POSTAL SYSTEM.

By RICHARD CANMAN.

(The writer wishes to state that the bulk of his information has been gleaned from the Chinese postal reports and bulletins as well as his dear friend and counselor Mr. Chow Chu Tze, the late Prime Minister, Provisional President, Minister of Education, Minister of Finance and Minister of Communications of China.)

As philatelists, what we are primarily interested in is the stamp; nevertheless, the ancestry of the stamp is of vital interest, and for this reason we are taking up the early development of the Chinese postal system.* It is said that Confucius mentions the word "Yu," which means post, in a statement as early as 479 B. C.: "The influence of righteousness travels faster than royal orders by stages and couriers." This is a bit of history that is very well known to the Chinese and brings the point out clearly. It is a well established fact that in Chinese history in the centuries before the birth of Christ, a Chinese general would often indicate a special delivery letter by attaching a feather to it. This method was frequently used during periods of hostility and in mobilizing troops for urgent service.

The Chinese postal report says emperor Wei Wen Ti, in 225 A. D., wrote to General Wu Chi as follows: "As the country under your jurisdiction is so far away from the capital, the interchange of letters is difficult." In a similar manner many statements in Chinese history bring out proof that letters were frequently sent prior to 500 A. D. An abbreviated form of writing was in vogue in order that letters and postal documents of all sorts could be expedited.

Until 500 A. D., the post was under the control of the Minister of War. The bulk of the matter was army despatches and official correspondence. Letters under those prevalent conditions often took a full year or longer to reach their destination.

It is interesting to note that the Tang line of emperors (618-705) developed this system to such a degree that postal stations of a crude sort were established every thirty Li through the empire (30 Li are equal to 10 miles). There were already at that time the astonishing number of 1297 land stages and 360 water stations, connecting different postal routes.

The next period of development is well described by Marco Polo, the renowned traveler, who visited China in the 14th century. Almost all the large cosmopolitan cities have a street, bridge or a statue named after this famous man. The temples throughout the nation have images of Marco Polo alongside of Buddha. The writer has seen these images in South China, Canton, Macao,

*The writer has travelled over many parts of the Chinese territory and is particularly familiar with the postal system in North China, and Hanchow as well as in North China and Peking and the famous Western Hill Temples. The writer wishes to say that on his trip to Hsi Ling (the western tombs) the present resting place of the Manchu emperors, he passed through the city of Marco Polo. This city is now practically deserted but the enormous walls surrounding it are in an excellent state of preservation, and also a 32 span bridge which crosses the river in front of the town; these are said to have been originated by Marco Polo. Getting back to our original subject, Marco Polo said that there were over 10,000 mail stations in the empire. These were spread at intervals of 25 miles, affording sumptuous accommodations to the 200,000 horsemen that often rode both night and day to get the letters to their destination. The carriers always had a yellow flag attached to their collar and are said to have changed horses without alighting. The mail was often sent in sealed caskets having the royal insignia on the side, as nearly all of this mail was imperial mail.

During the Ming dynasty, which was one of the most progressive dynasties of China, there arose what is known as the private mail service. Up to this period, which is about 1402, A. D., only imperial and official mail had been transported. The Lao Fu Tze, or private secretary, accompanied the officials on their various journeys throughout the empire. Besides taking care of personal effects and engagements of their masters, they carried on all of the correspondence and issued all of the news. These men were a powerful factor in bringing about the postal companies. These companies rose in a small way and grew like mushrooms. They originated in the city of Ningpo and soon developed into powerful influences and factions. They obtained control of canals and had armies of couriers. They grew from small companies, having only a hundred couriers, very rapidly into those possessing thousands of employees. Their charges were moderate and based on a graduated scale, charging more for the quicker service. The addressee paid half of the sum of the postage charges. In contrast to many of the early postal services, these companies were thoroughly reliable. A fact points out the real integrity of these companies. The sender could mark the amount of money which was enclosed in a package, and if this package were lost through accident or carelessness, the money was refunded to the individual. These companies were a powerful aid to commerce and private enterprise. They often stayed open until midnight to accommodate private and company mails. On the whole, these Hongs, as they were called, rendered the people a noble and honorable service.

In the following years these companies practically remained the same and did

WINNIPEG STAMP EXHIBITION

On September 17-20 the Winnipeg Philatelic Society will hold a stamp exhibition in connection with the semi-annual convention of the society. Excellency Baron Byng, Governor-General of Canada, heads a list of four eminent patrons, the Honorary President being Lieut.-Col. J. Y. Reid and President Dr. W. F. Dey, president of the Winnipeg Society. A strong list of committees has been named. The prospectus is at hand and a copy no doubt be obtained by writing General Secretary, William Van at Main St., Winnipeg. The prospectus a very creditable production, giving a scheme of the competitions. Special mention should be made of an article dealing with Canadian postal cancellations which we hope to reproduce in later issue of the WEEKLY. The prospectus contains competitors entry forms that are detachable.

INDICES SOON AVAILABLE.

We are pleased to state that A. Pike has completed indices covering years 1918 and 1919 and they will be published in the WEEKLY and then printed. Our readers will welcome information and the many calls for indices for these two years will soon meet.

WELCOME.

That remarkable man, Fred J. Melville, just written another book which, in repetitious enthusiasm, we may say the climax. It is called "The Come Philatelist," and from beginning to it is a volume that we can recomd without any qualifications whatever. From cover to cover it is a clever, able and comprehensive review of its ect. Certainly Mr. Melville is at his best in this volume, which for proselyting is in a class by itself, and we are glad, ourselves, to pay cold cash for the books with the idea of contributing them to a number of alleged ands who profess to see nothing log-or likeable in philately, even after explanations on the subject. With very first words, Mr. Melville hits off billy what philately is. He says, "Phi-ly is stamp collecting, with understanding." Much more could be said to what philately is, but we doubt ther a definition more pat could be n. Mr. Melville proceeds to dissect stamp and uses the four heads of er, "design," "gum" and "margins";
he proceeds to elaborate on the dis-tensions between these "parts" of the
p. He describes the physical quality of the stamps and then their sentimental suggestions; he tells of the rent classes of stamps in a readable and he succeeds in imparting infor-ation that shows conclusively that phi-ly is paramount as a pastime. The ciples of collecting are described and y hints that will have a refreshing ct on the collection are given. Acceses are described with a view of the st models of the mechanical con-cences for collectors. History as ned from stamps, not to mention a t variety of other interesting details, pecified at considerable length. Even postmarks are not neglected, and, too, atic literature is classified while the ary philatelic terms give a fitting h to this exceptional work. "The

AN INVESTMENT OR A HOBBY—II.

By CLARENCE J. WEST.

Recently (see MEKEEL'S WEEKLY, July 7, 1924, pp. 361, 362) I presented figures based on the increase in value, over a period of twenty-four years, of the stamps of the United States for 1847 to 1900; which indicated that a general collection of these stamps was not profitable from an investment point of view and that used stamps increased in value to a much greater extent than unused ones.
While these figures were perfectly definite and established the points in question for the stamps of the United States, it seemed desirable to compare them with figures for some other country. For this purpose, I have chosen the stamps of Great Britain, since its postal history covers even a greater period than does that of the United States. It is, perhaps, not surprising that I have found the same situation with this country. The following table tells the story:

Years	Catalogue Nos.	Unused	Used	Unused	Used
1840-1850	2-7	$ 99.25	$ 3.42	$169.50	$ 24.85
1850-1860	8-31	671.37	11.47	851.35	51.24
1860-1870	32-56	91.08	7.15	162.20	35.92
1870-1880	57-73	325.95	14.49	537.30	75.80
1880-1900	74-124	209.46	72.77	344.02	298.54
		$1,397.11	$109.30	$2,064.37	$486.45

A comparison of these figures shows that during this 24-year period, the unused stamps increased in value 147.7 percent, the used stamps 445 percent. The corresponding figures for the stamps of the United States were: unused, 210 percent; used, 372 percent. Although far from being identical, the ratios for the two countries are of the same order, and appear to bear out the conclusions reached in my first article.

WARNING.

On July 4 a party claiming the name of Allen arrived in Worcester, Mass., in a Dodge sedan bearing Florida number plates. He claimed casually to have been a druggist in Chicago, and that he was touring the south because of his wife's health. Allen stated that he had bought out a concern called the Golden Gate Stamp Co., and in swapping "items needed" for his collection, he produced two dress-suit cases in which were several hundred approval sheets with a lithographed heading of the Golden Gate Stamp Co., Oakland, Calif., while above was the changed address rubber-stamped Berkeley, Calif.

Allen called upon a number of Worcester collectors and subsequently upon comparing notes they came to the conclusion that there was something crooked about the party's transactions.
One collector in that city is out $15 through a careless acceptance of settlement of an account.

We think it advisable to give this information for what it is worth, and further information from any quarter will be welcome. Leaving Worcester his next objective appeared to be Springfield. Any interested party will please write Frank L. Coes of the Coes Wrench Co., Worcester, Mass., and thus save time in correspondence.

PHILATELY IN ROUMANIA.

By A. O. TITTMANN.

(It has been some time since our readers saw the name of Mr. Tittmann in the WEEK-LY. They will be pleased to see it now, in this short but interesting message from Bucharest.—W. O. W.)

This is the first time I have visited Roumania. The trip across the sun-baked plains of Hungary was hot and uninteresting. But it became interesting and pleasant after entering the mountains of Siebenburgen, a country settled by Germans from Flanders, 700 years ago.
Then through the oil well regions of Roumania to the capital, a town of 380,000 before the war, but now numbering 800,000 including many Russian refugees. Philatelically speaking Bucharest is very insignificant. The dealers have no stocks, mostly war or post-war issues. "Finds" no longer occur, and what one runs across, of old stuff, are "culls." There is going to be a philatelic exhibition in Bucharest, next October, under the patronage of the King; so this will be the fourth philatelic exhibition held in Europe this year. The Roumanian peasants are the "sorriest"-looking specimens of humanity I've seen in Europe, and in the general make-up, or lack of make-up, remind me of the Mexican peons. Civilization has made little progress in this part of the world, and illiteracy and ignorance still abound.

THE BEAVER CANCELLATION.

(Montreal Gazette Editorial.)

A reader forwards to The Gazette an envelope posted in Winnipeg and bearing a special cancellation stamp, used by permission of the postal authorities, announcing the Canadian Stamp Exhibition and Philatelic Convention to be held at Winnipeg, September 17th to 20th. In the centre of the design is a beaver, reproduced from the first Canadian stamp, issued in 1851, and known to philatelists throughout the world as the "three-penny beaver." Incidentally, the Montreal postmark on the covering envelope includes a legend, in both languages, conveying the information that "Your postman sells stamps," while another arrival by the same mail carries an appeal to help prevent forest fires. These legends are an effective means of publicity, involving only the nominal cost of a die, and there can be no possible objection to their utilization so long as they are restricted to matters of events of public concern.

GOVERNMENT COLLECTION IN OKLA.

Roy W. Bryant, informs us that his city, Oklahoma City, Okla., has been favored with the exhibition of the United States collection of stamps which has been journeying around the country. It received a good deal of publicity in the local press. It is quite apparent that any enterprising stamp club can secure this exhibit by making application of the Postal Department. It should prove to be a valuable bit of publicity.

NEWS GLEANINGS.

—In the New York Times under the heading "Shipping and the Mails" appears every morning full information in connection with the trans-continental air mail. Our thanks are given to Willis M. Pott, who sends us a specimen of the new airplane cancellation, for this item of news.

—Jos. A. Steinmetz, Morris Bldg., Phila., Pa., has lost some airplane covers between Rawlins, Cheyenne, Cleveland and Reno. It is possible that they may fall into the hands of someone who can furnish the desired information as to their recovery. Some collector in Philadelphia may be able to give the desired assistance.

—Dealers are urged to refrain from sending approval selections to Walter Gerstner, 521 E. 81 St., N. Y. City. This request comes from the mother of the boy and should be heeded.

—H. H. Anvelink, 2410 Prairie St., Milwaukee, Wis., would like to know the present address of the Frank L. Meisch Co., formerly 71 W. 23 St., N. Y. City.

—The Mack Stamp Co., Goshen, Ind., has issued a complete check list of Harding precancels.

—We are indebted to J. V. Beverhoudt for specimens of the new Canal Zone stamps accompanied by information regarding the new issue.

—L. A. Beebe, 64 Bruce Ave., Yonkers, N. Y., has opened a shop in the stamp business at 81 Nassau St., N. Y. City. Mr. Beebe is well known as an old advertiser in the WEEKLY and collectors visiting New York will find him in Room 402.

—An article in the Dearborn Independent states that the postal authorities at Moscow announce that the official name of what was formerly called Russia is now "Union of Socialistic Soviet Republics." They also announce that no letters addressed to Petrograd will be delivered, as the new name of the former capital is now Leningrad.

—"I am figuring to go to Detroit to the A.P.S. imbroglio in August, and hope to be able to produce something for you there. I am going cross country per auto, and if the old Velie holds together I'll get there in about ten days (barring constables and other accidents). After the convention I expect to do a little touring in Ontario, my native province."—CHAS. S. THOMPSON, Los Angeles.

—We are pleased to see that the coming Stamp Exhibition and Philatelic Convention to be held in September, under the auspices of the Winnipeg Philatelic Society, Canada, is being advertised by a special beaver philatelic postmark which is a striking example of postal advertising. The effect of this postmark must be one that will result in general good for collecting, and we commend the enterprise of our Canadian confreres. Mr. Frank S. Thompson informs us that the cancellation will be continued in use at Winnipeg until the close of the exhibition in September. The first run of the cancellation was made in the presence of the Exhibition Executive on the afternoon of July 22, 1924.

—We have had a call from Mr. Will Falley of Mill Valley, California, who shows us a striking variety in the last three stamps of the top row at right of the sheet of 5c Walloon stamps with the plate number F15754. One of the lines enclosing the figure 5 at the right, bottom, of the stamp diverges under the 5 and cuts across into the outer line of the circle. The variety is a decided one and Mr. Falley informs us that it was discovered by Mr. Donald Burbeck of Mill Valley. We are pleased that these gentlemen give early notice of the discovery, and in return for their consideration we beg the philatelic vote for Mr. Falley, who is a candidate for assemblyman from Maran County, California.

—From Mr. L. J. Ragatz of Madison, Wisconsin, we have received the following clipping from the Wisconsin Magazine of History, of June, 1924: "The annual competitive postage stamp exhibit was recently held in the state Historical Society Museum, Madison. Forty boy and girl collectors from seven to fourteen years of age entered exhibits. The specimens shown were of a select character and filled four large museum cases. These were judged at the end of the week by Forest Middleton and John Kulp, Madison philatelists. Prizes of packets of American and foreign stamps were awarded. Winners of first prizes were Chauncey Juday, Theodore Dodge, Lyle Anderson, June Johnson, Edwin Coyne, Frederick Wessel, Robert Nagler and Carl Schmedeman. The prizes given were presented by S. J. Rahn and John H. Kulp, Madison; W. S. Aldrich, St. Joseph, Missouri; the Fennel Stamp Company, St. Louis; Metropolitan Stamp Company, New York; M. C. Phillips and Company, Hartford, Connecticut; the Rueger Stamp Company, Dayton, Ohio; and by the museum itself."

—The New York Times gave a good preliminary account of the New York City convention of the Society of Philatelic Americans.

—Littell's Living Age occasionally runs an interesting philatelic article as the following contribution to a recent issue shows:

THE BI-MONTHLY JOURNAL

A stamp publication distinctly different from anything you have ever seen before.

The July-August issue consists of 36 large pages, profusely illustrated, with a complete line of packets, sets, dealers' stocks, combination lots, philatelic supplies, good collections, etc.

Also a 4-page adventure story about stamps, editorial comment regarding the philatelic scandal-mongers, photographs of our Wholesale Approval Department and a wealth of other interesting reading.

Albert C. Munson, 412 Broadway, Houston, Texas, writes:

"I enjoy the Bi-Monthly as much as MEKEEL'S; there is no other paper, house organ, journal or circular of any kind wherein one can find such extraordinarily good stamps—and at such reasonable prices."

You can't afford to miss the important July-August issue.

"The various issues of postage stamps used for air mail—which have appeared on every hand since the war—come one of the most recent and most diverse hobbies among European collectors.

The rapid development of airmail of aerial mails has produced an abundance of letters with interesting history so that the collector often pays much for the stamp as for its associations.

Any one of the ninety-five letters tried by Hawker on his ill-fated attempt to cross the Atlantic is worth today £35 to £50, but by one of those which only collectors can understand, first air post letters which were carried across the Atlantic by Sir John A. in the R-34 are worth no more than a few and even then only if they bear a special stamp that was struck for occasion and are postmarked with actual date of the flight.

This is partly because these letters are so rare. At a recent London auction one of the few private letters brought back from America on the R-34's voyage sold for as much as $32. A souvenir label which the Australian authorities placed upon letters brought from England to Australia by Sir Smith in his London to Melbourne is very much sought, and worth £50.

The gem of all air stamps, however, is the United States 20-cent issue, which was printed by mistake with the air upside down. Only a hundred were issued before the mistake was covered, and the keen eyes of our authorities raised the price to £150.

Three years ago Theodore Chaix of Paris began to bring out his logue historique et descriptive des bres de la poste aerienne (historical descriptive catalogue of air stamps)—a useful and interesting which is now going into a third edition.

—The following question was answered in a newspaper in these words: "How many engravers does it take to produce a postage stamp in this country? Two as a rule, but sometimes three. One does frame work; central view of trait is done by another and letter sometimes done by a third artist. One is a specialist in his particular branch of work."

THE NEW SERBS.

The Kingdom of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes has obtained its newest stamps from London, and they prove to be a handsome series printed from intaglio plates by Messrs. de la Rue and Co. In general design the lower values follow the previous American-printed issue in showing a profile of King Alexander to left on an oval medallion, but the head is much larger, and allows better scope to the engraver to present a good portrait. In the new portrait his Majesty is wearing pince-nez. The frame, too, is of a new pattern, being taken entirely from Serbian motifs, instead of the conventional ornamentation of the earlier issue. It was originally intended that the entire series should be in this one design, but among the essays submitted by the printers was one which, in place of the oval medallion, has the profile in a square panel, which shows up the portrait to still better advantage. As this was so pleasing a result the Serbian authorities decided to use it for four of the denominations.

The inscriptions are in Cyrillic characters at the top and in Roman letters at the bottom, and it will be noted that the form "Kraljevina" (kingdom) is adopted throughout, in place of the form "Kraljevstvo," which appeared on the 1921 issue, although it was altered for the supplementary values ordered from America in 1923. Mr. Y. M. Yovanovitch, the Serbian journalist, tells me the words have the same meaning; the form Kraljevstvo, he says, is older, and less used, having even a poetic touch in it, because of its mediaeval origin; Kraljevina is the modern and less romantic form.

The supply of the stamps ordered was 235 millions, distributed over the following denominations:

THE CHRISTIANIA EXHIBITION.

Encouraged by the successes of British exhibitors at the Brussels Exhibition last month, I hope many collectors here will enter in the competitive classes at the forthcoming First International Stamp Exhibition, in Norway, to be held in the University Library at Christiania from Sept. 19 to 28.. The latest date for notifying intended entries has now been definitely fixed for August 1.

As a convenience to collectors who are exhibiting at The Hague Exhibition, which precedes the Christiania event by a few days, arrangements have been made for the transmission of exhibits direct from The Hague to Christiania, under the custody of the president of the Dutch exhibition, Mr. Van der 10,000 Varieties---$110.00!

(THE BIG CHIEF—"QUALITY-BILT")

Down goes the price—but the quality remains the same!

For absolutely the first time, and with reservations as to duration, we are able to offer a few superb collections of 10,000 varieties — of the same good "Harrisco" quality — for only one hundred and ten dollars each.

This collection represents the very best of our endeavors and should not be confused with ordinary variety packets. There are, for instance, hundreds of stamps, a good percentage mint, of British Colonial war tax and commemorative issues alone; Chile, Argentina, Peru, Uruguay, and other popular South American countries are liberally represented; included are a goodly number of stamps from such countries as North Borneo, Labuan, Liberia, Nyassa, Abyssinia, Zanzibar, etc., which present an unusually attractive appearance. One whole book, containing over a thousand stamps, is filled with French Colonials, and about the same quantity of Portuguese Colonials can also be found.

One point alone adds many dollars to the value of the collection; i. e., the total exclusion of everything but distinct, major varieties. The hundreds of telegraphs, revenues, unofficial issues, local stamps, minor varieties, etc., which appear in foreign-made packets, are entirely excluded, and only good clean copies of legitimate issues will be found.

Total catalogue value is probably in excess of $800.00!

The collection is neatly mounted in blank books all ready to be transferred, and our price is now so low that 200%-300% profits and quick sales are assured. And don't forget this: if you're not well pleased with your purchase, return it to us within ten days and back will come your money without question!

The order blank below is for your convenience; our supply of the collections is not large, so please use it AT ONCE!

For more than three decades Algeria has been agitating for distinctive postage stamps in place of the ordinary French stamps, which have been in use there up to the present year. As reported in The Daily Telegraph a year ago, the French Government has at last sanctioned the creation of special stamps for Algeria, and these are in active preparation. With an eye to the philatelic market the specially-designed stamps have been preceded this month by a full series of the current French stamps overprinted "Algerie." The set of seventeen values just to hand reflects the variety of different designs and types still current in France, some of which have been in familiar use for nearly a quarter of a century. The values and types overprinted for Algeria are: 1/2c on 1 centime, 1c, 2c and 3c (Justice type), 5c (Sower), 10c (Pasteur), 15c, 20c and 25c (Sower), 30c (Pasteur), 35c (Sower), 40c and 45c (Peace), 50c (Pasteur), 1, 2 and 5 francs (Peace).

A stamp of half a centime is a very low value; with the franc at 80 to the £ one could buy 16,000 of them for 20s. The denomination was introduced in France in 1919 for use on newspapers, which are delivered by the publishers in bulk to the post-office for delivery to subscribers.—London Daily Telegraph.

DEATH OF WM. W. RANDALL.

Contributed by J. M. BARTELS.

It is with deep regret that I announce the death of an American Philatelic Society member, Mr. William Wainwright Randall, who died in New York July 2nd, age 69. Practically his entire life was devoted to the theatrical business. As manager of many companies he traveled very extensively through the United States for many years. He was a native of San Francisco. For a short period, 1897-98, he was a member of the firm J. M. Bartels Company, and was later again associated with the same firm in 1910 as editor of the Philatelic Gazette. He rendered valuable assistance in the preparation of the first edition of Bartels Envelope Catalogue and Plate Number Lists. He was also co-author of Bartels' Check List of Panama stamps. Later he formed a collection of U. S. Postal Cards and published a valuable list of the numerous types of the 2c card revalued 1c. He is survived by his widow and one son.

EDITORIAL.

We have received word from a number of readers of the philatelic activities of the Russian Soviet Government as reflected in the official bulletin of the Soviet stamp bureau. A number of appeals have been issued in the official bulletin which are certainly curiosities of philatelic literature. They are written by someone who tries zealously to fit philately into a conventional frame and are designed to "rouse" the proletariat. The existing stamp societies, the present commercial structure and the philatelic press of today are presented as a menace and as "preying" on the true collector. The idea is that the organized philatelists in Soviet Russia will aid collectors in other countries to down the stamp bourgeoisie and the Russian philatelic organ, using Esperanto, is intended to create for the collectors of all countries a true medium of communication. The purposes of the red philatelic internationale are good in some respects but of all the tilting at windmill stuff ever heard of, the plea for organization for protection against philatelic birds of prey is unique. We have no reason to express any particular compassion for Russia, but we tremble at the thought of the cruel experience that she is about to undergo. We do not wish even our worst enemy to become interested financially in the philatelic publishing business. Soviet Russia will soon know what "oppression" really is.

We have heard from Mr. Willis H. Kerr, of Emporia, Kansas, who submits some intimate details about Mr. H. T. Clarke, of Omaha, with whom Mr. Kerr as well as other boys used to roam in the old Clarke store at Bellevue, which was the headquarters of the Clarke Brothers business. Mr. Kerr has both varieties of the three cent centennial green envelope with the "Clarke's centennial mail express to the Black Hills via the Sidney short route, postage ten cents," frank on the front and other printed description on the back. The two franks, insofar as their printed descriptions are concerned differ in various details, and it is evident that there were two printings of this interesting frank. Mr. Kerr says:

"About 1910, Mr. Clarke published several illustrated Nebraska historical posters one of which shows the franked envelope in exact facsimile both front and back (rules against illustration of U. S. postage to the contrary notwithstanding!) and also gave pictures of the sixty-one span truss bridge across the Platte River near Sidney and of the block fort at the north end of the bridge which the United States soldiers guarded; and also one of the timbers from the block fort containing a rifle port. One of Mr. Clarke's sons is living in Omaha and possibly I could borrow these cuts." These envelopes have long been known, and we recollect that they were illustrated in J. W. Scott's work on U. S. locals and franked envelopes published about 1879, and further, we have had several copies of the envelopes pass through our hands. In recent years they have become very elusive, the variety showing the sixty-one span truss bridge being particularly scarce.

We have been made aware that articles on the dealing situation in this country have created a little wave of interest, and we have been asked to pursue the subject with the particular idea of giving some constructive advice to show how conditions may be improved. We do not pose as any authority on this subject, but we do call to our aid, many years' working experience in stamps and having recently served as president of the American Stamp Dealers Association, we should consider that the insight gained in that position was of some importance. The fault with the stamp dealer oftentimes is that he does not consider his profession with the enthusiastic regard that characterizes those who follow other lines that sometimes are not to be compared in, let us say, dignity, with the stamp business. We would not have a stamp dealer cockily assertive in his daily intercourse with people with whom he comes casually in contact nor do we advocate that he placard himself with the proud assertion, "I am a stamp dealer," but we see no reason for a dealer of some standing to avoid any revelation of his means of livelihood. We do not say that dealers are at all ashamed of their business, but we assert that not a few of them are too content to hide their light under the proverbial bushel. However, time will efface the older dealer of today who is somewhat tinged with tradition, and a new generation of dealers will supplant him. Better things will come from these new commercial factors as avowed stamp dealers. We should say the most important question before us is that of honesty in all its implications in the conduct of the stamp business. It is accepted as a fact that any business cannot aspire to a position higher than that held by its average exponent. If the stamp dealers do not slowly but surely strengthen the moral lines, they are not progressing as they should, and we believe that the time will come when there will be a definite improvement over the present conditions. The day of unselfish devotion to a common cause is approaching, and the backbiters among the dealers are going to subside. In time a virile crew of stamp dealers will succeed to the front line position, and with a demand for an improved moral tone, they will place commercial philately in a position where it will command a reasonable respect in the eyes of the world. Briefly, what the stamp trade needs is fairness in its ranks and a determination by dealers to respect their own business as the equal of any other legitimate pursuit.

We are very glad to print anything that is of a light or humorous nature, but we must be careful not to be gratuitously offensive to those who may work earnestly for the advancement of philately as they see it, even though the methods they use do not seem to be in keeping with the ideas of the critics. If we did proceed on the lines laid out by some of our correspondents, we should be in hot water most of the time. A few of our readers are very militant and they take no little satisfaction in lambasting our critics, our rivals and all manner of persons not of our faith. Now, this is all right, and it is comforting to feel that we are deserving in the estimation of these correspondents, but we have no wish to become ironical or condemnatory of our friends and neighbors, as they are in many cases. We like to see that collectors are rather independent in their thoughts and under no one's dominion, but nevertheless, there is no reason to work hardship on the well-disposed efforts of others. It is just to say that readers who have any axes to grind take the shortest course and write to the ones

30,000 HARDING PRECANCELS

Have passed through my hands in the six months. Out of this large lot I selected the finest and choicest copies, of the unusual and unique pieces, that appeal to a stamp collector, and have made these up into a collection the present is mounted in SIX loose leaf albums.

I am a Dealer

not a collector and collection was built of the choice of Hardings that passed through my hands with a view to selling. Roughly, it contains the following: Over 1000 single covers 650 block of four, over 300 plate number block of six, 26 plate number block of four, nearly 300 other stamps in strips and large blocks. In all, a total over 5800 Harding precancels. A fine selection of some of the items, a remarkable of the Hawaiian varieties, a wonderful of the Federalists, which are certainly desirable. Many pieces that are undoubtedly the largest accumulation of of four and plate number block that has been shown today.

The price is $1000. It's readily worth $1000. Buying this collection as we did, in small quantity, the price we make is lower than any collector could put on a collection of this size if he had an offer for sale. We, nor no other party, duplicate this lot, the active man will the bargain and we will accept the rest of the collection if it is not all that we want to be.

B & K Special Offers, No

Sent free on request, contains a list number of offers of British Colonial stamps at exceedingly low quotations.

We offer fine copies of all stamps of a country, Colonial and Foreign, from earliest to latest issues. Special selection can be had of particular issues, and a list always has careful attention, whether low or high priced stamps are desired. General collectors we have a fine series of medium priced approvals.

Customers of a quarter of a century are yet buyers from us to-day. Most serious collectors deal with us sooner or later.

The publishers of the new catalogue doing as they said they would; and those who have subscribed to the service looking over the first installment of Advance Sheets. The first two sections run well through the United States 6c used and unused, the 12c used, rare 15c—both ways, the common 13c, and we are quite impressed by the orderly manner in which the advance in prices have been made. There are startling elevations, but we find for instance, 10c of 1847 now priced at $3.50 used. The 5c of 1851 is at $35.00 used. 12c black of the same issue is up dollar to $10.00, while the 90c used 1891 has the odd price of $11.00; the 90c of '69 has come into its own in one flight goes to the dizzy heights of $40. The advances are seemingly advised, and rather than there being objections to them, we take it there will be surprise that there were not more drastic raises. Merely to vary the monotony we add that the one cent blue, type of 1851 had a fainting spell and dropped from $200.00 to $100.00 used. From on, the examination of the advance sheets will be one of the most popular of indoor sports.

We have received a long letter from Mr. A. H.  The authorities at Washington have ed an order dated July 24, 1924, in ch postmasters are enjoined to ex- se the greatest care in mail segrega- ; as mail matter that is duly stamped marked "air mail" is not always t by airplane because its special na- is not detected by the clerks at the patching office, and the consequence is it is given the regulation train trans- ation. While it is pointed out that s preferable that patrons bring their mail to the post-office or place it in special air mail street boxes as such provided, it is admitted that it is not ays convenient or possible to do so that the public has a right to mail an mail letter anywhere with the assur- e that it is the duty of the postal serv- to find the letter and give it the ial attention to ensure air mail de- ch. Of course, it is irritating that r intended for air mail and paid for rdingly be sent by the ordinary ns, and the collectors who have ed our attention to this disappointing umstance may take what consolation / can from the knowledge that the shington headquarters is making y effort to see that the mail gets the ice that is paid for by the postage ps on it. THE MELON CUTTING THE RECREATION "M. C." $1.02

Once upon a time, there was produced what each and every stamp collector admitted was a "new thing". This was all the more wonderful since the world was overrun with a queer, man-like being called a "SKEPTICS". These Skeptics were very wise and many of them "Came from Missouri". Most of them were students and professors in the University of Experience. The rest of them were Senators and met every year for a reunion in a big building with dome—you can see a picture of the building on the $2 blue U. S. current issue. These Skeptics said that the "Age of Miracles" was passed, that no new thing could be created. The World and its people were astonished when we created "The Moonshine Creation", the first of a justly famous line of "M. C." packets. The Skeptics were annihilated temporarily until last year, when they "investigated" to find a way of changing the black and slippy OIL into "A thing of beauty." The they failed, they did their best and they flattered us by imitating.

THE MELON CUTTING contains 300 different stamps. No U. S. or Canadian. No damaged stamps, reprints, "bar" cancellations, or other "TRASH". 300 genuine POST-AGE STAMPS, the great majority of them postally used, the rest are unused. The total catalog value is guaranteed to be in excess of $12.00 by Scott's 1924 catalog with an allowance of 2c per stamp for those items issued since the current Edition was printed. Every high cataloged stamp included has maintained its value for the last two years, at least, and we believe every stamp to be a "sound investment" at 50% of Scott. There never was a packet like THE MELON CUTTING at $1.02.

AIRMAIL POSTMARK.

An advertising postmark is being used which will prove very interesting to lovers of cancellations. The first specimens came from New York and Chicago and doubtless it will come into common use. It makes a striking cancellation as will be noted from our illustration:—

AUSTRALIAN EXHIBITION.

The Christ Church Philatelic Society will hold the third Australian Philatelic Congress and Exhibition in November next, at Christ Church, New Zealand. Entries must be lodged with the secretary, P. R. Jackson, Christ Church, not later than Sept. 30, and any of our subscribers desiring entry forms can secure them from Mr. Jackson. A copy of the Syllabus just at hand indicates a well balanced and spirited competition.

CONVENTION NOTES.

Herman W. Boers writes us that the city of Detroit is free from the small-pox epidemic and that any newspaper reports to the contrary should be ignored. It is true that two months ago the city received a visitation of this epidemic but it was quickly subdued. Mr. Boers wants us to make this statement an emphatic one.

Delegates to the convention are assured that Detroit will be a comfortable spot during the convention period. In fact, we are advised that arrangements have already been made with the Weather Bureau to give the delegates a superb temperature. Mr. Boers informs us that the average maximum August temperature for the past ten years has been 79.

EARLY LOW VALUES SPECIALIZED.

The following letter from Miss Mabel McClenthen shows that the ladies are beginning to be numbered in the ranks of the specialists. Miss McClenthen lives in Jefferson, Schoharie County, N. Y., and her letter is especially interesting because it shows that specialization has its possibilities even to those who have access only to a limited number of the low values of earlier U. S.:—
 "Your department on early low values is most interesting,—what I look for first when MEKEEL'S arrives. Perhaps the material may not be immediately useful to me, personally, but it is interesting to read of other people's rare finds, though one may not hope to own such rarities oneself.

It must be confessed that it is a little discouraging to small collectors with poor eyes and thin purses to read of the specialists who can "explore" thousands, and even hundreds of thousands of their chosen stamps. We sigh with what resignation we can muster, and try to imagine how satisfyingly pleasant it must be to be a "real" collector:—and then we read with delighted appreciation all that they write for us of the results of their studies.

But on studying my own small collection more closely I find to my great satisfaction that one can "specialize" so to speak, with a stock of no more than 57 of the 2c red-browns of 1833. Of these 57 copies I have bought only three items,—an unusual yellowish shade, a pair cancelled "Examined," and a band of three, the middle one stitch watermarked. The rest have all been bestowed upon me by various kind friends, and from a collector's point of view are a strictly unpicked lot. But among them I found these interesting little bits: 2 arrows, 4 with quite unusually wide margins; 1 shift,—clearly a shift, though not extensive; 1 partial double perforation, on cover; only 17 showed "dots," but of these one was imbedded in the edge of the portrait medalion, and several were in the fifth pearl, which always charms me, though they seem to be common enough. One member of one of the 5 pairs shows 2 white lines side of the 2, the other only one, and there are white spots in other parts of the stamp—dry printing, I judge from a suggestion of yours. Other copies show white lines and dots, and they are all different—unlike Mr. Moore's, who wrote last October. One other specimen of mine shows two sizes of dots, a peculiarity I haven't seen mentioned in your department, a small dot in the white oval, and a much larger one outside the design and lower down.

I am sending for your inspection three stamps that puzzle me, but which you will probably recognize instantly. If you have any time to spend on the education of one lone individual will you please kindly write in brief answers to my questions? I should be very grateful to you for your kind courtesy. To know about these 2c would help me in judging others I have."

W. J. Bleakie of Sabattus, Me., submits three very interesting three cent 1861 covers. One has an irregular black block cancellation showing in white letters, "Ohio." The postmark on the cover is Cleveland. I have never seen this cover before.

Another from "Sta— Springs, Conn." has the cancellation "1867" in large, irregular figures about half an inch high, covering on both stamp and cover. The year-dated cancellations of this type are well-known on the three cent green from 1870 on, but I have never before seen one earlier than 1870. Does anyone know of any earlier year-date of this particular type?

The third cover is "O.K." in black letters in a circle from Norfolk, Va. The "O.K.s" on almost any of the earlier U. S. stamps are fairly scarce and nice property.

Confederate Covers

Those familiar with the stamps of our country, especially those who are interested in covers, are well acquainted with the patriotic envelopes used by both the North and the South during the Civil War. Those issued and distributed in the North are fairly common, but a little lot of the Confederate envelopes which I have just acquired are the first that I have ever owned. These are all entire envelopes—have never been used, and bear patriotic pictures, flags, etc. Everyone interested in the Confederate States stamps should have such a souvenir of the great conflict.

While the little lot that I have lasts, I can furnish 4 all different for $1.00; 8 all different for $2.00; 12 for $3.00; 16 for $4.00; and 20 for $5.00. Of some varieties, I have only one or two, so the first orders will receive the choice pieces. I do not recall ever seeing these varieties advertised before, and in my thirty years' experience I have never seen over half a dozen copies.

United States.Scott's 1925 Advance Sheets.

The United States section of the advance sheets for the 1925 Scott's International Postage Stamp Album made their appearance on July 26th. While the changes are not great, those that have been changed reflect the upward tendency of the issues of our country. The stamps of the United States have never been in greater demand and more popular than today. In judging the new prices it must be remembered that quotations are for specimens in good condition, and good condition must not be confused with fine copies, which in the case of our early issues, demand greater premiums.

In the Postmaster Provisionals, we find the two 10c Baltimores advance, and also the Providence 5c and 10c moving upward. The balance of the Postmasters' issues remain as heretofore.

In the case of the 1847 series, the 10c in used condition moves to $30.00, a well merited advance, for the stamp is popular and in good demand. The minor split varieties all advance. The reprints of this series move to $4.00 and $6.00 respectively.

In the case of the 1851 series, I find the only U. S. that I have noted that drops in price—the 1c Type III, No. 32, dropping from $200 to $100. Several of the other denominations advance, the 5c in used condition going to $35.00, and the 12c to $10.00. Most of the unused specimens all took advances of a few dollars each.

Practically all of the minor varieties, such as splits and part perfs. of the 1857 issues took very fair increases, for these stamps are becoming more popular every day. The brick red 5c used goes to $30.00, the red brown to $25.00 and the 10c Type II to $1.75. The 10c Type I has stood still, although I have always considered this an under priced variety. In fine condition it is really scarcer than the imperforated stamp.

With the exception of the 10c August issue of 1861 in used condition which moves to $17.50, all of this first series stood still. In the September issues the 3c pink, the 5c buff and shade varieties, the 10c and the 24c all move upward in both used and unused condition.

Th changes in the 1862-1866 series are mainly limited to the minor varieties.

In the grilled series of 1867, I am glad to see the price on the 3c, 18 x 15, eliminated, for there are a great many who still doubt the existence of this variety. Most of the other grills take fair advances, especially in unused condition. I know of no series of our issues that are more difficult to obtain in fine condition than these several stamps, and this applies not only to the rarer varieties but to the common ones as well.

The re-issue of 1875 all advance with exception of the 1c which is still fairly plentiful.

In the 1869 series, the 1c unused, the used and all of the higher values have advanced slightly. The very popular 90c, which is still a difficult stamp for the dealer to keep in stock, moves to $85.00 unused and $40.00 used. Most of the reissues of this series take increased prices.

There are only a few changes in the Bank Note series, and what changes have been made are slight, with the exception of the grilled Continental varieties, which take on substantial advances.

In the later issues there are a great many changes but none of them are sufficiently large to attract attention.

I see that all of the Columbians through the $2.00 advance—several of the high 1894 and 1895 series move into new levels, while the coil stamps especially the early ones, rightly increase. This year that evasive 10c Panama Pacific perf. 10 will go to $1.50, and I still consider this cheap. The 3c perf. 10 unwatermarked goes to $1.50. I am sorry to see that the perforated 10 and perforated 11 5c error stood still for these stamps are quite popular, and readily bring prices that warrant an increase.

During the last year, used Department stamps have become quite popular and as a result, used specimens are now priced in many cases the same as the unused specimens. This applies in the case of the Agriculture, the Executives and some of the other scarcer varieties. The dollar State Departments have all been increased.

The Newspaper stamps have jumped here and there, especially in the cases of the rarer varieties.

There are many changes in the envelopes and the renewed activity in the later surcharged issues will be reflected in the new catalog. The last 3c variety on the colored papers are now all priced at 25c, and it is likely these stamps will prove good property, for I know of no large stocks held anywhere. The three 2c on 2c errors are now priced at $5.00, and the other scarcer varieties have increased proportionately. The Daytona Type VII goes to $8.00, but it is still too low, for only in the neighborhood of one hundred of this stamp exist as originally issued, although there has been an attempt to issue through the same 1920, 2c on 3c Type V Provisional envelope, Double Surcharge.

In a small lot of the 2c on 3c Type Provisional Duncan overprinted envelope Scott's No. 2707, which were left in bank in that city at the time they closed their doors, there has been found a single copy of this variety with a distinct overprint. This copy is no doubt unique and it is odd that it should have been overlooked until this late day.

Air-Mail—Saves Time.

The Department is advertising Air-Mail Service by using on the regular mail a special cancellation showing illustration of the air-mail plane and with propaganda reading "Air-Mail—Save Time." I have seen these from Chicago, New York, Flint and several other cities. Mr. W. A. Beach kindly sends a card from the latter city.

Oddities in Overprinted Envelopes.

In my Chronicle for July 21st, mention was made of the fact that Mr. M. Bartels had shown me a number of oddities in the way of surcharged envelopes with St. Louis overprint. I mentioned that the lot consisted of the on 5c oval die, the 2c on 4c oval die, two types, that is, Type II and Type III both on the same 3c blue envelope and the 2c on 2c amber. Mr. Bartels calls my attention to the fact that in this little lot there were nine different varieties, including not only the above, similar varieties of the 2c on 2c on blue and white, including the two types of surcharge on the 3c buff paper. In remarks, I stated that it was my opinion that such varieties were made to order for it seemed odd that the entire should come out at one time in one place. Mr. Bartels writes me that he has investigated, and has every reason to believe that these have equal standing with the other several varieties of a nature.

NEW HEBRIDES.—We regret to say that Mr. A. H. Davis, of Birmingham Messrs. J. H. Smyth, Ltd., of Sydney and our Australian contemporaries confirmation of the issue of the provisionals mentioned in Stamp Collecting for May 10th, with others, the set comprising the following:—

Mult. Crown CA:—1d on 1/2d, 3d 1d, 5d on 2 1/2d.
Wmk. "R.F.":—10c on 5c, 30c on 50c on 25c.

Mr. Davis notes that the type used the French currency surcharges is considerably smaller than that on the English denominations, which is similar size to that previously employed.

The Victorian Philatelic Record announces these provisionals in the following caustic comment:—

"We can force ourselves to believe that a shortage of stamps may necessitate or possibly even two, issues of provisional surcharges, but when it occurs a third time in as many years, we cannot but wonder. Moreover, why not have been content with two values—3d, 1/2d and 5d on 2 1/2d? That we may succeed in swallowing, but not the ut

THE NEW CANAL ZONE.

(Courtesy Emil J. Rall.)

The Taft Agreement between the Republic of Panama and the United States was abrogated June 30. Certain reciprocal obligations between Panama and the United States have now ceased, Dr. Morales said, inasmuch as no new treaty has been signed.

Dr. Morales said that the abrogation of the Taft Agreement is the reason United States postage stamps are now sold at Canal Zone post-offices instead of Panamanian stamps with the words "Canal Zone" printed upon the face of them as heretofore.

"Since last year," Dr. Morales said, "the President of the United States was authorized by Congress to abrogate the Taft Agreement and the State Department advised the Government of Panama that the agreement would cease to be effective on April 30, this year.

"Negotiations between the two Governments followed at Washington with an effort to find a basis for a new pact to replace the Taft Agreement and so settle other matters pending between the two nations.

"On April 30 the new agreement had not yet been signed and President Coolidge agreed to postpone the abrogation until May 31. On May 29 the negotiations were still under way and President Coolidge issued an Executive Order making the abrogation of the Taft Agreement become effective June 30."

Dr. Morales would not comment further on the treaty negotiations.

The postage stamps of the Republic of Panama, which have been used in the Zone post-offices for fifteen years or longer, have been superseded by a new issue of United States stamps. This action was announced yesterday in a circular issued by C. H. Calhoun, Director of Posts on the Zone.

This circular states that all Panama postage stamps and other stamped paper, surcharged "Canal Zone," will be withdrawn from sale at the close of business on June 30 and no sales of such stamped paper will be made after that date.

To replace the present issue of postage stamps there has been issued to Zone postmasters, United States postage stamps, surcharged "Canal Zone," in denominations of 1, 2, 5, 10, 12, 15, 30 and 50 cents and $1.00; postage due stamps in denominations of 1, 2 and 10 cents; 1 cent postal cards and stamped envelopes in denominations of 1 and 2 cents.

Though none of the old issue of stamps will be sold after June 30, they shall nevertheless be valid for postage until and including July 31. Stamps of the old issue in the hands of the public after July 1, and until August 1, may be either used for postage or exchanged for other stamps of the new issue but shall in no case be redeemed for cash.

In the early construction days the Canal Zone used a United States stamp but the Republic of Panama complained that the Zone P. O. took away a large portion of the revenue from the Panamanian post-offices. and in the Taft Agreement it was specified that thereafter, Panama should have 40 per cent of the postal receipts of the Zone offices.

This revenue amounted to from $20,000 to $35,000 approximately, every year and Panama has been enjoying this for the past 17 years.—Star and Herald.

A TALE OF TWO CITIES.

By WILLARD O. WYLIE.

The Managing Editor—"I am leaving the office for a two weeks' trip and anticipate a fine time."

Foreign Issues Editor—"I am off myself for a vacation but hope I have enough copy in for the two weeks."

Hereby hangs a tale!

In company with Mrs. Wylie and Miss Edith, we left Beverly Thursday, July 10, for a trip through the Canadian provinces directly north. We visited Saratoga Springs, Ticonderoga and Ausable Chasm on our way to Montreal and at Quebec took the boat up the Saguenay. Continuing our journey from Quebec, we went to Halifax and here our drama really opens.

Our first thought was to locate Donald King, the well known specialist in British North American stamps, and we had no trouble in doing so, and a nice hotel chat resulted, covering a wide range of philatelic subjects including frauds, freaks, foibles and facts.

On the following day at the Green Lantern I religiously recorded my attendance at Halifax Rotary with no less a companion than E. A. Smith of Webster, Smith & Co. Mr. Smith has been collecting for many years and is a devoted follower of philately. Much to our regret we were compelled to forego an afternoon outing of the Rotary Club at a nearby seashore resort.

We also met Fred Ronnan, an old timer. He seems like a busy man. If in doubt, visit his office and survey the wild array of books, papers, pamphlets, etc., scattered all around. We thought our desk a pitiable fright, but Fred takes the honors away from us.

Ere we left the city (meaning three persons this time) a delightful hour was spent at the Waegwoltic Club where we met Mr. and Mrs. King with two charming daughters and were pleasantly entertained.

A visit to Wolfville gave us a fine introduction to the Gaspereau and Cornwallis valleys, which for beauty and productivity will compare with any part of the known world. A visit to Grand Pre followed, then on to old Digby through the famous Annapolis valley.

Standing on a street corner at Digby there came a singular experience. Across the way we saw someone wig-wagging in an excited manner. Could it mean us? Of course not! However, it continued, and as we advanced there came into view the features of Percy Smith, editor of foreign new issues, and Mrs. Smith. Our vacations had brought us to Digby and we were all billeted for the same boat out of Yarmouth.

Truly the world seems small at times.

TURPIN'S TESTIMONIAL.

Quite recently F. B. Turpin, the well known dealer of London, took out an advertising contract with the WEEKLY. In making payment for advertising he sends us these words of commendation:—

"I am glad to report a record six months trade, even better than boom period during the War. I attribute this to the fortunate purchase of some very large collections, also, to the fact that my ads in your paper have put me in touch with some very good buyers."

DR. RICH HAS BEST OF THE ARGUMENT.

By K. E. PARKER, M.H.C.

Hurray for Dr. St. J. Macrymichalos! Now that the row over the collectibility of Neuropean stamps is over and the discussion of the proposed philatelic (or philotelic) stamps seems to have died down, along comes this gentleman and opportunely provides another moot subject.

I am not going to argue against his philology; he ought to know that very well, having the roots of about every word in his own name. I am not defending Mr. Rich, altho I agree with him. I am not even taking the middle ground of puzzlement held by Mr. Poole in his definition in your "Dictionary," altho he states facts.

Mr. Rich is right in saying that after a letter has been stamped it is free from further taxation, yet there has been a tax already paid. However, I submit the following historical fact, which may or may not be connected with the logic leading to the origin of "philately." In the early days, before the time of stamps and even long after their time in many countries, their use was not obligatory, nor was it compulsory that the letter be PREpaid. Looking at it from the angle of the poor chap who received the letters, stamps certainly brought relief from taxation, thereby justifying the "a" ("without" or "free from"). And official stamps release even the senders from paying anything.

There are thus three ways of looking at the matter: as the sender of the letter looks at it before stamping and after stamping his letter, and as the receiver looks at it. From the first angle, Dr. M— is right, but from the other two he is wrong. Let him take his choice, and let us take ours. The word has been used too long to change—imagine the American Philatelic Society changing its name!

The derivation was unfortunate enough without Dr. M— adding a further complication. "Timbrology" would have been better, but it is now out of the question. Anyway, I had rather be a lover of freedom from taxation, along with our suddenly economy-shouting politicians, than a lover of taxes. We fought the Revolution over the question, and I thought it was settled that Americans hated taxation; the question may then be considered as dead as the dinosaur.

Anyway, there's more than one freak word in the English language, and I prefer one with a wrong derivation to one with a wrong meaning.

WHY I COLLECT STAMPS.

By M. T. DOME (can be serious).

To relax my mind, the while sharpening my powers of observation, increasing my judgment of values and gratifying my sense of the artistic.

To waste my spare time, not squander it; to spend money for pleasure yet save it and enjoy the knowledge that such investment is mental as well as material.

To play in a game where any man can become expert yet none may ever know it all, where enjoyment is limited, not by the purse but by the player's own power for deriving pleasure proportionate to his keenness of intellect.

To glory in the "pride of ownership" which is the heritage of all who own fine things, and to preserve personally for posterity an interesting study which may be added to and enjoyed as I have enjoyed it, or on which may be realized in money far more than on any equally pleasurable hobby, sport or pastime of equal cost ever devised.

To have at my command the inducement and power to travel in mind throughout the world from the quaint days of 1840 to the present, to dream of the senders and receivers of letters and the means and methods of transport. To study graphically step by step the advance in intercourse between peoples as well as the advance in civilization, art, printing and the shortening of time and distance.

For mine is a hobby that can be equally enjoyed by the man of moderate means or the very wealthy, in a single room or a palace, that has no closed season but is open the year 'round, rain or shine, day or night; that a man may ride while young and grow old together without its losing its hold on him or he on it. For, like the oil in the widow's cruse, the pleasures of collecting stamps are inexhaustible, the more enjoyment you get out of it the more yet to be gained.

Some who collect stamps may have other and better reasons than mine through added pleasures that I have not as yet enjoyed.

But can anyone advance any better reasons for not collecting stamps or trot out a hobby that will out-class this of ours?

OUR BOOK REVIEW.

"Grosser Ganssachen-Katalog 1924," Section II (Canada—Faridkot). On request of the "Berliner Ganssachen-Sammler-Verein" (Berlin Society of Entires) edited by Dr. phil. Siegfried Ascher, Berlin. Published by Robert Noske, Borna (District of Leipzig). Price 1 mark+40 pfg. for registered postage. Sections IV-VI in preparation.

Section II of the new "Ganssachen-Katalog" expected by so many a collector is just published and contains the countries Canada—Faridkot. This section contains also—what is very important—Deutsches Reich (German Empire), German Colonies as well as the Occupied Districts. According to the carefulness of describing this, Section II may be looked upon by no means as a simple catalogue, but rather as a Handbook. Particularly must be mentioned Ceylon in regard of the extraordinary rarities of this country—Danmark, that is very carefully described—Chile, described in a different manner at all in comparison to other editions, etc., etc.

WINNIPEG CANCELLATION.

The Winnipeg Philatelic Society has obtained an advertising cancellation for the exhibition soon to be held in that city. It is very unique, a beaver being shown in the center of a double lined circle containing the words "Second Annual Canadian Postage Stamp Exhibition." Four maple leaves ornament the design, while at the bottom is the name of the city with date of meeting.

Frank S. Thompson favors us with a specimen and from his letter we quote as follows:—

"I expect you have already seen the new cancellation in use from Winnipeg advertising the coming Exhibition. You may be interested to know that through the kindness of the Postmaster the Exhibition Executives were privileged to witness the installation of this special die on the afternoon of the 22nd inst. The visitors were given the opportunity of having any letters presented run through the machine, immediately following which time on the die was changed to 2.30 p.m. and regular mail taken care of. I am inclosing a cover bearing one of these first impressions, which please accept with my compliments. Mr. Severn will have received one direct."

THE MELON CUTTING.

During the past few weeks the Home of the Postage Stamp, White Plains, N. Y., has been advertising what the firm calls "The Melon Cutting." This packet contains 300 varieties of stamps cataloging in excess of $12 by Scott's 1924 catalog. The price of this packet is only $1.02 and the specimen submitted for our inspection calls for this printed word of approval. We are positive that any subscriber purchasing this packet will have extra good value for his money. We confess that we are prompted to give this bit of complimentary mention from the fact that the firm is using not less than 5,000 lines of advertising space during the current year, and for years has been a satisfied advertiser in the WEEKLY.

FIVE-YEAR HONOR CLUB.

H. I. Davenport, Auburn, N. Y.
A. N. Erlandson, Chicago, Ill.
F. W. Fox, Pottsville, Pa.
E. J. Gifford, St. Paul, Minn.
Henry P. Norris, West Chester, Pa.
Felix Willy, Chicago, Ill.
Chas. R. Day, No. Providence, R. I.

The Managing Editor upon his return from a two weeks' vacation trip found seven five-year renewals of subscriptions, and all were sent in a very matter-of-fact manner, just as if five-year renewals were commonplace events in their lives. However, we know that such is not the case and that these applications for membership in our Honor Club are all tangible evidences of the hold the WEEKLY has upon its subscribers. We feel quite safe in asserting that no other publication of any kind anywhere in the world can boast of such an Honor Club as the WEEKLY is favored with.

THE MANAGING EDITOR.

GRIT, COURAGE AND GAMENESS.

By L. A. BEEBE, YONKERS, N. Y.

(Mention has been made in our columns of the severe experience Mr. Hollister has been passing through, but this letter from Mr. Beebe puts the situation in such a light that we must give it publicity in the WEEKLY. Our check has already gone to Mr. Beebe, with the hope that it may carry sunshine to one who is making a brave battle for life. We hope your answer to this will be prompt.—W. O. W.)

Very few indeed, members of the philatelic fraternity at large, have ever known of the physical condition of Mr. C. H. Hollister of Mukwonago, Wisconsin.

Tied down to a wheel chair for a period of over 17 years, this young philatelist has preserved his pluck and good cheer and "carried on" through thick and thin. He entered Columbia Hospital, Milwaukee, early last summer and first submitted to the removal of left leg, which had been useless and such a care during all these years that Hollister told the surgeon before the operation started to dispose of it before he regained consciousness for he had seen all of it that he ever wanted to.

That operation successfully concluded and patient strong enough to stand the journey, he returned home and waited through several long weeks to sufficiently recover his strength to submit to a more serious operation, which was performed at the same hospital late in the summer, for the removal of all the dead and diseased portions of the other leg.

On Friday, April 4, 1924, Hollister was operated on for the third (and we trust the last) time. In a letter dictated to a close friend he says, "Again I came within sight of death but decided to stay on this side. Am in a cast now and will be the next few weeks and it is rather hard to write, so must make this brief."

"This is my last operation and I think I will be able to walk after a fashion and perhaps better than looks possible. I am not sure yet when I will be home or how long I will be here after the cast is off."

Those who have had correspondence with Mr. Hollister and are awaiting replies will therefore have patience, for this plucky philatelist will straighten up in the near future all matters pertaining to his stampic affairs that accumulated without attention during the siege attendant on his last operation.

A good friend of Mr. Hollister, Mr. L. A. Beebe, is out with a circular letter suggesting contributions to be used in putting young Hollister in the way to earn a living. This may take the form of the purchase of an automobile or turning over to him of the cash and stamps contributed by friends and well wishers of Hollister and Beebe. Beebe tells us that response has been most generous. J. M. Bartels of New York has contributed $110 catalogue value of worth while stamps, several dealers and collectors contributing cash to amount to $10 each, besides many stamps which can be disposed of and turned into contributions.

To all of the foregoing the WEEKLY is here to say "Amen," and support and give publicity to the campaign which Beebe of Yonkers, N. Y., Henry A. Fowler of Chicago and Aaron L. C. penter of Germantown, as a appointed committee are pushing. not wait for a subscription list, but communicate at once with Mr. L. A. Beebe at Yonkers, N. Y.

JAPAN NOS. 171 AND 177.

By CYRUS A. YARRINGTON.

I have read the note by Mr. Beebe Young regarding certain Japanese stamps listed by Scott in their Addenda as 171 and 177 and can confirm Mr. Your statement. These stamps have never been issued and so far as I can find have never even been printed.

I am greatly surprised at the reading with which Chronicle editors have been listing every issue, imaginary or otherwise, about which their Japanese correspondents write them. They seem have thrown away all their own caution which has been exercised so carefully in the past in regard to speculative issues and are willing to list anything a body writes them about. This matter of non-existence is also true of the late addition to the stamps of Japan, namely the pin perforated issue of the so-called earthquake stamps.

These were listed in Scott's Journal for April and May and cover the numbers 193, 199 and 200. These stamps with pin perforation were never regularly issued by the government. It is true that an obliging postmaster of small village at first had them through a sewing machine and punched with holes to make it easy to separate them. Then, one of the large Japanese companies had this done in their own office, but to call them a regular issue worthy of a place in the catalog is ridiculous as listing the numbers 193, etc., which have never seen the light day.

To go into the matter more thoroughly they ought to list them for the different spacings of holes, as for example—"perforated by the Singer Sewing Machine" or "Pin Perf. by the Davis Machine," etc. If anybody wants to get true pin perf. variety, just borrow an old sewing machine and run your stamps through it. And they would have just as genuine copy as any you can here.

& Revenue design, whose possibilities were mentioned when it was obtainable at 6d. Since then it has transpired that not only was it in use for a short period, but that it was issued in comparatively small numbers and no considerable stocks appear to exist. The result has been a rapid appreciation in price, and it is now selling for about 7s6d.

Sometimes, when a stamp becomes obsolete after a short life, it afterwards transpired that a large number were bought up when current, and the stocks are in the hands of speculators who rush the price up. This does not appear to be the case to any extent with the above stamp, but a good example is the 4d and 6d stamps of St. Helena in the Postage & Revenue design of K. George, which were only issued about a year. These stamps are still quite good, and in fact well worth picking up at the low prices ruling at the moment, due to the last of the speculators' stocks coming on the market. Just after they were superseded, however, the price rose to 20sh to 25sh per pair, largely as the result of Continental speculation.

It is noteworthy that this speculation is often carried to much greater lengths on the Continent than here, and stamps which really exist in quite large numbers are forced up. It is safe to predict that a stamp like the 2fr Belgium, in the Tin Hat type, would never have reached its present exalted price level if it had been a British Colonial issued in similar numbers.

Key-Plate Types.—The new types of Key-plates that are being used for certain Postage & Revenue in the well-known De La Rue design (which is not now used for nearly as many colours as during the Edwardian era) may be classified to the excellent manner detailed by Mr. Roberts in the last "P.M." as Die I and Die II. The difference is so marked and easily distinguished that they should not be neglected by the general collector of Colonials. The minor variations in duty plates may well be left to the specialist, but the former is more distinctive than the old Plate I and Plate II of the Victorian era.

Fortunately, in many cases, the change coincides with the change in watermark, so we are spared any great increase in collectible main varieties.

Indeed, in some cases it affords an easier means of telling the watermark without soaking the stamp or using a detector, and is especially useful on stamps printed on a thicker paper where the variation of watermark is less easily seen. A good example of this is with the 50c Mauritius, K.G., old watermark. This only exists as Die I, whereas the stamp on script watermark only exists as Die II. A glance at the scroll at the bottom is sufficient to determine the presence or absence of the distinguishing "buds" on the ornamental scrolls.

The first-named stamp is a useful one to pick up now, as it is likely to show a substantial increase. It does not appear to have been imported in any quantity, but it can still be picked up quite reasonably. The 2R.50 stamp in K.G. type, old watermark, like its predecessor with the Edwardian head, is likely to turn out well, and in fact almost all of the K. George stamps of this Island may be very profitably bought at present prices.

St. Kitts.—The Tercentenary stamps of St. Kitts, which were in little demand as long as current, suddenly leaped into favour as soon as it was seen they were a rising market, a good commentary on those purists who assert that financial considerations are of small moment, but who generally take good care themselves not to purchase stamps on the down-grade.

The values above 5sh of this series are undoubtedly rare, but were hardly ever used for genuine postal requirements. The biggest proportional rise will doubtless be shown by some of the low values, which on numbers issued may easily rise to a dozen times face during the next year or two.

North-West Pacifics and Nauru.—Some of the latest issues of the N.W. Pacific Is. may turn out quite good. The permanent issue should be out soon, and then we may find stamps like the 4d purple and blue are really rare items. The first issue rather suffered from over-speculation, but this cannot be said of the above-mentioned items.

A somewhat similar history attaches to the stamps of Nauru. Some of the last issues, before the permanent issue came out, are sure to be good. The 1 1/2d in both types is a case in point, and may well be secured now, as it was issued long after the main supply of sets were imported and is thus missing from most of them.—Philatelic Magazine.

STAMPS AND LAW.

By P. A. McELWAIN.

I turned over the pages of my modest collection to see if stamps suggest any legal topics. I record my first impressions, which may be put down under two classes:

I. Legal topics which all or some stamps necessarily imply.

II. Legal topics which they suggest—sometimes perhaps a little far-fetched.

Many of the topics may be thought to be political rather than legal, but they really come within the domain of constitutional or of international law.

I.

(a) Stamps imply legislative authority and legally fixed charges for postage. The sovereign's head informs us that the Post Office is a province of the Government. Most of the Empire's stamps bear witness to the fact that the law requires many documents to be taxed and that the tax may be paid by affixing adhesive stamps. A comparison of the new Gambia stamps with the older issues suggests that postage stamps could not, until recently, be used for revenue purposes. At any rate, the new issue makes it clear that they can.

(b) The Trinidad "Lady Macleod" reminds us that the carriage of mails has not always been a government monopoly.

(c) Watermarks have a direct bearing on the legal status of many colonies. Thus C.C. and C.A. are used for Crown Colonies and for some Protectorates. Self-governing dominions adopt watermarks of their own—Australia's Crown over A, New Zealand's NZ and Star, South Africa's springbok's head. Are Canada and Sarawak the only portions of the Empire without watermarked stamps?

(d) The Postmaster stamps of Bermuda, as has been pointed out in the Stamp Lover, are evidence of a statutory perquisite.

(e) The Bermuda commemoratives recall the antiquity of the Island's constitution.

(f) The Arms type of St. Vincent refers to the Law Courts.

(g) Levant, Morocco Agencies and China on Hong Kong tell us of the capitulations under which some of the Great Powers have certain privileges and authority within the borders of other nations. These rights are more fully developed in

(h) The various "Protectorate" stamps remind us that certain parts of the Empire are not really within the British dominions and their natives are not British subjects. Protectorates arise in two ways: (1) by treaty when the protected territory has certain unity and civilization, e.g., Zanzibar, which is a protectorate with a reigning sovereign and is administered under the Foreign Office; (2) when land has been ceded on a large scale to the Crown or to a chartered company which has been superseded by the Crown. This usually occurs in countries when civilization is or was primitive, as in parts of West Africa and Uganda. Fiji made more than one application to be taken under the British flag before its aspirations were realized. Protectorates sometimes develop into colonies, as in the cases of Nigeria and of British East Africa, which has become Kenya Colony.

(i) I notice nothing in the stamps of such mandated territories as Tanganyika to suggest the League of Nations.

(j) Cyprus stamps have for many years borne the British Sovereign's portrait, but until its annexation by Order-in-Council on 5th November, 1914, it was not part of His Majesty's dominions. Until that date it was a kind of leasehold property. Similarly the part of Kenya known as the Protectorate of Kenya or "the coast strip" is leased at an annual rent from the Sovereign of another Protectorate—Zanzibar.

(k) The New Hebrides is perhaps the only instance of one country being governed by two others. The Condominium stamps acknowledge the joint shares of France and Britain in the government.

(l) The merger of Lagos, Northern and Southern Nigeria, in a general issue for Nigeria recall the union of those territories into a legal entity.

(m) Canadian, Australian and Union of South Africa stamps owe their existence to the great Constitution-making statutes of 1867, 1900 and 1909.

(n) The South African stamps remind us that this Dominion is legally bi-lingual.

(o) The King's head, and the Crown as in Fiji and British Columbia, are symbolic of the country being part of a Monarchy.

(p) The "Olive Blossom" of Barbados raises a nice question of international law—what is necessary to constitute annexation? The stamp does not commemorate the discovery of the island, as stated in Gibbons. Barbados was on the map for a century before 1605. The stamp commemorates the landing of a party from the good ship "Olive Blossom" on their voyage to Guiana. These pioneers purported to annex the island by leaving an inscription "James K. of E. and of this Island." Under this heading might come the new St. Kitts-Nevis stamps, which recall the peculiar and interesting history of the Islands—but that is another story which finds a slight analogy in the recent history of Papua.

(q) The Coats of Arms on many Colonial stamps, e.g., Barbados, Dominica, Trinidad, Antigua, suggest a special kind of property and show the design of the official seals of the Colonies.

(r) The colour often represents international agreement.

(s) The stamps issued for Ascension follow the transfer of this naval station from the Admiralty to the Colonial Office. It is now administered with St. Helena.

(t) The change of coinage apparent when various issues of Canada, Ceylon, British Honduras and British East Africa are compared, show that the legislative authorities have been functioning in the matter of currency.

(u) The British South Africa Company stamps remind us that much of the Empire has been acquired and settled by great semi-political trading companies which owed their existence to no Company Act but to Royal Charter. Other examples are: The British East India Company, the Hudson Bay Company, the Niger Company, the British East Africa Company. The first, third and fourth of these issued stamps.

(v) New Zealand, Gibbons' type 191, is a forcible reminder that Mr. Lloyd George was not the originator of State Insurance.

I had not intended to stray outside the British Empire, but am tempted to do so by two well-known types:

(w) The recent European plebiscite stamps are closely connected with the Referendum.

(x) The late German colonial stamps were deliberately designed to keep the German Navy Law before the people and to help build up the navy for "the Day"—which has closed.

II.

(a) The stamps, say, of Australia and Cape Colony invite consideration of the distinction between the legal status of the various States of the Commonwealth and of the South African colony. The distinction is now a matter of ancient history, but it may be recalled, for it is, or has until very recently, been perpetuated in such Crown Colonies as St. Lucia and Mauritius.

The Australian colonies were acquired not by conquest but by settlement. They were never subject to legislation by order in Council. The Cape, on the other hand, was acquired by conquest, was, for a considerable part of its history, subject to such legislation.

(b) The moirés of British Honduras illustrate a precaution to prevent fraud. Shall we say disposal of stolen goods in the event of the consignment falling into enemy hands.

(c) The "Contingent" stamps of Malacca recall the Army Act, while new pictorial 6d is reminiscent of Merchant Shipping Acts, and the fine stamp of New Brunswick of Railway Clauses Consolidation Act.

(d) The many "errors" suggest law of negligence: can they ever suggest the law of fraud?

(e) Mauritius, type 3, should set the law of libel in motion.

(f) The new Turks and Caicos stamps with their two crowns suggest that the designer thought that the Majesties are joint sovereigns as King William III and Queen Mary II. That he forgot that the crown is only one. Finally, to stamps may be applied well-known maxim of equity:

"He who comes to a stamp must come with clean hands—or tweezers."—Stamp Lover.

TURKS & CAICOS ISLANDS, 1900-1908.

By HARRY E. HUBER.

By an Order in Council of 1848, the Turks Islands were separated from the Bahamas government, and with the Caicos Islands, constituted a separate Colony, styled The Turks & Caicos Islands, under the supervision of the Governor of Jamaica. "The Post-office of the Turks & Caicos Islands" was established on December 11, 1854, but notwithstanding, the stamps issued April 4, 1867 (1d, 6d and 1s, Queen Victoria, line engraved), and subsequently, were inscribed simply "Turks Islands", and in 1900 the official title appeared on its postage stamps for the first time.

In the latter part of 1899, the authorities decided upon a change in design for postage stamps, incorporating the seal of the Dependency. These stamps were designed and printed from line engraved plates by De La Rue & Co., Ltd., London, and received at Grand Turk in October, 1900. On the 29th of that month a resident of Grand Turk wrote:—

"The remainders of the old issue, some £600 worth, have all been bought up by one of our merchantile houses. The postmaster (J. C. Crisson) has a small quantity on hand, but will not sell any, retaining them for purely postal uses, and he refuses to sell any new ones until the old ones are used up. He has sufficient to last until the 10th of next month, when the new ones will be placed on sale. Until then I am unable to buy any stamps at all, as the postmaster franks all letters himself. The new set includes 2d, 2s and 3s in addition to the old values."

The series comprises 9 values (the 2d, 2s and 3s being new denominations), the 1/2d to 1s being in the conventional size (18 1/2 x 22 1/2 mm), and the 2s and 3s in the large receipt size (25 x 30 mm). All are single line perforated 14. The colors for the most part are dull and unattractive, and of the series, the 3s, in brown lake, makes the best appearance. The lower values are printed on paper watermarked Crown CA, in sheets of 60 (6 horizontal by 10 vertical), and the 2s and 3s on Crown CC paper, in sheets of 30 (6 horizontal by 5 vertical).

The design embodies the seal of the Dependency within a circle, a three-masted schooner on a sea, while on shore on the foreground are salt heaps, a man filling a barrel, and two other barrels and a rake nearby. Salt raking is the principal, and practically the only industry of the Dependency.

In the lower values (1/2d to 1s) "Turks and Caicos Islands" in colored letters, conforms to the circular seal at the top, and in the upper corners, within small circular openings, is the Melocactus communis. "Postage" in small colored caps appears at the foot of the circle, with the dates "1848" and "1900" in colorless figures at the sides. The former date has reference to the political separation of the islands from the Bahamas government. The value in words ONE PENNY, colorless, is also at the foot of the stamp.

The design of the 2s and 3s is simply an elaboration of that of the lower values, the seal being superimposed on a larger disc, with scalloped ornamentation. The dates at the foot are in color instead of colorless as for the smaller size stamps.

The 1/2d to 1s stamps are known with the watermark missing, but this is not due to printing on unwatermarked paper, but rather to carelessness in cutting up the sheet, or feeding it to the press. The 2 1/2d also exists with inverted watermark.

The watermark Crown CA is arranged in groups of 60 subjects (6 horizontal by 10 vertical), one for each stamp, enclosed by a single line watermarked frame—four such panes of 60 forming a complete sheet. These are connected with each other by narrow vertical and horizontal margins, not watermarked, while the outer edges of the sheet bear the watermarked inscription + CROWN AGENTS FOR + THE COLONIES +—reading up at the left, and down at the right, with the words CROWN AGENTS also across the central margin. The crosses facilitated the ready sub-division into smaller sheets. Thus it is that pairs are found (from the first and tenth horizontal rows) one stamp having no watermark.

Nov. 10, 1900. Seal of the Dependency, Postage. Engraved and printed by De La Rue & Co., Ltd., London. Watermarked Crown CA (1/2d to 1s) or Crown CC (2s and 3s). Perforated single line 14.

M. & M. WANTED

In making preparations for a new series of approval books of Match and Medicine stamps, I find my stock has been badly depleted during the past winter.

I am in the market to buy any variety in any quantity, but condition must be fine. I realize that the nature of the use of these stamps resulted in most of them becoming somewhat damaged, but torn and damaged copies are of no use to me whatever.

If you have some cheap varieties or, better yet, some rare ones—a collection or that odd page or two that you started and never went further with and they are in fine condition, send them to me by registered mail with your price or for an offer.

entire sheet of paper, so that portions of several appear on one stamp instead of only one as formerly. This obviated the necessity for careful and accurate spacing, and rendered the same paper adaptable for printing stamps of all shapes and sizes, insuring also that none were without watermark.

The 1/2d and 1d of the Ship series were issued at Grand Turk, March 13, 1905, but the quantities were small, and they exhausted within a week. A further lot was received in the following month, April.

In 1908 a new value, 3d, was added to the series, being printed in violet on yellow paper, this being in accordance with the Crown Agents' color scheme evolved in the previous year. The printing was small, only 170 sheets of 60, a total of 10,200 stamps.

The 1/2d, single watermark, seems to have exhausted not long after issue of the multiple watermarked variety, while the reverse was true of the 1d, of which the supply was evidently very small. In April, 1908, the 1/2d was to be had only on the multiple watermark paper, and the 1d on single. In December, 1909, these two varieties were available, and all other values of the Ship series, the 3d, 2s and 3s included.

Under date of 27th December, 1912, Government Notice, No. 78, notified that stamps of the King Edward series would be withdrawn from sale on 31st March, 1913, and after that date, the King George V series would "then be sold concurrently with the Ship issue until the latter is exhausted. The following denominations of the Ship issue, of which the plates have been destroyed, are exhausted, namely, 3d, 2s, 3s."

In May, 1914, the 1/2d (multiple), 2d, 2 1/2d, 4d, 6d and 1s Ship series were still to be had, and these remained in the Islands until early in 1917, when they were sent to the Crown Agents in London to be sold. In September of that year, the Crown Agents advised through the Colonial Office Journal, that "the remainders of the 2d, 6s and 1s stamps of the Ship issue on single Crown CA paper have been destroyed."

Late in 1917, mint sheets of several values of this series were sold at auction in London, at less than face, which gave rise to a report that the Ship remainders had been sold at less than face value, a most unusual proceeding for a British Colony. Information was sought of the Dependency authorities, who advised:—

"GRAND TURK, 12th June, 1918.

Dear Sir:—

2. While I am unable to give you any information relative to the action of the Crown Agents with respect to the returned stamps of the old Ship issue, I may state that the information you received concerning them, is so inconceivable and absurd that the report can be discarded by you at its true value.

I am, Dear Sir,

Yours faithfully,

Signed, G. WHITFIELD SMITH,

Commissioner."

When the writer visited Grand Turk in September, 1920, there were still a few sheets of the 6d and 1s Ship series stamps in the post-office, which had been overlooked at the time of sending the remainder stock to London.

The stamps of this series, with the exception of the 3d, 2s and 3s are all greatly overpriced in the catalogues, and can be bought for considerably less than the figures there shown. Of the 2s and 3s (catalogued at 50s and 30s respectively, by Stanley Gibbons, 1923), it has been stated only 1800 and 2400, respectively, were printed, and of the 3d (catalogued 6s) only 10,200.

At a London auction (Plumridge) in November, 1917, 70s was obtained for a "1/2d error of color, indigo." Little or nothing is known of this variety, and offhand, one might say that it was a finished proof.

Geographical.

The group of islands forming the Turks & Caicos Islands extends for a distance of 75 miles from east to west, and 50 miles from north to south, and constitutes a part of a long chain of low islands and banks, extending from off the Florida coast to the Navidad bank, north of the eastern end of Haiti. The area is stated officially to be 166 square miles, but as no survey has ever been made, this is probably under the mark. The population is 5615, of which number 75% reside in the Caicos. Less than 5% are white.

The Dependency really consists of two separate and distinct groups, the Turks Islands proper, and the Caicos Islands, being separated by a channel 21 miles wide, the Turks Islands passage, or Le debouquement des Isles Turques, of the Old French cartographers.

The Turks Islands group proper consists of six cays, only two of which are inhabited (Grand Turk and Salt Cay), and a large number of rocks. A three-pointed bank which surrounds the group offers serious danger to navigation, and has been the scene of many shipwrecks.

On the western side of the passage lie the Caicos Islands, of which the principal are South Caicos, East Caicos, Middle Caicos, North Caicos, Providenciales, and West Caicos.

The Turks Islands derive their name from the Turk's head cactus (melo-cactus communis), found abundantly on the rocky shores, the scarlet head of which resembles a Turkish fez. The word Caicos comes from the Spanish "Los Cayos" (the cays), or else is a corruption of the word Lucayos, by which the Bahamas were known to the aborigines.

STAMPS OF THE IRISH REPUBLICAN ARMY.

By CAPTAIN A. E. HOPKINS.

Through the courtesy of Mr. P. W. Ware, the well-known authority on Irish stamps, I am able to give what I believe to be the authentic history of the mysterious "provisionals" issued at Cork in 1922, when that city was under the administration of the I. R. A.

In order properly to understand the circumstances leading up to the issue of these labels, it is necessary to have some slight understanding of the extraordinary situation in Cork in the summer of 1922. With the exception of those who were actually in the neighbourhood, very few people realize how completely Cork was cut off from the outer world, owing to the Republicans being in possession of all the country south of the line Limerick to Waterford.

The only direct means of railway communication between Dublin and Cork was via Mallow Junction, twenty-one miles to the north of the latter city. This junction had already once before been partially destroyed, and now, about July, 1922, was little more than a heap of bricks and stones. In addition to this, the main railway bridge just south of Mallow was blown up and practically destroyed. This was one of the most important bridges in the country, and carried all the traffic between Dublin and Cork.

As a result, the entire rail communication between the two cities was for a long time cut off. Later, however, matters were improved by the erection of a small wooden shelter by the side of the line, just south of the ruined bridge and junction. This was the new station, and was dignified with the name of Mallow South.

Passengers from Dublin had to alight in the ruins of what had once been an important and bustling junction, and to make their way as best they could through the battered town to the new "station." Here, if they were lucky, they found a train which took them on their way after many delays.

The outcome of this situation was that the townspeople of Mallow were able to start a new and exceedingly profitable business. Owners of vehicles of any description plied for hire between the two Mallows, meeting the two or so main line trains to which the service was now reduced.

After a few months, anyone possessing a sporting or a speculative frame of mind and a little spare cash, had invested the latter in "something on and even in the big cities the supply was very limited. As has been briefly outlined above, Cork was cut off from Dublin in the course of the struggle between the two factions of the Irish, and so further supplies could not readily be obtained.

In this emergency the I. R. A. authorities ordered a supply of 1d, 2d and 6d stamps from the Eagle Printing Works at Cork. Apparently the I. R. A. wished the stamps to have the head of one of their leaders, supposedly Pearse, but the lithographer at the Eagle Works was unequal to the task, and could not produce a satisfactory portrait. The order was consequently executed in the design illustrated.

It seems evident that but for this fact the stamps would have been issued in the ordinary way and would have become postage stamps. As it was, the I.R.A. delayed sending supplies to the G.P.O., Cork, while they sent one of their men to London with instructions to get a stamp of the requisite design produced there. This idea, however, failed to materialize, as the messenger is reported to have been arrested on arrival in London.

The supply from the Eagle Printing Works was delivered to the I.R.A. headquarters at Union Quay four or five days before the Free State troops landed at Passage in Cork Harbour early in August. A number of specimens were given to friends of the I.R.A. and to various persons at the I.R.A. headquarters. In addition to this, small lots may have been sent to West Cork, as specimens are believed to have been used on letters from Dunmanway to Dublin, but confirmation of this is lacking.

Meanwhile, the Free State troops, having landed at Passage, were fighting their way into Cork. The bulk of the I.R.A. were holding distant posts, and the few defenders had to retire on the city, which they did in good order. Instead of making a stand in the city itself, they set fire to their headquarters and went away to the West.

It is believed, therefore, that practically the entire consignment of these stamps was destroyed in the fire, as the retiring forces of the I.R.A. did not wait to save anything. It would appear that the stamps, which had been delivered to the order of competent authority in the form of the Government in power at the time, should presumably have the status of a series prepared for use but not issued.

As regards the stamps themselves, there are six minor varieties of the 1d and 2d, as the stone for these contained 120 subjects made up from transfers of six stamps. The 6d stone contained, so far as I can ascertain, 40 subjects only, in transfers of four varieties. It has been reported in the philatelic press that the sheet was of eighty stamps, thus necessitating two impressions from the stone for each sheet. Of the transfer of four, No. 1 has a coloured mark or flaw across the top of the large circle, while No. 4 has a broken "S" in "POST." There also exists a double impression of this value, and tête-bêche pairs may be found.

The 1d and 2d denominations are extremely scarce, and an outside estimate of the numbers surviving of each might be 250. Furthermore, nearly all the 2d stamps which I have seen have pencil marks across them. The 6d is more common, and there are probably a thousand or more of these, this total of course being that of all varieties on both papers.

It has been definitely ascertained that the designs were cleaned off the stones almost immediately, and that with the exception of a few of the 6d, there were no remainders. Although not having the status of issued stamps, these labels may be regarded as an extremely interesting product of Irish Republican Army authority in Cork, and they certainly have more claim to recognition than the better-known Sinn Féin labels of 1906 and 1916, which were produced purely for propaganda purposes.

NEWS GLEANINGS.

—The Toronto Stamp Collectors Club will hold a special meeting in connection with the Canadian National Exhibition, Sept. 4, and out-of-town philatelists are urged to advise F. R. Saunders, Sec., 116 Concord Av., Toronto, of their intended presence.

—J. W. Fox, of Pottsville, Pa., submits an extract from the U. S. Post-office Guide published in 1851, giving the particulars of the issue of the 1c Franklin and the 3c and 12c Washington with the requirements under which they were issued.

—A. O. Tittmann writing from Vienna makes a correction in connection with an advertisement which appeared June 9, headed, "Bavaria's Mad Monarch." The Ludwig pictured on the Bavarian stamps of 1914 was not the "Mad Monarch" at all, but his perfectly sane cousin and the son of Luitpold the Hunter shown on the 1911 set. Ludwig the Second, the splendor and art-loving king, has never been featured on any stamp. He was drowned in the Starnberger Sea together with his physician in 1882. So much for historical accuracy.

—An interesting Harding memorial souvenir from Marion, Ohio, will be distributed at the convention of the American Philatelic Society to be held in Detroit. W. G. Windhurst is the donor of the memorial and he writes that 175 copies are to be presented to the members of the Society attending the convention. The memorial consists of an envelope bearing a Harding stamp and postmarked "Marion, Ohio, Aug. 2, 7 P.M., 1924." This is the exact hour at which Pres. Harding died in San Francisco and at the left in tablet form is an inscription appropriate for the event that the cover will celebrate.

—We have received a short story from E. W. Determan giving the particulars of a find that he recently made in his home town. Nothing very valuable was found but he lays great stress upon the pleasure that comes from looking over a mass of waste with the expectancy of unearthing something that may be of great value. PORTUGUESE COLONIALS Beautiful commemoratives, large Charity and Parcel Post, Vasco da Gama issues, Nyassa, pictorial Mozambique, etc., etc.

From dealers in every part of the country come glowing reports regarding the popularity and the demand for Portuguese Colonies. Catalogue reductions made during the past two years have proved a great stimulus, and collectors are not slow to realize that many of the stamps are now actually under-valued. The big new era for Portuguese Colonies is here and many dealers who have watched the demand increase from month to month now predict that these stamps—in the medium-priced class—are already on a par with the colonies of France and Britain.

Have YOU made any effort to test the great possibilities? Have you attempted to stimulate the interest of your customers or to satisfy their requirements for Portuguese Colonials?

In justice to yourself and to your customers, YOU OUGHT TO DO SO! And to prove our sincerity, our desire to co-operate with you in a successful campaign, we are cutting our profits exactly in two—dividing them with you—but with the understanding that we shall restore the old ratio after sixty days.

This is your opportunity to put over a big increase in your summer sales! Order today—and liberally!

500 Portuguese Colonies for $5.00

Neatly Mounted in Book

An excellent little collection containing a wide variety of stamps cataloguing up to 25c each, all in perfect condition and mostly unused. Quite a few commemoratives, charity stamps, picture sets from Nyassa, etc., provisionals and other popular sellers. Includes such out-of-the-way colonies as Angola, Congo, Guinea, Horta, Inhambane, Quelimane, Tete, Zambesia, etc. Total catalogue value over $45.00. The stamps can be priced and sent to your customers in the original book, thus effecting a big saving in time.

A "Harrisco" Special at $5.00 Net

(While they last: Three collections for only $12.00)

1,000 Portuguese Colonies for $16.75

Mounted in Large Book

Here's the last word in value. A mounted collection of such superior quality and make-up that many dealers buy three or four at a time and report quick sales, big profits, pleased customers. We cannot describe on paper the artistic appearance of these beautiful stamps or the immaculate condition of every specimen. Practically all of the colonies are represented and quite a number of complete or nearly complete sets will be found.

Lack of space prevents a more minute description, and anyway, we would rather leave it to our customers to do the talking.

Here's a guarantee, though, that no other firm has ever made: Buy one collection for a trial, send the stamps to your customers, and if they don't make a big hit, return the unsold balance to us and we will immediately send you a proportionate refund in cash!

Total catalogue value will exceed $150.00, and this offer is good for 60 days only!

Special Net Price Only $16.75

(For 30 days: three collections for $45.00)

Portuguese Colonies—Not in Packets

At the urgent request of our patrons, we have obtained a stock of these Colonials not made into packets, all of the stamps being in blocks of 10 or larger. Thus, they can be easily classified according to catalogue value, mounted on 1, 2 or 3 cent net sheets, and the ones retained by your customers can be replaced on the sheets without any trouble. The following will catalogue from 7 to 12 times the net price:

	Per 100
50 All Diff. Portuguese Colonies, 10 of each kind (500 stamps)	$.80 $ 7.50
100 All Diff. Portuguese Colonies, 10 of each kind (1000 stamps)	2.45 23.00
200 All Diff. Portuguese Colonies, 10 of each kind (2000 stamps)	7.50 73.50

Remember! All stamps in sheets or large blocks; no tedious sorting of stamps necessary, no separating of packets. Just the thing for your approvals!

OUR BOOK REVIEW.

We have received part four of Kohl's Briefmarken Handbuch, the wonderfully comprehensive series by Dr. Herbert Munk, with the co-operation of students throughout the world; and when we say that the pages in this installment number from 480 to 640, progress from British India to Charkhari only, we give an idea of the exhaustive manner in which the work is undertaken. This catalogue is in effect an encyclopedia of stamps, and we believe that it is one of the most important contributions to the catalogue literature ever made. First of all, the stamps are listed, priced and fully illustrated in type and any varieties.
The stamp is analyzed in all respects, and when it is through with the examination, there is nothing about it that stands unrevealed. The notes are so copious and withal, complete that one has at hand a complete history of practically all the stamps and their varieties that are known. The undertaking is a vast one, and we commend the conviction of the publishers that a work of this kind will be received with favor. About everything that is known about the issues of the countries that are listed thus far is given in text while pictures of the stamps and their variations, minor to major, allow of an understanding of the subject that it would be impossible to get otherwise.

As the catalogue is issued, part by part, its merits certainly will attract universal attention in a philatelic sense; and we believe that in commending the purpose of the publishers to give collectors a veritable history of stamps, we are but doing what is our duty. We shall not say that the catalogue is infallible in its market quotations because it is doubtful whether any catalogue can price every stamp in a way to meet the expectations of collectors in all parts of the world, but when it comes to the critical examination of stamps and fullness of explanation concerning their issue and mechanical aspects as well as postalic, we cannot conceive of any treatise that is at once as scientific and as practical as Kohl's Handbuch. We may add that in the fourth section just received there is a glossary that contains a list in German, English, French and Spanish. When this work is completed (and we hesitate to predict when "Z" will finally be disposed of),
we shall have an equipment that will

"PHIL-O-TELY!"

By S. G. RICH, PH. D.

Since Dr. St. J. Macrymichalos returns to the battle in favor of "phil-O-tely" with a persistence worthy of a better cause, perhaps I may have a few inches in which to slap the naughty boy thrice upon the left wrist. As I am a "doctor" myself, though not a medical one, I hope my degree above this paragraph will convince my excitable opponent that I am not quite the ignoramus he tries to make me out as being.

The learned and presumably medical doctor has confused what was clear hitherto. Mr. Herpin, in the 1864 article cited, gave a clear, straightforward derivation for the new term. He took the Greek adjective "philos"—meaning fond of, and "ateleia,"—meaning freedom from tax—to coin a word indicating "love of objects showing that a letter is free of charges to be paid." Postage due stamps were unknown in those days, presumably. Now comes the learned doctor with a post-mortem psycho-analysis to show that Mr. Herpin didn't know what he derived or how.

However misformed the word "philately" may seem, it is etymological purity incarnate compared to the barbarous
"numismatics," in which two Greek suffixes are appended to a misspelled Latin root ("nummus," a coin). So our crusader, whose first name would appear to be "Saint" and whose second we presume is "Jedediah," whose last name is a compound of "makros" meaning long or large and the proper name abbreviated to "Mike" in English-speaking countries, is indeed swallowing a camel and straining out a mosquito.

Yes, Dr. Saint Jedediah Long-Mike, I have some little knowledge of Greek philology—and even "phil-O-tely."

THE MANAGING EDITOR.

EDITORIAL.

We notice in the American Mercury that Hendrik Willem Van Loon contributes an article entitled "The Wages of Peace" in which he has a passing reference to the Czar of Russia in a philatelic aspect. He says: "But the Muzhiks in their everlasting patience rejoiced, wept tears upon the pictures of the Little Father and would have kissed his boots had he ever shown the tips of his little toes outside of the palace, which, of course, he never did being by nature a shy and retiring gentleman with a love for stamps and Dresden china." A number of our writers seem to have the idea that the pursuit of stamps is no proper occupation for a man of robust dimensions mentally and physically, but if we could be instrumental in having a parade of all the philatelic heavy-weights, both brains and brawn considered, the afore-said authors would shrink into themselves, in the reviewing stand, while the earth trembled from the measured foot-beats of these ponderous personalities, as they marched past. Contrary to the expression voiced here and there that philatelists are of a "spiritless" temperament, we should say from observation covering a good number of decades that they are almost too vital and peppery at times. The old-fashioned idea that stamp collecting is indulged in only by lady-like persons is exploded and the modern writer should watch his fingers as he pounds out his screed, else he write himself down as one who is hopelessly behind the times.

* * *

We have had another illustration of how philatelic fact or fiction when once started on its journey, will travel around the world for many years. It will be remembered how the WEEKLY took occasion to threaten H. L. Mencken when he said, that he would run for president on a platform that spoke about stamp issues in a manner to which we humorously objected, and said that he would not get the philatelic vote; and added that he could consider himself a dead herring or words to that effect, lacking that important support. A short time later one of the Hearst newspapers said that the philatelists claimed to have political power enough to elect or defeat a candidate that was favorable to them on the one hand or objectionable on the other. This was almost too much to believe as a serious observation, but the die was cast and now there seems to be an increasing tendency on the part of newspapers to either regard philatelists as a political menace or as a body of men needing psychopathic attention! Another clipping has been received evidently taken from a western newspaper as the correspondent's envelope is postmarked Ogden, Utah. The clipping says that "it has been claimed by the stamp collectors' spokesmen that the hobby has a great hold in secret on a large number of citizens of this country; in fact, the stamp collectors say that they are in a position to make or unmake presidents. We shall see whether the boasts of these philatelists are idle, in the coming election." This is almost unparalleled if it is intended as an observation made with sober face, and we hope that the editors who may be somewhat removed from the centers of population are not beginning to confuse philatelists with members of organizations having a political animus.

In Great Britain investment in stamps is frankly advised for reasons based on the heavy taxation that is enforced there. While we shall not attempt to follow the turns of the argument as it may be applied, we are impressed by the remarks made in the course of an editorial by the London Philatelist that certainly have a way of showing how serious the question of income tax has become. We suppose it is all right to advise investment in stamps in order to make a showing that would not be unduly penalized by the taxing bodies, and we have no doubt that one of the reasons for the investment of so much money by a large number of collectors in this country is based to some degree upon the income tax question. Of course, as we have said time and again, we think the man who really has no particular liking for stamps but who regards them as a good investment is entitled to our mild admiration, but we assert that the man who as he contemplates his stamps finds a thrill that he can get in no other way has every license to think that he is doing the right thing in placing as much money as he can in stamps that may in time prove a good investment, as well as a sentimental satisfaction.

We have received a communication from Mr. George H. Grinnell, which he submits to us with a feeling of elation as he thinks that he has welded another link in the chain that connects his stamps with the country of origin, as he claims. We submit this affidavit feeling that it is due to Mr. Grinnell to let those who are interested in the case know of its latest developments; and we are sure that many a collector is following Mr. Grinnell in his determined course to prove beyond question that his Missionary stamps really originated in Hawaii. We suppose that if he finally brings proof to bear that his stamps are not counterfeit, there will be many who will rejoice in knowing that his perseverance has been successful in achieving an end that has always been in Mr. Grinnell's mind as a conclusion bound to prevail. Mr. Grinnell writes: "Rev. Oliver P. Emerson, who is a Congregational Minister, has just given me the following affidavit and also a splendid photograph of the letter written by his mother who was a Missionary stationed near Honolulu from 1831 to 1888. The affidavit is in his handwriting:

"Rev. Oliver P. Emerson, being first duly sworn deposes and says that he was born in the Hawaiian Islands, July 27, 1845: that his parents were Rev. John S. Emerson and Mrs. Ursula Sophia Newell Emerson; that his parents were missionaries sent to the Hawaiian Islands in the year 1831 by the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions; that his mother was born in Nelson, N. H., in the year 1806: that he has in his possession a journal letter written by his mother to her parents in the year 1835: (a journal letter is a letter which extends over a considerable period of time, being begun at a certain date and paragraphs being added from time to time until opportunity comes to send it to its destination): that on page fifteen of this letter his mother wrote as follows: 'While at Honolulu among the things which I received from the depository I found a little bundle containing two or three articles of an infant's dress with a bit of paper attached to them saying that they were from Hannah Child Shattuck—but from whence I could not tell, I suppose, however, that they came in a box

Evidently the little reference that we had several weeks ago to Dr. Evan answer in the Chicago Tribune to the effect that there was no danger whatever of getting any disease from handling stamps has made a deep impression: we have had a number of inquiries asking what issue of the paper the question and answer appeared in. For the benefit of those who may wish to keep the clipping we reproduce it as it appeared in the Chicago Tribune, of July 8: "N. Danger From Stamps. Mrs. F. writes: My husband is a dealer in oil stamps, and as such handles them continually. Is there any danger of contracting any diseases such as tuberculosis or anything else that person who originally used the stamps might have had Reply. No."

Our publishing pal, Mr. E. C. Bailey of Decorah, Iowa, who soon out-distances us many years ago when both of us turned our attention to U. S. locals original cover is not above giving a bit of interesting information regarding precancels of his native heath: "I note in a recent issue of the WEEKLY that the precancel 'Decorah' is one of the classics. Now somebody is always ready to take the joy out of life but I'm here to say they 'ain't no sich animal.' I have personally examined the plate from which all Decorah precancels have been made and there is not a wrong or defective letter in the plate. Some one has found a stamp with a blurred impression that looks like a 'B' in place of 'D'—but that's as far as the classic part of it goes. If there is a real Decorah

A SCARCE U. S. PROVISIONAL

Through a fortunate purchase, I am able to offer an entire unused copy of the well known Duncan 2c on 3c Provisional envelope, listed by Scott's catalog as No. 2707, and priced at $8.50.

When the revaluing was authorized by Washington, the Postmaster at Duncan, Oklahoma, overprinted locally by means of a figure "2" within two horizontal bars a small stock held by one of the banks in that city. This variety has from the first been most desirable, and there is a space for it in the Scott albums. I can furnish for a limited time a superb copy at $4.25.

RARE 3c RED ON AMBER, ERROR

The error envelopes, namely, the 3c red on white and the 3c red on blue, have been known for some time, but only during the last year was the 3c red on amber discovered. The find consisted of less than fifty copies, some of which were used, and as the 3c dies were discontinued many months back, there is little likelihood of more being found. The variety lists at $50.00 in the advance sheets of the new 1925 catalog, and I am prepared to furnish a superb entire unused copy at $35.00. I can also furnish the same error on white, Scott's No. 2662a, at $1.50.

If purchased at one time, I will supply the above three envelopes at $40.00.

Transcontinental Air-Mail Service.

In my Chronicle for August 4th, mention was made of the fact that letters intended for delivery by air-mail were being carried by rail, and I expressed my opinion at the time that this was possibly due to the similarity in color and size between the 8c air-mail stamp and the regular 1c, and between the 24c air-mail and the regular 2c. I expressed this opinion to the Third Assistant Postmaster-General, and suggested that a change of color in the case of the air-mail series might overcome the trouble caused by the similarity.

Mr. Glover writes me under date of July 19th as follows:

"I am loath at this time to change the air-mail stamps and I believe I can express the opinion of the Postmaster-General because, with our Philatelic Agency established and now doing such a tremendous business, the Department would not want to have the Philatelists throughout the country feel that it was entering the class of many other countries in issuing new stamps every few weeks, and, of course, that would be the thought which would be laid on our doorstep by many collectors.

Believe the objection which we have been encountering with regard to the improper handling of mail matter intended for the Air-Mail Service will be overcome to a very large extent by the delivery to many of the postmasters of special rubber stamps for the purpose of stamping conspicuously all Air Mail, which will be picked up at the various offices. This procedure has already been inaugurated at some of the larger offices with splendid results, and even at this moment I am turning over in my mind the thought that a special sticker, which could be adopted by the Department for use on the face of such envelopes, might be used to great advantage in this respect. This, however, is just a thought on my part, and is not under contemplation at the present time as it has not been given real serious consideration as yet."

Under date of July 26th the Postmaster-General issued an order effective immediately, extending the air mail service to insured and collect-on-delivery mail (third and fourth class matter exclusively), notwithstanding the parcels are sealed. Limit of weight and size for the present will be the same as for other parcels now acceptable for transportation by airplane service. The rates of postage will be the same as rates of postage for other air mail. The limits of indemnity will remain the same as those fixed for regular transportation. In giving receipts the postmaster shall mark them "Via air mail" and a separate record must be maintained of all insured and collect-on-delivery mail sent in this manner.

Under date of August 1st the Postmaster-General advises us that the continuous air mail service between New York and San Francisco, which was authorized for a thirty-day trial beginning July 1st, will operate on the schedules now in effect until further notice.

The information Service of the Post Office Department frequently mentions the satisfaction this service is giving to large industrial concerns and others, throughout the country, who are using the air mail service for their important business correspondence.

The British Empire Chamber of Commerce in speaking of the service says, "So new is this service that many business men are not familiar with the conveniences it offers, and the real savings in time and expedition of commercial transactions it affords. It will be a matter of the briefest time before a special night service will be put into operation between New York and San Francisco. The business man or banker can finish his day's correspondence, go home and while he sleeps, his mail is being carried to its destination."

The Public Ledger in its business section for August 6th says, "A banking problem of importance that eventually will be solved by airplane service is the collections of commercial banks on each other. 'Floats' is the term they are called in the banking world. The Federal Reserve alone has $68,000,000 in

New Find of 1876-1879 Covers.

Someone literarily inclined could write quite a romance around a correspondence recently found which took place between two sisters, one being located New Haven, Conn., and the other tending the Huguenot Seminary at Wington, Cape of Good Hope. correspondence which was located New Haven took place between 1876 1879 and covers were found going l ways. Those mailed from this cou took a 27c rate in the earlier part later when the rate was changed to 15c charge. The covers consist of 24c in combination with a 3c, two in combination with a 3c, and two 10 combination with a 7c. Those of a date had the 15c Continental and American, each on separate cover. I derstand that the better portion of correspondence which is addressed to Misses Landfeair is in the hands dealer who is likely to offer it at au during the coming Fall.

MOZAMBIQUE.—By a decree of May 18th new values are about to be added to the current pictorial series, viz.:—24c, 70c, Esc. 1.20, Esc. 5, Esc. 10, Esc. 20.—Stamp Collecting.

IRELAND.—We have received the following from Messrs. Bright & Son: On examining some sheets of the 100k large Eagle type in orange and black, we have discovered a very distinct error which we do not think has been noticed or chronicled before.

The error occurs on No. 68, of a sheet of 100, and has an 'I' instead of a 'T' in the word 'POCTZA,' thus reading 'CZIA.' The sheets we found this on are on the thick paper, but as it is a variety, probably exists also on the thin stamp on thin paper."

The article reproduced in your MEKEEL'S WEEKLY, of 24th March, from Stamp Collecting regarding the last set issued in Transjordan is not quite correct. The writer of the article does not seem to know the Arabic language and is unable to give correctly neither the metric transliteration of the Arabic characters nor their true translation in English.

thousand printed in honour of the King's visit to Amman.

The stamps are of Hejaz and overprinted twice. Being thoroughly acquainted with the Arabic language, I am able to give you the particulars of every word and letter of the overprints.

The first surcharge is made in black in one line and reads: 'Hokomat El-Sharq El-Arabia' which means Arabian Government of the East. The additional surcharges made in gold on 5,000 sets are in three lines thus: 'D. Q. J.—Malik El-Arab—11 J. T. 1342'.

The initials in the first line are for: 'Dhikra Qudoom Jelalat' meaning: 'Commemoration of the coming of his Majesty.' The second line means: 'King of the Arabs' and the third line reads '11th Jemad El-Thani 1342.' Jemad El-Thani is the 6th month of the Mohammedan year and not the second month. The months run as follows: Muharran, Safar, Rabi I, Rabi II, Jemad I, Jemad II, Rajab, Shaaban, Ramadan, Shawal, Dhul-Qidah and Dhul-Hijjah. Rabi and Jemad are repeated. Alawal and Al-Thani expressed often in the European languages by the Roman numbers I and II mean: the first and the second respectively. Jemad El-Thani 1342 means therefore Jemad the second (the sixth month) of the year 1342."

FIVE CORNERS LOCATED.

By G. V. STEWART.

While glancing through the "Early Low Values Specialized" column of MEKEEL'S, of June 16, I note that in reference to some two cent stamps of 1883 you say: "Five Corners" is the cancellation on one stamp. Where was 'Five Corners'?"

Five Corners is a town, perhaps I should say village, located in very nearly the southwest corner of Cayuga County, New York. It is about five miles from Cayuga Lake and about seventeen miles north of Ithaca.

SUBSCRIPTION RENEWALS.

Some of our subscribers need to know our rule regarding discontinuances. We discontinue all subscriptions in arrears promptly the second issue of each month. This means that your subscription should be renewed prior to expiration. The expiration number can be ascertained by consulting your wrapper. No free copies of the WEEKLY are sent out and this rule is as fixed as the laws of the M. and P. Our older subscribers understand our rule and the newer subscribers should get acquainted with it.

Geo. L. Lewis, Ashland, Wis.

Rev. Edw. K. Thurlow, pastor of Christ Church, Sheffield, Mass., takes out his membership in the Honor Club and writes such an interesting letter that we should publish it "pro bono philatelo." He writes:—"A few days ago in looking over some stamped envelopes I found one received in 1901 which I saved because of the Pan-American stamp upon it. It reminded me that in the past thirty years I have lapsed several times in my philatelic good health, also that I must renew my subscription to MEKEEL'S WEEKLY STAMP NEWS very soon or else lapse again. So I am sending a check for five years of good health. It may interest other readers to know that I get a great deal of inexpensive pleasure from the WEEKLY. I specialize in the stamp line in ships and navigators. Each week I mark with a red pencil the stamps offered of this kind and a goodly number I assure you. As my salary like that of most parsons won't admit of the purchase of all that I would like I buy once in a while, keep the cost within bounds, and can thus mark up some of them again the following week. Thus my life expectancy is running strong all the time." We are of the opinion that Mr. Thurlow has discovered a very proper way of taking a keen delight in even a limited field of collecting activity.

"I have been a subscriber to the WEEKLY ever since the experiment years ago of a daily issue, which you will remember as having been sent out from St. Louis in manilla envelopes. From an infant to a full adult I'll say. My subscription expires soon and I enclose $5 with my application for membership in the Five-Year Honor Club. MEKEEL'S fills the bill." The above commendation comes from T. F. Harrington, 27 Harvard Ave., Waltham, Mass., and it is needless to say that the entire communication is one which we may well consider eloquent as a testimonial to the value of our publication.

H. B. Phillips, treasurer of the Berkeley Philatelic Society, Berkeley, Calif., a sterling philatelist and a longtime subscriber of the WEEKLY sends in his application for membership in the Honor Club and his letter is of sufficient interest for us to make this quotation from it:—"In the last number of your paper I read an account of how my old friend Gen. C. A. Coolidge had reached his 80th milestone in life's journey. With it came a green subscription blank wanting to know why a renewal for more than

THE MANAGING EDITOR.

PRESENT DAY COVERS.

By G. M. STAPLIN.

A short time ago I started making a collection of present day covers and the result has been so gratifying that I believe a short description may be interesting to some of your readers.

It may also be an incentive to some to make similar collections as there is plenty of material available. This is especially true in the case of those who have access to mails of large concerns. In my own case, the covers are practically all addressed to various officials of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and they are therefore doubly interesting.

Among several hundred covers that I have, are a few that are more or less unique:—Special delivery stamp used to pay registry fee; special delivery stamp used alone on cover; postage stamp used for postage due stamp; postage due stamp used for postage stamp; undated registered cover; cover with precancelled stamp used on first class mail.

These items may not have any great value now, but they correspond exactly with what philatelists are so eager to find among the past issues and are, I believe, worth saving. At any rate they are very interesting and a collection of this kind is easily made, as Uncle Sam's postal employees are only human and therefore are liable to error.

I mount them loose-leaf, using 5x8½ or 6x9 white sheets, according to the size of the covers, the only ornamentation being a black line border which I draw on each page. I print a line or two at the foot of each page, calling attention to the peculiarity of the cover on same. My books have proven interesting to scores of people who never had any idea of collecting stamps.

MY SPECIALISED SWEDEN.

By BARON E. LEIJONHUFVUD.

I started collecting stamps when quite a child. The first stamps were skilling Bancos, which my parents permitted me to remove from their early correspondence. They were beautiful copies of all the values in considerable numbers. Like all young boys, I was unwise, and let an American dealer in Philadelphia tempt me to part with these treasures (in two meanings) for a small amount, but which seemed high to me at the time. I sent him for years a large selection of current Swedish stamps (figure type) in bundles of 100, carefully cleaned and strapped with strips of paper. In one year I sent him as many as 40,000 copies of all kinds. I took my payment in stamps from his stock books, and in this way I got together a very fine collection for a schoolboy. By the time I reached the University the collection was very nice and the copies mostly good. In a moment of weakness I parted with it, and the spirit of collecting fell to a low ebb. After years of travel (during which time I bought up current stamps in the countries visited) I settled down to business in Sweden, and the real stamp collecting commenced.

Perhaps countries with long winters and plenty of snow, and the dark evenings, cause a young man to turn to a recreation indoors which in a sub-tropical or even southern English climate he would not think of. I collected all the world, with a tendency towards specialising Sweden, England, and some colonies. The task became too expensive, and I had to limit myself to try and get together the best and most complete specialised collection of Sweden that has ever been formed. I did not, however, stop my general collection from growing. But Sweden forged ahead, and about 1910 I felt equal to trying to compete in the Bern International Exhibition. In 1911 I took my collection, now very much improved, to Vienna; and in 1912 I got the third Gold Medal in London. In 1913 I sent a still finer collection to Paris and got a large Gold Medal. The same year New York had a splendid Exhibition and I intended to exhibit, and had got all my items into the catalogue, when at the last moment I was unable to sail. Since then I have been too busy to take notice of a few local exhibitions, and the war coming into our lives caused Philately, in the form of International Exhibitions, to stand aside. It is to Mr. Melville's credit that his Exhibition in May this year was the first to give the collectors of the world a chance of meeting again. He did not invite philatelists in the late enemy countries, and it may be he was wise; in any case, Germany was too miserable to take part. I exhibited only twenty-eight stamps in the section for rarities, and this time hors concours.

An event which to me was a charming surprise was His Majesty's gracious invitation to come up to Buckingham Palace and have a proper look at his wonderful collection of Great Britain and Colonies. It was the finest philatelic feast that I and probably all the guests had had. A number of members of the Royal Philatelic Society, and some well-known American collectors, probably also members, were invited. I believe I was one of the few not born in England or the United States that were invited. We had tea, and His Majesty spent fully an hour and a half in animated conversation with his guests.

For personal reasons I decided last summer that I had better part with all the Swedish philatelic treasures gathered together during a period of over thirty years. I had presented my daughters with the stamps, and knowing how difficult it would be for them to turn the collection into cash, I thought it best to make an effort myself. It was not an easy matter to select the place for disposal. Paris was out of the question, and only Stockholm, London or New York could be considered. As, however, each country seems to appreciate its own stamps best, I selected Stockholm, and having done so there was perhaps but one agent equal to trying to help me, viz., Mr. E. Lichtenstein. He opened an exhibition of my collection on Saturday, November 10th, and had the lights arranged to produce the effect of daylight (the so-called Aga lights), as in Stockholm the long winter evenings are closing in. The exhibition is still going merrily for the visitors and the buyers, but not for me. It is with an aching heart I hear of anything disposed of; such is the love one has for stamp treasures. But I must not turn back having put my hand to the plough, and the painful dissolution must now go on. Many items in the sale catalogue are entirely unique, and the Swedish Government ought to buy them for the Postal Museum.

I have, of course, dealt with dealers in many lands and had many pleasant as well as unpleasant episodes. I should say that in most cases the large dealers are as fine a set of business men as the honourable merchants in any other business; the bad reputation that some dealers have got is somewhat of a mystery. You see much about them in the warning columns of the philatelic papers, but you meet few in the flesh in a lifetime. Of course, crooks exist in all businesses, and it is a mistake to deal with that class. If I were to give preference to any dealers, I should say that the Strand in London holds the most select companies and individuals in the stamping line.

Sweden is too small a country to be able to support many first-class dealers, and before the war Berlin was far closer for any large local business. The firm of H. Lichtenstein and Co. the oldest of the stamp-dealing firms in Sweden, and I have had a great deal of business with the present director, is now commissioned to sell my dear stamps. I feel sure that he will take a pride in doling out the carefully selected treasures to the best advantage.

I have had the pleasure of many "finds"—the best ones in this country and I shall refer to one or two in connection with the illustrations. A well-known collector has to put up with a great number of varied applications, and has often the painful duty to tell ignorant folks that the copies sent for inspection, which they fondly imagine valuable treasures, are simply worth nothing. When no stamps are enclosed, silence is best. And often when these worthless copies have been sent, my time has been permitted me to write a word; I just returned the stuff registered. Collectors are known to be most obliging each other, as the hobby is a strong bond. The only exception that I know of is that of Monsieur Rénoultière von Ferber. But in his case it was probably necessary to refuse all, or he would have had time for his own work or pleasure. I know he was a most charming personality, and I was just arranging to have a look at his Swedish stamps when he broke out. To see his treasures in auction room, or even in the ever-courteous Monsieur Gilbert's private office, not the same as to see his collection in the Rue de Varennes.

The finest collections that I have seen are the famous Duveen collections. They are now being sold in the United States by Mr. Charles Phillips; but in the good old days before the world trouble it was one of the best recreations to have Duveen show his wonderful stamp collection in his model house in Park Lane. Every stamp was picked: perfect philately and in perfect condition. It is only eleven or twelve years since Mr. Bacon was engaged in writing up these great collections, and he would receive any visitor in case Mr. Duveen was late.

When I first became a member of the Royal Society, His Majesty was Prince of Wales, and came sometimes to meetings to display his own stamps. Earl of Crawford was our most charming President, and Mr. Tilleard equally charming Secretary. In every one on the Committee was a philatelist and a charming man, and meetings were most instructive.

Of the International Exhibitions the one in Vienna (1911) was the greatest success. All stiffness was absent, the social gatherings had a tone of cordiality which no other city ever offered to the same extent. The Exhibition most beautifully housed and arranged, and I feel sure everybody went home with a number of happy memories. I have in my possession the telegram which was received at the official banquet of

His Most Catholic Majesty, the poor Emperor Francis Joseph. I am glad that the sale of my collection of Sweden is not going to exclude me from the kind fraternity of collectors, as I intend going on with my general collections.

The last Exhibition was probably the largest collection of valuable stamps ever brought together, and I almost regret that I did not compete.

My collection now for sale is exhibited in a well-situated building in Stockholm's "Park Lane," called "Strandvägen," in a locality formerly used as a restaurant. The exhibits lean against the walls, where suitable mouldings have been placed for the frames to rest on, and the room contains one long stand with frames facing in two directions (as in the Horticultural Hall) which runs along the centre. I am not going over to inspect it, as I feel it is a kind of funeral, the last official act in connection with a hobby that has given more moments of pleasure—innocent pleasure—than perhaps any other recreation in this world. Of course, I am hoping to get good prices, though the money will not compensate me for the loss of my treasures!

To this outline of history and a few philatelic and personal remarks belong four plates of illustrations. Plate A shows the entire sheet of 50 öre, Shield issue (1858-1872). It is unique and of great philatelic interest. It was meant as postage and insurance for a small parcel containing jewelry. As the fee, fifty kroner, just required a sheet of 100 50 öre stamps (the highest value at that time in Sweden), the Postal Authorities in Gothenburg folded it, after cancelling each stamp, and slid it under the string which tied the parcel. The gum is on that account untouched. The recipient in London put it aside as a curiosity, and not until 1912 did I hear of it, when Messrs. Bridger and Kay, Ltd., drew my attention to this stamp in their stock. It was probably the greatest surprise in my life to see a complete sheet of the Shield issue in perfect preservation. The type fault "örf" instead of "öre," which was well known, could by this "find" be placed in the sheet; it occurs in the third stamp of the bottom row counting from the left.

Plate B shows four items: the quarter-sheet, unused, 4 skilling Banco, the only block of such a magnitude. It came from an office in Paris and was bought by Professor Lindström. At his death the firm of H. Lichtenstein in Stockholm (the one which is now commissioned to sell my collection) bought up all his stamps, and I had the first pick of these rarities: six of the illustrations on the plates shown are from this collection. The quarter sheet is letter a, Plate B. Three more blocks (blocks of 4) are shown on the same Plate B. They are letters b, d and c. The first and the last represent part of an entire set of the 1885 reprints, perforation 13; the letter d is an imperforate block of the 3 skilling Banco, private print, of which there are only a few sets in existence, two of which are in my collection.

Plate C has two rarities from the Lindström Collection (h and e); the block of sixteen of 6 öre "Lösen" (Postage Due) is from the second issue, 1877, and printed on both sides. As previously mentioned, there were two sheets of 100 printed a second time, but very few have been kept. This block is the largest one in existence. My collection contains also three single copies of the other sheet in pale yellow; the large block is bright orange-yellow. The block of eight 17 öre, grey, perforation 14, is among the largest blocks of this very rare stamp. The original colour was violet, or red-violet, but in 1869 a limited number of sheets were printed in grey. Of the two remaining rarities on Plate C, the block of 4 of the olive-grey, 6 öre, Figure issue, perforation 14, is extremely rare. The stamp, 5 öre, error, brown instead of green, King Oscar, was printed in 1891 and is perforated 13. Only one sheet is known to have been printed in brown, and very few copies got into circulation. After the members of the Postal Union had had their copies very few remained, and at the time I procured my copy only two were known in private hands. There are now ten unused copies and one used copy known. It is said that a few copies still exist in the Post Office in Stockholm.

Plate D shows some of the most remarkable stamps in the collection. No. 1 is a corner strip of the 3 skilling Banco with full "Tumba" margin, unused, and the only one kept from this rare issue. It came from the Ferrari Collection. No. 2 came from the Avery Collection, and is also the only 24 skilling Banco unused with corner margin. No. 3 is one of my most remarkable "finds." I found seven stamps in 1913 of the Gustaf V stamps, which at that time had no watermark, printed on paper with watermark wavy lines; there were two values, four 10 öre, red, and three 5 öre, green. The odd stamp was given away and found a place in the Postal Museum.

The two strips are as yet unbroken. The strip shown is the 10 öre, but the watermark is only visible (on the photo) between each two stamps, i.e., on each side of the vertical perforation. Many have been the attempts to get these strips away from me, but until now without success. As no others have been found, it appears that one sheet of each value was printed on the wrong paper, and the rest are probably destroyed, this watermark not being very striking to the eye. No. 4 is the famous 3 skilling, yellow, error of colour, which came from the Ferrari Collection. I have published its history in the Exhibition number of the Stamp Lover this year, and I had to go back to its first owner, a schoolboy in Stockholm, who, now a retired Lieutenant-Colonel, wrote out the history of its discovery and its fate as far as he knew; the rest was easy. It is the rarest stamp in Europe, and, being unique in the absolute sense, should be of equal rarity to the few other stamps of the same quality. It is a fine copy, and finally completed my collection. I have already remarked how it came to be printed on the paper of the 1857 8 skilling Banco paper, and in this stamp's identical colour! But I love this rare stamp the least of all my treasures. It is study, long possession, and search for a stamp that makes you love it when you succeed! No. 5 is a provisional of 1889 where the printer has taken a sheet of the 6 öre, lilac, instead of 12 öre, blue, for surcharge. These stamps were only in use during three months, by which time the new value, 10 öre, had been printed. There are three copies in my collection, and no one in Sweden has ever heard of any others. I discovered them in a young man's modest collection, and we very soon came to terms! The surcharge is in blue, which was the colour used for surcharging the 12 öre sheet. No. 6 represents a first proof of the 12 öre stamps. It must have been printed in 1872 before the figure stamps came into circulation; but the authorities did not approve, and this, to my taste, beautiful design was never used. No. 7 is another proof; it belongs to a series of several designs tried in 1884 before that of the well-known King Oscar's head was selected. It is line-engraved and printed in blue. No. 8 is a specimen of the 1910 figure stamps in two colours, 4 öre, carmine and blue, in which the centre (which is in blue) has been shifted sideways when the second colour print took place. I have personally never valued the many varieties of these stamps, but in Sweden there seems to be a considerable money value attached to these freak prints, the one shown on the plate costing about £5. No. 9 is another curiosity, but not from the same view-point as the previous number. I have only found this one copy among the hundreds of 24 skilling Bancos that I have handled and examined. It appears that some substance has got in the way while printing, and the left top corner has a bar instead of the figure 24. I accepted it as a curiosity in my collection, especially as the stamp itself is a good one. But people who love what I call freak stamps should put them in a special album; there are enough freaks to bring together a large collection. I had very few among my stamps, and only if the stamp itself had some philatelic or money value.

The collecting of stamps from different plates and retouched plates is very interesting, and a smut or a piece of stick or cotton or any foreign material can easily cause a stamp to look very curious; but as these "type-faults," as some philatelists call these vagaries, do not occur again in each sheet, but are little accidents, I have never taken much notice of them.

I think the first philatelic society of which I became a member was the Royal Philatelic Society. After my various exhibitions and some small notes in the philatelic press, I was invited to join a great many societies. I am, in fact, not quite sure how many I do belong to. The Berlin, the Junior, the Herts, Stockholm's Filatelist Sällskap, the Société Française de Timbrologie, and the Collectors Club in New York have all claimed me. In several I am a life member, and some of the others are good enough to send me their journals, though I have not paid any subscriptions since the war broke out. I have traveled a lot and made many fine "picks" in out-of-the-way places, but I have never found anything for the special collection except in Sweden and England.

I have collected philatelic literature in a small way, and appreciate articles of research; they help the collector very much, especially when trying to learn a difficult country. I was elected a member of the Philatelic Literature Society and received its publications with much pleasure. I miss the fine journals which I believe ceased to appear when Mr. Bacon became His Majesty's Curator of the Royal Collections. I may be wrong, but I have not to my knowledge heard from the Society since about that time.

When thinking of my many years of "hunting" for the rarities of Sweden, and the sale just started, my emotions are varied; but each time some spirit is whispering the Latin saying: "Sic transit gloria mundi."—Stanley Gibbons Monthly Journal.

JULY SUBSCRIPTION RECORD.

The Fennell Stamp Co., and the Pikes Peak Stamp Co., are neck and neck in the July business, the former having 47 subscriptions to their credit and the last named having 45. GOULD COLLECTION OF OLD MONEY.

In an old leather-bound ledger, Walter B. Gould of Bangor has a collection of paper money which, if it were rated at its face value, would be worth several thousand dollars. It includes samples of the currency authorized by the Colonial Congress in '76, some of the fractional currency issued during the Civil War, and many bank notes issued by Maine financial institutions in the period before and after the Civil War.

The attitude toward "Continental" has not changed in the 150 years since the colonies revolted against Great Britain. "Not worth a Continental," as a contemptuous phrase, is just as true today as it ever was, Mr. Gould says. None of his samples of very early currency are worth even their face value, and some of them are absolutely worthless.

Any of the fractional currency issued during the Civil War is worth face value or more now, he says. These notes, running from 5 to 50 cents in value, can be redeemed at any bank, but they are the only part of the collection which would bring a price.

The value of the Confederate bills which are in the ledger is determined by the clearness of the engraving. Some of the $50 bills are worth 25 cents, the others are worth less or nothing.

The notes issued by forgotten Maine banks are interesting. Few of them have been seen for many years. There is currency signed by officers of the old Norumbega and Maritime banks of Bangor, and other notes issued before 1861 by banks in Ellsworth, Old Town, Frankfort, Rockland and other Maine towns that no longer have banks. In the collection there is also an abundance of "shin plasters," the private script with which lumbering companies paid their laborers in the early days.

Yellowed by time and in some cases torn by rough handling, these bills are interesting because they reveal why Maine people were suspicious of paper money almost up to the 20th century. There was such an abundance of currency that "hard money" was extremely scarce.

Mr. Gould, who for many years conducted a wholesale and retail candy business in Bangor, remembers days when all the money that came in was either currency or pennies, which were not then and are now good as legal tender for over one dollar.

The collection represents 25 years of effort on the part of Mr. Gould and he has collected from Maine to California. He has bought thousands of the old bills and has sold many to western collectors. Though the value of most old bills is little, he enjoys making the collection because he believes the historical interests in and value of paper money is equal to that of postage stamps.

No postage stamps were issued in the United States prior to 1847, and yet a ten cent stamp of that year brings $7,500 if it is well preserved. A $10 or $50 bill of any year from 1820 to 1850 can be obtained for a few cents.

Mr. Gould collects not only paper

DEATH OF HUGO GRIEBERT.

By FRED J. MELVILLE.

(It can truly be said that one of the greatest philatelists of the present day has passed on in the death of Hugo Griebert. We feel a deep sense of grief in the personal loss that is sustained in the death of this former advertiser and friend. On visits to the great metropolis we always met with a warm welcome at the office of Mr. Griebert. His stock of stamps was one of the finest in London, and as Mr. Melville aptly points out, his services to the literature of our hobby have been of an extensive character. A large number of American collectors will join with our English friends in mourning the loss of this great philatelist. —W. O. W.)

It is with great regret that we learn that Mr. Hugo Griebert passed away in a nursing home in London on July 23rd. His health was the cause of his early retirement from the business which he had so successfully built up in the West End, and since his withdrawal from active business life, the state of his health became rapidly worse.

Hugo Griebert was one of the best known and most respected figures in the London stamp world. He commenced to deal in stamps about the age of seventeen, in 1886, and during the thirty-eight years which have elapsed he carried through a surprising number of transactions of great magnitude. He was established at 13 and 14, New Bond Street, when he transferred his business to No. 170, Strand, in 1907. It was in the autumn of 1921 that he disposed of his stock to Messrs. Stanley Gibbons, Ltd.

During an active philatelic career of nearly forty years, he bought many large stocks, dealers' stocks, Government remainders, and of course many collections. At one period within a few months of each other, he purchased the huge stocks of Faustino A. Martins (a rich store of Portuguese colonials and especially Portuguese India), the great stock accumulated by Charles Roussin of Paris, and the wonderful stock of Italian States belonging to Signor Icilio Arturo Loli of Bologna.

Since his retirement from active business, Mr. Griebert, although fighting against an incurable malady, made several memorable appearances in the philatelic world, notably at the Ferrary sales in Paris, where he, as the adviser and trusted agent of Mr. Arthur Hind of Utica, bought many of the greatest gems and rarities of the Ferrary collection. He also took an active interest and part, though his sufferings were keenly apparent to all who met him, in the great International Stamp Exhibition held in London last year. There he not only secured for London a sight of the Hind treasures, he showed the results of some of his life studies in the philatelic field.

His remarkable study of the first issue of Turkey, which gained a gold medal in the "single issues specialised," was typical of the more abstruse studies of little-known stamps for which Mr. Griebert was well known. In the same exhibition he showed a valuable study of the first issue of Hungary, and through his long career he laboured with the zeal of the student-enthusiast in the intensive study of stamps of the South American continent especially, and in many other long unpopular countries, which owe their rise in philatelic favour largely to his researches.

As a student he was also a frequent writer. Most of his shorter studies appeared in his house organ, "Griebert's Philatelic Notes and Offers," which he started in 1908 and continued until his retirement in 1921. In addition he published two monographs which are likely long to remain the standard authorities on their respective subjects:—"A Study of the Stamps of Uruguay," published as one of the Stanley Gibbons Philatelic Handbooks, in 1910, and

"The Stamps of Spain, 1850 to 1854," which he published himself in 1920.

Mr. Griebert's wide and deep knowledge of stamps, and his love of research, earned him the greatest regard amongst his many advanced clients, to whom he freely gave from the rich stores of his own discoveries in helping them to evolve their own collections and to solve the philatelic problems presented therein. Although he achieved a distinct success in the trade in stamps, he was essentially a stamp-lover, and was never content for long to be parted from his stamps. At a time when one might have thought his mind and body were too harassed to allow him to dabble in stamps, in a nursing home, where I dropped in to take tea with him, he pulled out the drawer of a writing table and showed me an accumulation of stamps, mostly common ones, and some torn off from the letters that were brought to him daily from his home. It pleased him to amuse himself even in a simple way with stamps, for stamps were a passion with him throughout his long career, and his profession was his hobby.

Mr. Griebert leaves a widow and a young family, two sons and a daughter. To Mrs. Griebert, so well known and greatly liked in the philatelic world, and to her children, philatelists the world over will tender their profound sympathy in the loss of one of the greatest philatelists of our time.

JAMAICA PICTORIALS OF 1920-21.

The Four-Penny stamp was issued on January 21st, 1921, printed from an engraved plate of 80 subjects, i. e., 10x8, on white paper watermarked old type CA multiple upright, perforated 14 comb. The design is treated in upright rectangular style, the format being smaller than the last of the series, and of the same size as the 2d, and principally depicts the Cathedral at Spanish Town. A brief history of this building is as follows:

With the decline of the first Spanish city, that of Seville, situated on the north, near the present St. Ann's Bay, the "Villa de la Vega" or City of the Plains, was founded about 1523. The Spanish name "Villa de la Vega" was corrupted by the English to "St. Jago de la Vega" or St. James of the plains, and later to "Spanish Town." The application of "St. Jago de la Vega" was probably due to the fact that the Spaniards usually referred to the island as "Santiago," and their records invariably were written "island of Santiago called Jamaica."

In the days of Columbus, the Church and State were far more closely related than they are now, and such an adventure as his, as well as the colonization of the island, of necessity required the blessing and probably the active co-operation of the Church, so it is reasonably certain that a mission existed from the time of the occupation, but we do know that the Spanish King, in Jan. 1515, wrote his ambassador at Rome expressing his desire to found an Abbey at Jamaica, nominated one of his chaplains for the post and begged the Pope to create it. His desire must have been granted, as we learn that in March, 1522, he wrote to the Pope reporting the death of Sancho de Matienzo, "Abbot of Jamaica," and nominated his successor; again, in Sept., 1526, the King wrote the Governor of the island stating that Peter Martir, "Abbot of the island" had represented that Pedro de Mazuelo, Island Treasurer, was using the Indians contracted for and engaged on the building of the Church, for other purposes, and delaying the work; he commanded that this interference with the work must cease at once. The earliest records indicate that the site was occupied by a wooden Church building as early as 1523, apparently extended and improved as is suggested in the preceding paragraph, and completed about 1530. This building seems to have stood until 1655, when the town was captured by the British under Admirals Penn and Venables, and the Church and a monastery were seriously damaged by the "fanatic soldiery." The Church was restored, as the records report its complete destruction by a terrible hurricane in 1712. The present building was erected in 1714, and is therefore probably the oldest, and certainly one of the oldest, of British Colonial Cathedrals, although it did not attain Cathedral status until 1843, when Her late Majesty, Queen Victoria, so appointed it by letters patent dated November 28th of that year. Its furnishings bear out its antiquity, as it possesses altar plate in pure silver dating from 1769, among which is a flagon dated 1777, but inscribed as re-fashioned from the old plate of 1685, the maker's name is signified by the letters S. W., and are apparently identical with similar initials which exist on a pair of candle sticks in Trinity College, Oxford, dated 1759. Some very fine pieces of statuary within its walls carry great British names, one of the best being a monument to Thomas, Earl of Effingham Baron Howard and his wife Catherine, by Bacon. Another, is to Elizabeth Mary, Countess of Elgin and Kincardine, by Sir John Steell, noted in Edinburgh for his statues of Sir Walter Scott and the late Prince Consort, and in New York for his colossal figure of Burns. It is enough to mention these two, but there are many other fine pieces by both these and other famed sculptors.

The view of the Cathedral which appears on this stamp, shows the tower which was added in 1817, and forms the vignette which is printed in deep rich sepia set in a frame of green, the whole giving a very pleasing effect, so that the stamp is sometimes described as the handsomest of the series. At the top, the figures of value appear at left and right in colour in white tablets set on deeply shaded squares, between are the words "Postage Revenue" in small white letters below which is "Jamaica" in heavy white block type set in a slight curve to conform to the vignette. At left and right are side panels on which are shown bunches of oranges, at bottom the figures of value again appear as above, with the words "Spanish Town Cathedral" between in small white letters. A variety which is constant, exists; it is No. 15, enumerating across the sheet from left to right. The figures of value in the upper corners of this specimen, show a stop in positions usually used when writing or printing the term 4d. At the left it appears beside the d, thus 4d., and at the right below the d, only on this specimen and in the upper corners only, are the values printed in this manner, on all others the value is printed without period.

The stamp in the same design and colours, but on the new script paper, was noted as on sale at the Cross Roads P. O. on Dec. 5th, 1921, but the official record deals with its appearance when first issued on the old paper only, and appears in the Gazette of Jan. 20th, 1921: "Stamp Office, Kingston, 17th January 1921.

The following is a description of a FOUR-PENNY adhesive stamp to be used for postage and revenue purposes. This stamp will be put into circulation

The Six-Penny stamp of the series should have been issued in June, 1921, has not yet appeared. A printing was from an approved design, and an initial supply of 362,400 was sent out to colony from England, arriving there May 1921, but when examined for issue in June, the printing was found to be satisfactory; and the subject of design, "The Abolition of Slavery," considered to be of a possibly inflammatory nature, because of certain conditions existing in the island; and for reasons the issue was suppressed, the tire stock in the island being destroyed by burning in July. Not long after, probably due to the pernicious system adopted by the Crown Agents of British Colonial stamps to dealers in London, the stamp was reported at once made the subject of energetic

The suppressed 6d Pictorial, has not n officially recorded, but it is possible
describe it as follows:

Printed from an engraved plate of 40
jects, i. e., 5x8 in one sheet on white ver watermarked Script CA multiple the right, perforated 14 comb. The mp is of "maximum size," its area is ctly that of the 1½d Contingent, and will be noted that the plate is composed the same number of subjects arranged the same way, while the watermark gests that paper intended for the d was used, as although all the other orials were first issued on the old er, the 3d and 5sh as late as April 1, the paper for the 1½d Contingent s changed to Script as early as Feb-ry of the same year. The design is ated in transverse rectangular style, l the vignette is a copy of a lithoph in the Picture Gallery in the Mum at Kingston. This lithograph is R. Cartwright, of 1 Warwick Place, iford Row, London, and depicts the ne in the square at Spanish Town on gust 1st, 1838, when the Governor, Lionel Smith, read the Declaration of edom from Slavery to about 8000 ple assembled there. The picture ws the Rodney Memorial, also seen on use, also seen on the 2d stamp, ap-rs at the left, with the Governor, the hop, and the Revd. J. M. Philippo on steps, the first with the document in hands. The Parliament Building is a at the right, the assembled crowd in foreground, and a flag staff bearing Royal Standard is at the right centre.

The whole vignette is printed in Indian l and is set in a frame of blue-grey, effect is not pleasing. The design of the frame is far from ornate, simply s, panels, and a scroll or two. At top is the word "Jamaica" in heavy

LET'S STRAIGHTEN OUT THE BANK NOTE ISSUES

So many U.S. collections are very weak in their showings of the stamps issued between 1870 and 1888. Most of the spaces may be filled, but examination shows that in a large majority of cases stamps are misplaced, and National, Continental, American and Re-engraved series are hopelessly mixed. If you want those stamps where they belong, here is the opportunity to put them right. Fine copies for the condition cranked; good, clean, sound stamps for the man who is not so particular about the fine points of centering and cancellation.

Postage extra on orders under $1. Your money cheerfully returned if you do not want the stamps. All orders subject to prior sale.

S. P. A. CONVENTION.

The thirtieth annual convention of the Society of Philatelic Americans was held in the Hotel Continental, New York, August 4-6, with about fifty in attendance. A. O. Litt, chairman of the local committee of arrangements, presided at the opening. Secretary Lycett made the invocation, and Dr. J. B. Chittenden, Secretary of the Collectors Club, welcomed the visitors on behalf of his club and the New York philatelists. President Rotnem was unavoidably absent, and had designated Joseph Hoffman, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, to preside in his stead.

President Rotnem's address, read by the Secretary, felicitated the other officers on the good work accomplished during the year, and praised the Ways and Means Committee for the progress made in settling claims against the Sales Department which had been robbed by two dishonest members, the losses of which are being paid as rapidly as possible, and it is hoped to pay more this year. A detailed report was made by the committee, which stated that $1,340.38 of claims had been liquidated. The illness of former Secretary Swartz was regretted and wishes for his speedy recovery expressed.

The Treasurer's report showed a balance in every fund and the Secretary reported a membership of 556.

Business sessions were had each day of the three, and an entire revision was made of the Constitution, some of the changes being necessitated by the incorporation which had been effected under the laws of Minnesota. The initiation fee was made $1 and annual dues $2, to take effect September 1. Sixteen new members were proposed and the veteran Vahian Mozian was made a life member. A new seal was adopted. Place of next meeting left to Board of Governors.

The Stamp Collectors Magazine was chosen as the official organ.

The entertaining features comprised a trip Monday night to Luna Park, Coney Island, by auto; an auction by M. Ohlman on Tuesday; a bourse on Tuesday night, at which a large number of stamps and much money changed hands; and a banquet on Wednesday night, at which Mr. Hoffman was the toast-master, and addresses of great interest were made by Professor Chittenden, Frank W. Crane, of New York Times; W. C. Henry, of Los Angeles; President John L. Stroub, of the New York Philatelic Society; Mr. A. O. Litt, chairman of Committee of Arrangements; and Treasurer N. R. Hoover.

white block type, with scrolls on both sides, at the corners the value 6d appears in colour on the white bosses of shields supported by crossed branches of laurel. At the left is the word "Postage" in small white letters, reading up, on a coloured panel imposed on a scroll, with lines above and below. At the right is the word "Revenue," reading down, printed and set similarly to Postage. At the bottom on a narrow coloured panel are the words and figures "Abolition of Slavery 1st Aug. 1838." in small white characters, below which is another scroll and lines.

It is currently reported that another design has been prepared and approved for a stamp of this value to complete the Pictorial series. Rumor states that the vignette is a picture of the harbour and town of Port Royal, set in a nautical frame, on which anchors and ropes are prominent.

FIVE-YEAR HONOR CLUB.

Gustave Larson, Worcester, Mass.
Theodore Mainhart, Johnstown, Pa.
R. C. Smith, Richmond, Ind.

Gustave Larson, who takes out membership in our Honor Club this week, has been a subscriber to the WEEKLY for the past ten years and predicts that his interest in the hobby will certainly last for another ten years. As a move in the right direction he sends check for a five-year renewal. Mr. Larson is a member of the Philatelic Society of Sweden, New York Philatelic Society and the S.P.A. He specializes in the Scandinavian countries and some of the German States.

It is with great pleasure that we enter the name of Theodore Mainhart of Johnstown, Pa., as a member of our Honor Club. Mr. Mainhart is treasurer of the Johnston Savings Bank. He has been a subscriber and advertiser with us over the past twenty-five years and he pays us this tribute:—"I know of no other publication which so well supplies the needs of collector and dealer as does the WEEKLY." Mr. Mainhart brings to the Managing Editor recollections of the old Philatelic Era which he used as an advertising medium when the fortunes of that publication were in our hands. Mr. Mainhart is now advertising regularly in the WEEKLY and he is proving in every way a staunch friend and admirer of our publication.

As we go to press an application for membership in the Honor Club is received from R. C. Smith of the Richmond Coal Co., Richmond, Ind. We enter his name upon our list with pleasure.

NEWFOUNDLAND PICTORIALS, 1923-24.

By HARRY E. HUBER.

The first consignment of stamps of the pictorial series, received at St. John's, by parcel post, via N. Y., by the steamer Rosalind, on July 5, 1923, and issued July 9th, comprised the following quantities:—

1c,	1,250,000
2c,	1,250,000
3c,	700,000
4c,	50,000
5c,	50,000
6c,	100,000
8c,	25,000
9c,	25,000
10c,	25,000
11c,	25,000
12c,	25,000
15c,	5,000

With a large remainder stock of the 15c Cabot (4900, May 27, 1922), printings of the 15c pictorial have been very small, and the 5000 received by the "Rosalind" on July 5th, were exhausted by July 31st. A second lot of 2400 came by the steamer Silvia, August 9th, and a third lot in September. The 4c pictorial also exhausted in August, and a further lot arrived shortly afterwards. On March 16, 1924, the 4c, 5c and 15c pictorials were not in stock, and the 4c and 5c Caribou and 15c Cabot remainders were serving. In August, 1924, the 15c, 24c, 30c and 60c Cabot, and 1c, 4c, 5c, 24c and 36c Caribou were still available.

The colors of the 4c and 6c (foreign post card and letter rates, respectively) are not in agreement with the Postal Union colors of red and blue, and of this the postal authorities are aware. This disregard of regulations of the Postal Union is not surprising, as Newfoundland has had a 6c foreign letter rate since May 17, 1918; although it was not until November 30, 1920, that a higher rate than 5c was approved by the representatives of the Union.

Locally, the stamps of the new series received much criticism, and especially, the workmanship, which is very poor compared with the fine engraving of the American Bank Note Co., in the Cabot series. The frames of some values are heavy (2c and 8c in particular), although as a whole they are much better than the earlier productions of Whitehead, Morris & Co., Ltd. (Guy and Coronation series). The small size is convenient for use on receipts and other documents requiring their use fiscally, but the stamps lack the clearness which a larger size would have given them.

Air Mail stamps of 10c and 15c were ordered at a time when it seemed likely that a contract would be entered into with Major Cotton for the winter carrying of mails, but this did not materialize, and in October, 1923, the planes were shipped away from the island. There being no use for air mail stamps, they were cancelled.

The 20c and 24c stamps of the series did not arrive with the first consignment of stamps. Through some mixup in telegraphic correspondence, work on the 20c was held and it was said that as someone "higher up" objected to the design of the 24c, this too was held. The probability is that the authorities desired to lower the stock of the 24c Caribou before bringing out the 24c pictorial. In his report for the year ending June 30, 1922, the Minister of Posts and Telegraphs (W. W. Halfyard) wrote under date of March 1923:—

"The Department has now in preparation a new series of stamps which will be ready for sale within a few months. The set is a pictorial one and consists of 14 regular postage values, i.e., 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 15, 20 and 24c, also a 10c and 15c stamp for aerial service. It is unlikely, however, that we shall issue any of the values over 15c this year."

Work on both values was ordered to proceed at the end of September, and the 24c was received at St. John's on April 15, 1924, and the 20c on April 26th—10,000 of each (100 sheets). A small quantity of the 24c was released by the Deputy Minister of Posts and Telegraphs on April 22nd, and of the 20c on April 28th. Subsequently orders booked from abroad were supplied by the Wholesale Dept. of the G. P. O., but for many months they were not on sale to the public except in complete sets.

The 20c is orange brown in color (although dark green was selected by the Post Office Department), and the 24c sepia; the shape of the former being a horizontal rectangle, and the latter, an upright rectangle. Both are printed from line engraved plates on unwatermarked paper, in sheets of 100 (10 x 10), with plain margins, except for a cross mark for quartering purposes in each of the four margins. The 20c is perforated comb 14 x 13½ and the 24c single line 14.

The frame designs of the 20c and 24c are identical with those of the 12c and 4c respectively, and the inscriptions are similarly positioned. A descriptive title appears under the vignette in minute colored letters—on the 20c reading "Placentia, from Mount Pleasant," and on the 24c "Topsail Falls, near St. John's" from photographs by Doyle and Holloway respectively.

National War Memorial Stamps.

On Commemoration Day, July 1, 1924, the 8th anniversary of the battle of Beaumont Hamel, Newfoundland's National War Memorial, in honor of those "who gave their lives by sea and land for the defense of the British Empire in the Great War, 1914-18", was unveiled by Field Marshal Earl Haig. Detachments from the English, French and American men-of-war in port participated in the ceremonies.

The Memorial stands on King's Beach, in the eastern part of St. John's (opposite the landing pier of the Red Cross Line), where Sir Humphrey Gilbert, on August 5, 1583, read his commission from Queen Elizabeth empowering him in her name to take possession of the island. The Royal Arms cut in lead were affixed to a post, a salute was fired, and the flag of England raised. This was the first official hoisting of the British flag in "British Dominions beyond the sea," and incidentally, the founding of the British Empire.

Early in May, 1924, the suggestion was made that the Department of Posts and Telegraphs issue a special stamp, or a

The Bi-Monthly Journal

A house organ with an inimitable style and charm, published every two months. Each issue consists of from 32 to 48 pages, every one containing a formidable array of unusual offerings in medium and scarce sets, packets and special collections, dealers' stocks, single stamps, philatelic supplies, etc., etc.

Albert C. Munson, 412 Broadway, Houston, Texas, writes:
 "I enjoy the Bi-Monthly as much as MEKEEL'S; there is no other paper, house organ, journal or circular of any kind wherein one can find such extraordinarily good stock—and at such reasonable prices."

C. A. Ralston, 164 Vaughn St., Waterloo, Iowa, says:
 "I am paying subscription charges for two large house organs, but would rather get along without both of them than to lose yours. If necessary, I know that I could pay a substantial subscription to the Bi-Monthly and save all of it on stamps offered in a single issue."

The Bi-Monthly Journal is a distinctive publication and absolutely free to patrons. You can't afford to be without it!

series of low face value, depicting Memorial, and the various groups statutory which form it. The figure representing the Royal Newfoundland Regiment, the Royal Naval Reserve, the allegory of Freedom (which mounts the Memorial) in particular would lend themselves effectively to production in stamp designs.

The authorities thought favorably the suggestion and as the shortness of time would not permit the preparation of stamps in special design, a suitable print (1916—July 1st—1924) applied part of the remainder stock of the Caribou (Beaumont Hamel) was considered. This project would doubt have been carried through had it been for a change in government. The country was in the throes of a General Election, and action had to be deferred until the results of the poll on June were made known. The Opposition successful, and when the new Minister was sworn in on Monday, June 9th, portfolio of Minister of Posts and Telegraphs fell to Mr. W. J. Wood (vice M. E. Hawco).

Stamp Sales.

The revenue of the Department for the year 1921-22, was $368,303.71, an expenditure of $1,311,834.25. Of latter figure $628,683.27 represents postage subsidies. The value of stamps and stationery sold during year was $226,536.76, as against $247,137.53 in the previous year.

Slogan Cancellations.

In the G. P. O. at St. John's, are electric cancelling machines, which place the postmark in the form of a slogan lined circle, lettered around the inner edge. "St. John's, Nfld. 1924", and "MAY 6 PM" in two lines in the center. flag of seven wavy lines extends to right, and this at times is removed and replaced by a slogan die.

The first to be used was in 1918: "I will—win the war—don't waste similar in type to those used by most of the larger cities in the States at period. This was removed early in January, 1919, and the wavy lines re-installed.

About the middle of May, 1921, flag portion was removed (from one machine only), and a special die inserted—"Buy—Made In—Newfoundland Goods." Another variety appeared March 14, 1922: "Have you contributed to the—War Memorial," which was in use until the end of August.

On March 1, 1923, a fourth variety came into use "Address—mail to Street or—Box Number," and for six months was in concurrent use with the "Buy Made in Newfoundland Goods"—i.e., one on each machine.

The latter was replaced on October 17, 1923, by one furnished by the G. P. O., London, lettered "British Empire a lion facing the left, with five wavy lines at either side—"Exhibition 1924." Varieties four and five were being used concurrently in August, 1924.

THE MANAGING EDITOR.

EDITORIAL.

While expectations ran high as to the attendance at the Detroit convention, it is seen from indications that no disappointment will be felt on the score of numerical showing at Detroit. The number of delegates already present is such as to be impressive, and the interest in the affairs of the national organization is at the highest point; and, too, credit must be given for the increased general interest that is felt in philately. From near and far, new and old members are gathering at the headquarters in Detroit, and on the eve of the convention it is but just to say that the meeting will be one worthy of large letters on the scroll of the A. P. S. There is a feeling that the proceedings of the convention will be lively. Talk of proposed legislation goes on, and it is seen that there is a division of opinion on certain of the proposals that will come before the convention.
 The Detroit collectors are doing their utmost to systematize everything so that an orderly meeting will result, and they are solicitous in their attentions to visitors.
 Much in the way of public and private entertainment is on the tapis, and the week is destined to be a memorable one.
 Thus far the attendance of those living at a distance is good, and when all the returns are in it is safe to say that as a representative gathering the Detroit convention will be one almost unmatched, heretofore.

To those who take a political stand in the affairs of the organization by reason of their philatelic interest, the atmosphere is agreeable. There are preliminary discussions on the advisability of certain proposals that may be made to the convention, and from all appearances, it is unlikely that there will be any dull moments in the meeting. One of the most drastic suggestions is that advising the merging of the sales department and the office of secretary under one administrative head. We forbear to comment at this time on it as a fuller understanding of the subject will be necessary before one may cope with it intelligently. Several measures are to be offered looking for relief from conditions as they apply in an individual sense to certain sections, and we believe that the personal element will not be lacking in the discussions at the sessions. Taking the view of the disinterested by-stander we may say with every assurance that the convention in a preliminary sense gives reason to feel that it will not suffer by comparison with conventions of other organizations having a somewhat serious purpose. This is well, and while the annual meetings of our national body have always been removed from triviality, yet it is only in later years that the earnest application of those interested in the legislative side has come to fullest flower. We rejoice in the feeling that philately is coming into its own; and we have at hand evidence to that effect in the annual meeting of the
 A. P. S. at Detroit.

* * *

In this issue we shall try to have some further references to the convention; and we shall by no means slight the annual meeting of the American Stamp Dealers Association, as the conventions of that organization latterly have had a decided influence on the morale of the dealing body in this country. A good attendance is assured at this convention of the A. S. D. A., and it will be interesting to see what further evidences of progress will be unfolded at the meeting.
 While it is true that the transactions of this body by their nature are of a secret kind, yet there are always general considerations that are discussed that deserve publicity. The idea of improvement in a commercial sense is one that should be enlarged to its fullest usefulness; and we speak in behalf of the great majority of dealers in this country when we say that they are in sympathy with the thought of bettering trade relations as affecting interchange among themselves, and, of course, with their customers. While some of them admit that they are backward in giving material support to the movement, yet they promise that as time goes on they will devote more attention to it. As the average tone of dealers becomes elevated, the pleasure that collectors will have in following their pursuit and buying their stamps will be enhanced, and one need not be particularly forward-looking in saying that in a few years remedial measures that are now in their infancy will have become accepted as paragraphs in the code of business ethics. The Monday morning session of the dealers' organization is a success so far as attendance; and such particulars as are intended for public consumption will be given in an early issue.

In the Boston Sunday Globe of August 3, 1924, we find an article covering almost a half page that is headed "Postage Stamp Romance with Wealth at the End"; and with the sub-heading "Brain-tree School Teacher Wins Long Fight to Prove his 71 'Missionaries' are Genuine, Worth Up to $12,000 Each." It is apparent that Mr. G. H. Grinnell has enlisted aid from important sources, judging from the wonderful publicity that his stamps have attained. It is something to find an article of this kind in a Sunday newspaper of the circulation of the Globe, and the well-written account of this romance of postage stamps is one that will cause a wide-spread interest on the part of the public on the subject of the missionaries, the three varieties of which are illustrated in the article. We are particularly impressed by one of the sub-heads in the story, "On the Right Track At Last" which leads up to the very affidavit that we presented in the preceding issue. The conclusion of the writer of this remarkable article is interesting, and even in case we find space for the article in its entirety elsewhere, it will do no harm to submit it here. "And now, with this precious letter safely in his possession, Grinnell is starting back to Los Angeles. He will probably put his Missionary stamps on the market when he returns. The school-teacher collector does not talk much about that phase of the situation. The fact that he has just found the key that will unlock close to $400,000 to him seems to affect him not at all. He does not collect stamps for business, but for pleasure.
 And his chief satisfaction in the Missionary Stamp affair seems to be that he has at last justified himself in the eyes of all those who branded him as the "bogus" stamp collector at the time of his $65,000 law suit several years ago. "I challenge any stamp collector to produce as good a pedigree for his Missionary Stamps as I have," he said, proudly. And Grinnell will tell you that to a real stamp collector months of toil and trouble are a cheap price to pay for the privilege of being able to say that.

GEORGE W. LINN CO., Columbus, O.

In conversation with Mr. Grinnell cannot escape the conviction that he that his stamps are absolutely genui-and in answer to the charge that they not possess wholly the characterist marking the known genuine stamps the first issue of Hawaii, he maintaithat notwithstanding the discrepancies a technical sense, they are bona fide e-anations from the Islands. He reali-that the decision of the Court must ha-its effect on those who have followed case, and the obstacle presented caused him to throw himself into the
 for the good reputation of his stan-with more determination than ever fore. He has gone to lengths that speak his earnest beliefs. Judging fr-his words, Mr. Grinnell now feels th-it is a task to be carried through to c-pletion to prove that his position is uassailable. He says that he will devall the years of his life if necessary giving his stamps an unimpeachable of health. The evidence provided by affidavit of the Rev. Oliver P. Emers-is a concrete example of the intelli-activities of Mr. Grinnell, and one m-believe the testimony of one's senses asay that Mr. Grinnell has buckled to work effectively. He has shown us a-davits, and it is hard to remain unshakin the light of their disclosures, and can only say at this time that he h-made progress of astonishing kind sthe handicap was placed on his poss-sions by the dictum of the court. V-hope that when Mr. Grinnell can accumlate evidence that is incontrovertibthere will be a suitable recognition of position, and from what we know of case, without any wish to pre-judge so far as subsequent developments mbe concerned, it is the most astoundi-made its influence felt in our little wor-

cancelled is worthless. I am surprised to find that any reputable stamp firm would have had anything to do with the transaction, no matter what the profits were, and no one can wonder they sold them as such. If they will do this where will they stop? I feel sure that all of your readers will agree with me when I say that stamps cancelled to order are worthless and should not have a place in any collection. I have gone over my stock and destroyed every stamp so cancelled. I found a good many of them in circulation received from wholesale dealers of standing. If there is not a stop to these fraudulent practices the hobby will receive a blow it will never get over. But that outsiders, not one bit interested in stamps, are becoming dealers, thinking in an easy way to make money? If it is the sooner the serious collector learns to know them and strike them from his list the better." The stand taken by this dealer is one that must be commended, and at the same time there has been a misunderstanding that the post-marked order cancellation is not a sheep that is dyed black in indelible ink. The fact is that it has long been the custom of my post-offices throughout the world to cancel an unused set of stamps that might be bought, upon the request of the dealer. The custom has prevailed by sufficiency if nothing more, and while there are collectors who taboo post-marked to order stamps even when the post-marking is done on a wholesale basis, yet there are many who accept them, while realizing that they may suffer in interest in comparison with the genuinely post-marked stamp. It is, of course, best not to condone any short-coming but rather to eliminate it at one stroke as Mr. Mulford does, but the title that is given to the custom of years is not surrendered easily as might be hoped. The fact is it is impossible in some instances to tell the difference between the postally cancelled stamp and the one used to order a stamp, a complexity to the subject that makes it all the harder to answer by a simple "yes" or "no." Whether all collectors would take the high stand that Mr. Chevrier does is a question, and we have no doubt but that the words of our respondent while striking a responsive chord in the breast of many a reader also cause some to speak in defense of the cancelled to order stamp. We remember how the Columbian sets bought by the post-office were cancelled by obliging clerks at the request of the collector who wanted his stamps "used," and we have no doubt that such a collector would resent the implication that his stamps were fraudulent in any of their uses. Yet there are other collectors who will say that stamps so treated have long been rubbed off their sentiment. In our experience, we say that the question is one that will excite no little difference of opinion.

view of the fact that we have some-thing to say about the stamp activities of Russia, we are under the necessity of giving space to the following communication from Mr. Montgomery Mulford,

THE MELON CUTTING

THE RECREATION "M. C." 300 VARIETIES $1.02

We are running a "Mammoth International Philatelic Exhibition" all our own these days. The admission price is $1.02 and this entitles you to a "Slice of Melon" FREE. The "Slice of Melon" is most certainly International in its content—U. S. and Canada omitted—and there is nothing of a NON-Philatelic nature contained therein. These little packages of 300 nice stamps, which catalog $12.00 or more, are really rather unique and wholly desirable. A good customer of ours reports 75 varieties added to a 8,000 variety collection and another customer has purchased THREE "MELONS". Some folks buy The Melon Cutting to while away a rainy day in Camp, others buy it because they know from experience or instinct that it is a pleasure to "dig into a nice, juicy slice." No two "slices" are exactly alike and the second "slice" will prove to be as good as the first and maybe better.

949 Delaware Ave., Buffalo, New York; and we admire Mr. Mulford's stand because he seriously opposes what at best may be called a demoralizing influence, if allowed to run unchecked, that aims to promote antagonisms among stamp collectors who are singularly free from all forms of class consciousness. We have not been insensible to the campaign for the Soviet organization to be composed of stamp collectors, but it is our belief that collectors cannot have any justification for supporting a movement that has a political bias in connection with philatelic interest. The fact, too, that there is a certain lack of philatelic certainty in the teachings of the manifestants does not strengthen the case of the committee, and we cannot think that any considerable support could be given to so radical a movement as that indicated by the sponsors of the Soviet society. We believe that little or no interest will be felt in this country in the progress of this allegedly non-partisan club but which underlying has a motive that advocates disruption of lines of conduct which have been established through years of successful usage.

"To Every Right-Thinking Philatelist: In the June issue of the Stamp Planet (Florida, N. Y.), of which I am one of a trio of associate editors, I argued against sponsoring that Russian Soviet Organization made up of stamp collectors. Now that I observe the story in MEKEEL'S, would you allow space for the following?

The leaders of this 'Phelintern' are men who declare that the club now officially organized is non-partisan. But can we believe them? Is it not rather a propaganda scheme to spread the Communist ideas—at least to foster good will toward the Soviets who rule at Moscow?

One of the leaders who is among those advocating Esperanto as the tongue to be adopted in which all will speak and write in, declared that the members had better learn this nova language, which will 'one day be used by the workers of the Soviet World Federation.' Aren't the Soviets idealistic? A world federation? At every opportune moment the Marxians will speak upon the Communisto Manifesto.

However, if it can be shown that this is truly a non-party society, I shall join. But I am from Missouri! And furthermore, I cannot see a Soviet omitting to talk about his doctrine which most of the world has repudiated, any more than I can imagine La Follette surrendering to the Conservative Republicans.

We must not degrade Philately into a propaganda bureau. We must sincerely abolish nationalistic antagonisms. The collecting of stamps is international, and

GREAT A. P. S. CONVENTION.

From a wire received from Detroit we learn that a most successful convention of the A. P. S. was held there. J. Brace Chittenden and Charles J. Phillips are the new members of the Board of Directors. It was voted to raise the dues of the members to $3 per year. The 1925 convention will be held in Los Angeles, Cal. The attendance was large, and the convention closed with a great banquet. $1,000 was voted for publicity purposes.

An extended report will be given next week.

should remain strictly international in practice as well as in theory.

The president of the Philintern is a Communist. The executive committee is of course made up of various states—one member representing the U. S. A.; but does this alter the case that the Soviets will not hold a share—the greater share, in the society? Better have the society's headquarters in Switzerland, preferably in Geneva, for is not this place the meeting ground of Internationalism?"

NEWS CLEANINGS.

—Several of our subscribers have made inquiry in regard to the prospects of getting a return of their money on remittances sent in connection with the North Polar Flight cards. At last reports the expedition had been held up because of lack of funds. If more stamp collectors will send in more dollars it is possible that the flight may be duly financed. In the meantime we can only await developments.

—E. W. Munson sends us a clipping from the Post Office of May, 1896, in which was a strong protest against commemorative issues. Mr. Munson considers this quite apropos in view of the fact that thirty years later the subject is still before us for consideration. It always will be.

—In connection with the splendid publicity features of the S.P.A. convention at New York, a fine article appeared in the New York World, of Sunday, August 10. It is well put together and must work out a good advertisement for our hobby. Our thanks to John U. Hoffman for the clipping.

—Alfred F. Lichtenstein, calling our attention to the death of Hugo Griber, pays a warm tribute to this veteran English dealer. He expresses the sentiment that the philatelic world has lost in him one of its great leaders—a

—We have received from Albert C. Gakenheimer full page clipping from the magazine section of the Baltimore Sun of August 10. It gives space to a feature article entitled, "Two Cents Stamp Sends Men to Risk Their Lives." There are no fewer than five large illustrations showing the perils that the mail carriers are compelled to face in storm, ice and snow. The whole story is so finely displayed as to compel attention.

—The El Paso Herald August 8 printed a fine column article by G. A. Martin entitled, "The Science of Philately." The fascinating and educational features of the hobby were treated in a very interesting manner and we highly commend club activity of this kind.

—Carl Wold sends us two newspaper clippings. One shows Joseph Hoffman in the act of examining an exhibition entry at the recent convention of the S.P.A. The other pictures Edward J. Vogel of Readville, Mass., exhibiting a book in which are 536,000 stamps, many of the pages being arranged in fanciful designs. Mr. Vogel took the book to the White House and Pres. Coolidge autographed it.

—Mr. Lowell J. Ragatz writes: "The following from Mrs. Gaskell's 'Cranford,' refers to some English letters written about 1780: 'The paper was very yellow and the ink very brown; some of the sheets were (as Miss Matty made me observe) the old original post, with the stamp in the corner, representing a post boy riding for life twanging his horn. Do you recall having seen any of these post boy impressions here called 'stamps.' If so, just what were they like?' We are at sea here and shall make no attempt to pull for the shore. Perhaps some sapient reader will have some very simple explanation to give.

—John Kukell, of Blaine, O., sends us the following bit of information received from a Hungary correspondent:—

"A new 2,000 korona stamp in the Parliament Building type has succeeded the stamp of the Madonna type. A set of official stamps previously in use has now been discontinued since July 1."

Confederate Covers

Those familiar with the stamps of our country, especially those who are interested in covers, are well acquainted with the patriotic envelopes used by both the North and the South during the Civil War. Those issued and distributed in the North are fairly common, but a little lot of the Confederate envelopes which I have just acquired are the first that I have ever owned. These are all entire envelopes—have never been used, and bear patriotic pictures, flags, etc. Everyone interested in the Confederate States stamps should have such a souvenir of the great conflict.

While the little lot that I have lasts, I can furnish 4 all different for $1.00; 8 all different for $2.00; 12 for $3.00; 16 for $4.00; and 20 for $5.00. Of some varieties, I have only one or two, so the first orders will receive the choice pieces. I do not recall ever seeing these varieties advertised before, and in my thirty years' experience I have never seen over half a dozen copies.

New Rotary Print Stamps.

I am officially advised by the Department that they contemplate having ready for delivery during October next, new 3c, 4c, 5c, 6c and 10c stamps in the current design, perforated 10, in sheet form from the rotary press. These will be distributed generally through the larger post-offices in precanceled form, the precanceling being done at the Bureau.

At this time it is not expected that stamps in this form will be distributed in other than precanceled condition, although they will be available in unused condition at the Philatelic Agency.

The work of precanceling our postage stamps at Washington is being done so efficiently and the saving is so great, that it is only a matter of time as we stated many months back in our Chronicle, before practically all of the precanceling for even the smaller offices will be done at Washington.

I understand plates are about to be made for these new emissions, and the Bureau will possibly put in new presses to take care of this additional work.

Unusual 3c 1851 covers.

There was recently located in Philadelphia an attractive find consisting of some six hundred covers, mostly of the 3c 1851, but some few scattering 1c, 5c, 10c and 12c. These were sold locally by the well known auction house of Stan V. Henkels & Son.

The choicest piece in the lot consisted of a block of ten of the 3c 1851 on an envelope on cover lightly cancelled "Cairo, Ill., Aug. 20." The stamps were in superb condition with margins on all four sides and the piece was acquired by your editor at $200. He also paid $140 for a wonderful horizontal strip of ten of the same stamp, beautifully cancelled on entire cover "Washington, D. C., Oct 21, 1855." A third beautiful cover consisting of an L shaped strip of ten, 8 vertically x 3 horizontally, postmarked "Natchez, Mi., Aug 21", changed hands at $210. The stamps were in very fine condition and were each cancelled with the word "Paid." A block of four on cover with the 6c envelope sold at $27.50; a block of six partly severed horizontally sold at $40; while a block of seven brought $61. Horizontal strips of four went from $7 to $10, in accordance with condition. A 5c slightly damaged in combination with a 10c in addition to a couple other covers of less importance sold at $42. A vertical pair of the 12c, very fine, along with the 3c, sold at $47.50, while a single copy of the 12c with 3c sold at $40. A very fine single copy on the cover of the 12c in the finest of condition, with large margins on all sides, lightly cancelled, "Cairo, Ill., Dec. 1" went to a Philadelphia collector at $35.00. Dr. Chase paid $60 and $87 per hundred respectively for two lots of the 3c on the cover. Ten covers with six horizontal strips of three, and four vertical strips of three, found a new owner at $32.50. Twenty-five horizontal pairs and ten vertical pairs sold at $27.50.

In the case of the 3c 1857, there were two copies of a new railroad cancellation unknown heretofore, reading "Ea-Br-Illinois Central R. R., September 9" sold at $16 and $17 each.

The lot had been absolutely unpicked and was found in the effects of an autograph collector, who had acquired the correspondence and put the covers away.

Air Mail to South America.

Mr. S. Hyman sends me a clipping from the Daily News of July 9th, containing an interesting article entitled "Air line to link U. S. to South America." It is stated that one route will go via New Orleans and one via the West Indies, both being directed to Buenos Aires. A detailed description is given as to how the mail will be carried, a distance of 8,045 miles when going to the Argentine, and 6,204 miles to Brazil. It is expected that mail will be delivered in ten to eleven days instead of twenty-three to twenty-nine days.

The organization which will conduct this service is known as the Continental Air Mail Service, and it is expected that they will be in a position to transmit mail at an early date.

A LETTER FROM LONDON

By SOUREN YOHANESSIANZ.

(It is always a pleasure for us to hear from our friends and especially when they are visiting in foreign fields. To take time when one is traveling, for service of this kind, impresses us with the loyalty the WEEKLY commands. Mr. Yohanessianz sends us this letter from London.—W. O. W.)

The collectors of U. S. stamps will be pleased to learn that on this side of the Atlantic the stamps of U. S. are more in demand than even in their mother country.

Very seldom one sees in the dealers' stock books anything of the first issue in very fine condition and then one wants to cry S. O. S. when he learns the prices asked.

For instance, here are some prices asked for fair to fine copies:

5c 1847, 20 to 30 shillings

10c 1847, 4 to 7 pounds

5c 1851, 4 to 7 pounds

even for a 10c 1869, 12 to 15 shillings. Others alike.

The dealers in general seem to be well supplied with classic stamps of Europe, but here again prices are in many instances higher than we are accustomed to. For instance, I was asked for Norway No. 1 from 12 to 40 shillings, the last for blue cancellation.

The demand of German dealers for old German States stamps has boosted the prices on these stamps to the highest imaginable.

Though issuing many stamps during and immediately after the war has caused some criticism at first among prominent dealers in the United States, the result was not as alarming as was thought—contrary, the Philately has benefited more than ever. In fact, not alone the philatelic publicity, but the ever-increasing issues of stamps by different governments has attracted the attention of the mass in general and stamp collecting is attracting the interest of as many people as the baseball or horse racing, with the results that the ignorance of philately of yesterday by the public in general is more or less a matter of "past" today. Judge yourself:

At Wembley Ex. post-office I was attracted by some ladies or gentlemen who were buying stamps, for their letters and some in surplus for "souvenirs" as I was informed by one of them, whom curiously I asked if he was a collector. Now every collector or dealer, if he tries to remember the origin of his own start, undoubtedly will find that "some one gave him, or just himself he acquired a few nice looking stamps for "souvenirs" and from that first temptation he gradually become a real stamp bug.

Here is another pleasing fact: The Atlantic Edition of the Daily Mail, issued daily during the travel on S.S. Aquitania announce in its columns under date of July 14 in mid-ocean news received by radio that the German government issued two new stamps, etc., and daily during my travel from N. Y. to Southampton I found in the columns of A. E. of D. Mail some interesting comments on philately.

This last fact shows how deeply philately has touched the public interest.

As a "20th century man" am leaving today 10.15 A. M. by airplane of imperial mail line to Paris and hope to have my lunch at Hotel Grillon in Paris at 12 noon, that is in an hour and 40 m.

Sincerely yours.

SEEN BY AN ATTENDANT.

The biggest thing about the 30th Annual Convention of the Society of Philatelic Americans at the Hotel Continental, New York City, on August 4, 5 and 6 was the reporters that flocked around. The Publicity Committee sent out an innocent little notice four days before the event saying a little item about how these "interesting folk" might appeal to the newspapers. Reporters from ten local dailies, big papers like the World and Times, etc., four photographers and a movie operator came to the Convention and "covered it." All had reports of it.

The next biggest thing was the enthusiasm.

The third biggest thing was the heat. It was awful!

The fourth was the adoption of a new constitution.

The fifth was the appointment of a Board of Governors for life, Messrs. Hoffman, Camp and Schlesinger.

Fifty-eight members enrolled. There were many additional visitors. The auction audience Tuesday afternoon numbered over 100. At the Bourse of Swap and Sell, Tuesday evening, the howling mob of bargain sellers and buyers ran over that figure.

The Convention opened with a Convocation prayer by Secretary Lycett, followed by an address of welcome by Dr. J. Brace Chittenden, the Austrian specialist, Secretary of the N. Y. Collectors Club and Dean of New York Philatelists.

He aptly gave as justification, "for the faith that is in us," the reason for our enthusiasm over stamps, the excuse for the urge that impels us to inconvenience ourselves that we may own certain stamp treasures.

The acquisitive instinct is first, the sense of ownership, the largest class.

The monetary instinct is there, the knowledge that if we buy right, our property need not lie dormant, it will be worth more later, the lesser class.

The gathering of any object, art pieces, manuscripts, pottery, old furniture, fire arms, stamps, is governed by its scarcity. This is sensed by a smaller class than the previous two.

The intrinsic beauty of the article collected is a further evidence of the

THE PRECANCEL REVIEW.

Edited by FRED'K W. ALLEN,
312 Walnut St., Minneapolis, Minn.

New Issue Notes—The 14- and 25-cent denominations continue to come all too slowly. It will undoubtedly take some time for their use to become general. Many collectors are specializing on the former value. It is regrettable that another color was not chosen for this stamp, as the dark blue renders illegible many precancellations which otherwise would be satisfactory.

The two- and five-dollar values are the only ones of the new series which are yet to be discovered in precancelled condition. I have a hunch that Endicott and Rochester, N. Y., will be the first cities to use the two-dollar.

The Huguenot-Walloon varieties are mounting steadily. Omaha, Nebr., 1 cent (U-14 electro) was the first printed one to appear. Fort Dodge, Iowa, is now out on all values. Federalsburg, Md., is printed from regular type, the size of which exceeds any previously used at this city. Save the above, all the others which have come to my attention have been handstamped. The Kardex Company of Tonawanda, N. Y., finds precancelled Walloons to be just the thing for their circulars as the stamp keeps them shut when affixed over the edges. Two types have thus been used. Mail Order houses precancelling stamps received as remittances will precancel the Walloons as a matter of course. Six varieties have already shown up from the Sears-Roebuck Company main office; viz., the three values in normal and inverted positions. Watch the packages from Kansas City, New York, Seattle, St. Paul, Dallas and Portland, Oregon mail order houses and you may pick up something very good.

Aurora, Ill.—This office is producing some pretty printed precancels. The electrotype plate is of 100 subjects, each of which reads "AURORA, ILL" in fancy caps between very thick lines. The new series 7, 20 and 30 cent came together on a package and were transferred to my album after a nice bath to set them free.

Pressman's Home, Tenn.—To frank the American Pressman, precancelled two cent stamps are used in quantity. The type is three lines of small letters between lines and is handstamped. The 2 cent, both old and new series, and Harding have been seen.

Millers Falls, Mass.—A newcomer! Handstamped overprint similar to U-6 but larger. Just the 4 and 5 cent, new series, to chronicle.

West Bend, Wisc.—Same type as Bridgeport, Conn. I have the 5 and 20 cent new series. Another interesting variety is Dell Rapids, S. Dak., 20 cent up. This office has a handstamp of the same style as West Bend. Two others I might mention of more than passing interest are Dillsboro and Loogootee, Ind. The U-3 handstamp does the work.

North Abington, Mass.—Some twenty years ago North Abington precancelled large quantities of the one cent 1902 issue in two different styles of overprint, but the practice shortly ceased and has only recently been revived. An electrotype plate is now on hand, with which a number of sheets of the 1 cent new series has been printed. These precancels are used in the same manner as the Tonawanda, N. Y., 1 cent Walloons, so it is difficult to secure them in fair condition. The crease is usually permanent. I am indebted to Mr. Leon S. Fairbanks for complimentary specimens and information regarding these stamps. Mount Clemens, Mich., and West Carrollton, Ohio, have similar plates and are precancelling the 1 cent new series.

Black River Falls, Wisc.—Mr. Henry Goetzelt furnishes a 1 cent inverted from this city. The type is like Pressman's Home, Tenn. Mr. Alvin Krouse possesses a 13 cent apple green and I have seen several other values from Black River Falls.

West Grove, Pa.—One of our esteemed readers, Ashley C. Le Duc of Wilmington, Del., has just returned from a trip to Pennsylvania and as is his custom dug up some interesting precancel news that I shall quote from his letter:

"Last Friday I happened to be near West Grove, Pa., and made it a point to stop at the post-office. I found the head clerk very agreeable. He allowed me to glance at the precancelled stock on hand and it was indeed a pretty sight. This was all printed with the regular plate, which, as you know, is a tiny type between lines. No handstamped precancels were on hand, and are used only when the printed ones run short. Of the new series, they have precancelled the 1, 2, 11, 14, 15 and 25. The latter value reads up. I was told that the printer carefully guarded against inverted overprints, doubles and such, so if any of these should be found, they are good property.

The main need for precancels in this city is for the mailing of roses, nursery stock and mushrooms. Conrads (rose growers) are the most important of the permit holders. I noticed packages at the parcel post window, which had just been turned in from Conrads, going to all parts of the country. I should have enjoyed securing some of those covers. West Grove has a population of around 1200 and is located about 20 miles from Wilmington, Del., in the center of a prosperous farming country."

Rockford, Mich.—Mr. W. E. Millman forwards a nice little set of precancels from this city, including the 50 cent and 1 dollar new series. He writes as follows: "Rockford is a town of 1500 inhabitants, fifteen miles from Grand Rapids. The Wolverine Shoe and Tanning Corporation is our largest business enterprise, and uses a great quantity of precancels daily. About 10 per cent the product goes out by parcel post as there are many large packages, use of high value precancels is quite common.

Conclusion.—I wish to thank Messrs. D. R. Tibbets and Horace Shapiro for valuable information. Matter which of interest to readers of this department is welcome at all times.

PHILATELY IN A MYSTERY-STORY

By STEPHEN G. RICH.

Early this year Appleton's published the wild and decidedly fascinating mystery story, "The Thirteenth Letter" by Natalie Sumner Lincoln. Of course, a mystery-story of the usual sort; an unexpected murder, false clues, an apparently obvious criminal, real criminal exposed unexpectedly.

For communication between master criminal and his confederate scheme is used which it took a philatelist's eye to discover. On apparently innocent letters from Canada, excess postage was always used. heroine noticed that perforation tears were missing, not by tearing-off, but by being removed with scissors, from the stamps. The solver of the mystery who had been a stamp-collector hunted up a perforation-gauge, with its aid deciphered the code.

Without too much laughter at excessive claims made for what a perforation-gauge could do, let thank Miss Lincoln and Mr. A. White, of Connecticut, who furnished the code, for having added the philatelic interest to a "whacking good story."

The first post office in America was established in Boston, by order of the General Court of Massachusetts Bay, on November 5, 1639, so that that date just passed was the 284th anniversary of this interesting event. The quaint language of the order is here reproduced:

the seas, or are to be sent thither; are to be brought unto. And hee is to take care that they be delivered, or sent according to their directions, & hee is allowed for every such letter a penny & must answer all miscarriages through his owne neglect in this kind; provided that no man shall be compelled to bring his letters thither, except hee please."

This first post-office, or "exchange," as it was called, was intended only for the handling of letters from abroad or destined thereto, as the language of the order shows, there being at that early date no necessity for a domestic mail service. It had become the custom among Boston citizens, whenever a ship arrived in the harbor, to go aboard in search of letters from relatives and friends on the other side of the Atlantic. This practice increased until it became a nuisance to ship captains, who asked people to stay ashore. As a result the General Court (this was the title of the Provincial Legislature), which had charge of the affairs of the infant colony, made provision for the landing of all mail upon the arrival of a vessel, after which it was taken in charge by Richard Fairbanks, who was to deliver each missive to its proper destination.

The estate of Richard Fairbanks was located on "Cornhill," now known as Washington Street, on which it had a frontage of about sixty feet. According to the researches of the "Boston Commission for Marking Historical Sites," the exact location of the house was on the line between the old and the new buildings of the Boston Daily Globe, at 236 Washington Street. It is likely to be marked by the Commission with a tablet suitably inscribed in the near future. Fairbanks had been made a freeman in 1634. In 1637-38 he was allowed to sell "wine and strong water." The bar, indispensable in those days to the business of keeping an inn, was located in the lower floor of the house, and it was here that the townspeople came to get their mail and read it over a friendly glass with the proprietor. John Winthrop was governor when Fairbanks was appointed. The latter had other official duties to perform, as he was pound keeper also, the town being at that time overrun by cattle, swine and goats.

Fairbanks sold his property on Cornhill in 1632, to Robert Turner, or rather "swapped" estates with him. Turner lived on the opposite side of the street, now known locally as "Newspaper Row," and here Fairbanks continued to act as postmaster until 1677.

On January 6, 1673, the General Court provided for a domestic post, the first in New England. The reading of the order was: "Whereas the publicke occasions of the country doe frequently require that messages be sent post, and as yet, no stated allowance in such cases, it is ordered by this Court & the authority thereof, that henceforth every person so sent upon the publicke service of the country shall be allowed by the Treasurer after the rate of three pence a mile to the place to which he is sent, in money, as satisfaction for the expense of horse & man; and no inholder shall take of any such messenger or others travayling upon publicke service more than two shillings a bushell for oates, and fower pence for hay, day and night." This is the first reference made to a domestic postal service until the American Post Office was established in 1693.

After Fairbanks, John Hayward was appointed postmaster upon the filing of a petition by merchants and others complaining that "many times the Letters imported are throwne upon the Exchg. so that who will may take them up; no person (without some satisfaction) being willing to trouble their houses therewith, so that Letters of great moment are frequently lost." Hayward was first appointed in 1677, and was returned to the position at his own request in 1680, when he was first recognized by the title of "post master" and his office first became known as the "post-office." Hayward's house was in "Condit" street, the first stretch of what is now North Street. In 1686 he took an office in the westerly end of the Town House, which stood where the Old State House now stands. From then on until 1693 the service was expanded to take in several local communities. In 1695 a coach service was begun between Boston and Hartford, which distributed mail along the route. If a message was particularly urgent it was customary to endorse it, "Haste, Post, Haste," which meant, "Haste, Messenger, Haste." This arose from the custom of calling messengers "posts," and it is from this that the expression "post haste," denoting particular speed, has come.

At the outbreak of war between the Dutch and English in 1672, the King directed Gov. Lovelace, of New York, to see what could be done towards establishing a regular postal communication between the Colonies. The town of New York thereupon ordered a "post to go monthly from New York to Boston," but it could not have operated very long, for New York was captured by the Dutch a few months later.

In 1683 a weekly post was established in Pennsylvania from Philadelphia to a number of outlying places. In 1685 Col. Dongan, Governor of New York, restored the service to Boston for a time at least. In the same year a postmaster was appointed by the King for the United New England Colonies. But it was not until Thomas Neale obtained a patent from the King in 1691 to establish a general Colonial post that the first effective intercolonial postal system came into operation. He selected Andrew Hamilton of New Jersey, to organize it, and by 1693 a line of posts was established from Portsmouth, N. H., to Philadelphia, covered by couriers with mails weekly each way. The Crown took back the patent in 1706 and made John Hamilton (son of the founder) Deputy Postmaster-General in 1707.

In 1710 an Act was passed by the British Parliament "For establishing a General Post Office in all Her Majesty's Dominions," which not only repealed all previous enactments but placed the post-office establishment on a new basis. A "General Post and Letter Office" was established in London, "from whence all letters and packets whatsoever may be with speed and expedition sent into any part of the Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, to North America and the West Indies, or any other of Her Majesty's dominions, or any country or kingdom beyond the seas," and "at which office all returns and answers may be likewise received." For the better "managing, ordering, collecting, and improving the revenue," and also for the better "computing and settling the rates of letters according to distance, a chief office is established in Edinburgh, one in Dublin, one at New York, and other chief offices in convenient places in Her Majesty's colonies of America, and one in the islands of the West Indies, called the Leeward Islands." "The whole of these chief officers shall be under the control of an officer who shall be appointed by the Queen's Majesty, her heirs and successors, to be made and constituted by letters patent under the Great Seal, by the name and stile of Her Majesty's Postmaster-General." "The Postmaster-General shall appoint deputies for the chief offices in the places named above."

In 1753 Benjamin Franklin received the royal commission as Deputy Postmaster-General of the American Colonies. No man in America had been so identified with the interests of the Colonial post-office as he, and from 1737 he had been postmaster of Philadelphia. He immediately proceeded to systematize the department and personally made a tour of inspection, in which he visited every post-office in the country except that of Charleston, S. C. After four years of his administration the service yielded the salary of the postmasters and a small revenue besides, and in 1774 a clear annual revenue of £3000 to Great Britain. In that year Franklin became politically obnoxious to the British Government and was removed from office. The patriotic movement which resulted in the Revolution was then under way, and the resentment at this act was so great that after 1774 the American post-office never again contributed a farthing to the British Treasury. In fact, in 1775 the Colonies combined to establish their own post-

ROYALTY AND PHILATELY.

By G. L. TINKER.

Foremost among Royal philatelists is H. M. King George V., who is one of the leading collectors in the world. "It is one of the greatest pleasures of my life," he once wrote to a friend.

His collection was begun when his Majesty was a midshipman in H.M.S. Bacchante, and he probably owes much of his early enthusiasm to his uncle, the late Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha.

The Royal collection is confined to the postal issues of Great Britain and the British Empire. Many of the specimens are exceedingly rare.

There are few collectors who know more about their hobby than his Majesty. A paper he prepared and personally read before the Royal Philatelic Society, when Prince of Wales, on the early stamps of his father's reign was a masterpiece. On many occasions he has been instrumental in placing official information at the disposal of collectors.

It is not generally known that, in conjunction with another collector, his Majesty once designed a postage stamp. This was early in his father's reign, and was the well-known portrait type of Canada, showing King Edward in robes of state. The master die was engraved in London, but on arrival in Canada was slightly altered and lost some of the delicacy of the original design.

In September, 1915, the King sent one of his choicest specimens to the National Philatelic War Fund, where it fetched a considerable sum at auction. The stamp was mounted on a card, which was inscribed with full particulars in the King's own handwriting.

In the making of the Queen's Dolls' House, now on show at Wembley, his Majesty's hobby has not been forgotten. Tiny replicas of the Royal albums have been made, each page being a photographic reproduction of an actual leaf from the King's collection.

The Prince of Wales has followed his Royal father in the choice of a hobby. He, however, does not restrict his collection to the Empire. As long ago as 1906, the Prince exhibited a practically complete collection of Liberia, and an unused collection of France and its Colonies, at the International Philatelic Exhibition held in that year.

In 1919 H.R.H. became the hon. president of the Royal Philatelic Society, London, of which the King is now honorary patron.

Like his father, the Prince has taken stamps from his collection to be sold by auction for various funds in which he is interested.

Philately is represented in the Italian, Royal house by Queen Elena and her son Humbert, Prince of Piedmont and Heir Apparent to the throne. They are both very keen collectors, and are chiefly interested in the stamps of their own country.

The Queen has many nice stamps besides those of Italy, and in 1922 received a beautiful album from the King and Queen of the Belgians, containing a complete collection of Belgian stamps.

Both the Queen and Prince Humbert have taken a great interest in Italian exhibitions and philatelic congresses.

The King and Queen of the Belgians are both interested in philately, as is their son, the Duke of Brabant. Some time ago Queen Elizabeth accepted a collection from the Canadian Government.

King Albert is honorary patron of the Stamp Exhibition, now being held in Brussels.

The King of Spain, too, is a very keen collector. His chief interest is in the stamps of his own country and its colonies, France and Portugal.

The latter collection contains some stamps which are known as "the King of Spain reprints." A few specimens of certain issues were reprinted after they had gone out of use, by order of the King of Portugal, so as to complete his friend's collection.

Don Manoel, ex-King of Portugal, also has a very good collection of Portuguese stamps, besides being interested in those of Brazil.

The president of the Swedish Philatelic Society is H.R.H. Gustavus Adolphus.

The Crown Prince prefers the general interest which is derived from a well-filled stamp album, to the rarity of his specimens. Nevertheless, he has some choice items, particularly of his own country. He is very fond of the old issues of Europe—stamps which are now regarded as classics—and British Colonials.

It is strange what a fascination the stamps of the British Empire have for foreigners of all classes. In American philatelic circles, particularly, they are regarded as gilt edge security.

It is believed that King Alexander of Jugo-Slavia is also interested in the hobby.

Outside Europe, there are so far as is known only two Royal philatelists—the King of Egypt and the Crown Prince of Japan.

King Fuad has an exceptionally good collection, and also makes a special study of Egypt, the Sudan, Hedjaz, Palestine, Greece, Serbia, Roumania, Austria, and the Argentine. About five years ago he acquired a very fine collection of his own country. This is now amalgamated with his own, and is probably the finest Egyptian collection in the world.

Prince Hiroyasu Fushimi is one of the many enthusiastic collectors in Japan. He has a very good general collection of over 12,000 varieties and a very fine specialised array of the interesting issues of the land of the Rising Sun. He also is now very keen about British Colonial stamps.

Stamp collectors are to be found in all parts of the world, and in every grade of society. Judging by the number of Royal enthusiasts and the universal popularity of the hobby, it may truly be said of philately that it is "the hobby of kings, and the king of hobbies."—Birmingham Post.

OUR BOOK REVIEW.

An author who signs himself "A Modern Dealer" has written a booklet on, "How to Make Money by Stamp Dealing through the Post." The price is one shilling and the book may be obtained from the publisher, A. Clark, 9 Salisbury Rd., N. 22, London, England. We need only add that the book is written along the usual lines of a book of this kind.

THE A. P. S. CONVENTION AT DETROIT.

The thirty-ninth annual convention of the American Philatelic Society was called to order by the president, C. F. Heyerman, at 10 A. M., Tuesday, August 12th, in the ballroom of the Hotel Statler, Detroit, Michigan, in the presence of several hundred members and visitors. No time was lost in proceeding with business and after the customary addresses of welcome had been made, the committee on credentials made its report. The result of the election was a foregone conclusion with the exception of the vote for the two directors which was decided in favor of Dr. Chittenden and Mr. Phillips. The committee reported 1,121 proxies in hand with a half-dozen members each having the full quota of fifty. The president's address was well received and in speaking of the duty on used United States stamps, imported from abroad, the president called attention to the introduction by Congressman Ackerman of House Bill No. 9159, praying for the removal of the tax and asked that members notify their representatives at Washington that they favor the passage of the bill. He recommended the advance of the cost of membership from two to two and one-half dollars a year but later the convention made the dues three dollars a year while his suggestion that life membership dues be increased to thirty dollars was approved, the new rate to become operative the first of next year.

The reports of the secretary and board of vice-presidents were careful compilations that bespoke faithful stewardship on the parts of the officers of these important branches. The work of the board of vice-presidents showed that due attention was given to all the cases that came before it and a recommendation was made that some provision should be instituted that would avoid as much as possible controversies that came under the head of collection business. The board has brought its work down to date and retires with a sense of duty well performed. The secretary's report reflected the rapid growth of the society which now has an actual membership of 3,031, with a hundred applications in the offing. The figures submitted by the treasurer showed that all the funds with the exception of the general fund had grown while the deficit in the general fund took care of the American Philatelist and other necessary expenses.

The first session was given over to the reports of officers, major to minor, and the appointment of committees. On the by-laws committee, Messrs. Stone, Look, Moses, Wolsieffer and Heyerman, ex-officio, were appointed; and the resolutions committee was composed of Messrs. Severn, Diamant and Fernald. Mr. Phillips was chairman of the committee on place of next convention; and Mr. Atherton on the committee on budget.

The session on Wednesday morning was held in the Henry II parlor of the hotel and Postmaster John W. Smith of Detroit, who was introduced by General Coolidge as a mayoralty candidate gave an interesting account of the growth of Detroit in a postal sense. He said that the postage stamp "had an entirely different meaning to the postal clerk than to the stamp collector. To the great army of clerks it meant service."

The report of the Official Expert was a timely and valuable one; and we submit it in its entirety:

REPORT OF THE OFFICIAL EXPERT.

PHILADELPHIA, August 1, 1924.

To the Board of Directors and Members of the American Philatelic Society:

During the fiscal year of 1923-24, 1050 stamps were submitted for opinion. Quite a number of these came from foreign countries.

The result of the opinion given on the stamps was as follows: 550 genuine, 340 counterfeit, 65 reprints and 95 forged overprints and cancellations. The genuine stamps included 150 sent for classification.

I am sorry to report that a great influx of forgeries has made its appearance on the American market. Many of the foreign shipments include little known recent issues which find their ways into American collections. Some of the most flagrant of these were reported by the undersigned in the philatelic press throughout the year. These included the Belgium 1915 parcel post surcharges, Russia Volga charity stamps, Batum surcharges, Hungary surcharges for French, Roumanian and Serbian occupations.

American stamp dealers are to be commended for calling our attention to new doubtful stamps as soon as received and by means of co-operation many of the forgeries are caught early and both collectors and dealers saved from future losses. Only by continuing this co-operation can we protect ourselves.

I also wish to call attention to the appearance of perforation forgeries in the recent issues of the United States stamps which were marketed with the apparent intention to defraud. These include part perforate, varieties made from stamps issued imperforate and compound perforations similarly produced. Great care should be exercised in acquiring these. An expert examination is advised.

Respectfully submitted,
EUGENE KLEIN,
Official Expert.

The report of Mr. Guest as sales superintendent was received with applause, as he showed that he was making progress towards the goal of sales annually of one hundred thousand dollars and while during the past year the sales were well over forty thousand dollars,

Concerning "Super" Quality Stamp Mounts

The eminent Philatelist, Mr. G. A. Higlett, writes me under date of July 6th:

"Dear Mr. Wilson,—I wish you to send me another 5000 mounts, large size, your number 1 (I think). They seem to suit me much better than most that are sold. The so-called 'peelable' mounts which are used by many may be very well in their way, especially if one is mounting stamps temporarily, but I have seen so many instances of stamps becoming detached, particularly during displays at Society meetings, that they do not appeal to me so far as my own stamps are concerned. (Owing to lack of space, this testimonial will be concluded in the next issue.)"

"SUPER" QUALITY STAMP MOUNTS.
Large size No. 1—36c per 1000; 5000 for $1.45. Small size No. 2—24c per 1000; 5000 for 90c. All post free. Samples for 3c post.

AUSTRIA

is the "next" on our list of INTENSIVE APPROVAL SERVICE. Owing to the great number of stamps issued by this once proud member of the Austro-Hungarian Monarchy, we hesitated a long time, before yielding to popular demand—we decided to tackle this country. In accordance with our well-known system, the stamps are put up in envelopes marked 1/2c, 1c, 2c, etc. (on the basis of Scott's 1925 Catalogue) and thus sent on approval to those requesting same. As both the used and unused selections contain a great many varieties, Please Specify Which Kind You Prefer.

the indications are that they will be well over this amount during the coming year.

The third session of Wednesday morning was called to order in the ballroom and messages were read from H. N. Mudge, past president, Mr. Mount of the Philatelic Agency, Washington, and Mr. E. B. Sterling, Trenton, New Jersey, among others. As chairman on the place of next convention, Mr. Phillips submitted a report saying that Boston and Los Angeles were proposed and suggested that the convention seat be voted on by the convention. Boston was nominated by Mr. Hatfield and seconded by Messrs. Drew and Nevin and Los Angeles was proposed by Mr. Henry. Mr. Diamant named St. Louis and Montreal was in the list. A proxy vote was called and when it was seen that Los Angeles was in the lead, Mr. Hatfield moved that the selection of that city be made unanimous.

The resolutions committee reported favorably upon the appropriation of a sum of one thousand dollars for publicity work, the money to be withdrawn from funds on hand. The president is to appoint a committee and the publicity campaign will be carried out under the auspices of the society, of course.

The motion carried a general disclaimer be made of responsibility for damages or losses of any kind received or sustained through auction, bourse or entertainment or any other affair or function held in connection with the annual convention.

The board of vice-presidents was authorized to expend an amount not to exceed two hundred dollars in emergency cases calling for immediate action. The salary of the official editor was placed at $600 a year with a commission of advertising above a certain amount. The treasurer whose bond was ordered to be $10,000 was given a salary of two hundred dollars a year. The subscription to the American Philatelist for non-members was made two dollars a year and extra copies of the membership list was fixed at five dollars each. Members under twenty-one are to have the letter "J" placed before their names in the list. After a vote of thanks was given to the retiring president and the board of vice-presidents, the press of Detroit, and the ladies and gentlemen of Detroit, Mr. W. C. Stone moved that the convention adjourn sine die.

A. P. S. PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

DETROIT, MICH., August 11, 1924.
To the Members of the American Philatelic Society:

In addressing you officially from this my home city for the second time, and at the close of my term as president, it is with pride in the splendid physical and financial condition of our Society that the office will be turned over to my successor. You will agree with me no better candidate than P. M. Wolsieffer could have been chosen; I have no fear in his hands for its continued success.

It must be a matter gratifying to all that our Society, both from standpoint of numbers and as regards the average of its personnel, is now attaining a position of influence and respect properly commensurate with the recognition of philately by the outside world, as a subject worthy of attention by cultured and scientific men, rather than a mere school boy's pastime.

During the year, the first illustrated catalogue according to the Government requirements was issued, and indirectly has greatly aided in the membership campaign conducted by our staunch Secretary, Dr. H. A. Davis, assisted by a large corps of workers. The continued efforts must be put forth even stronger under the new Directors.

It is regretted that the work on the new by-laws to have been submitted at this time has made no progress. It is therefore recommended that the incoming president at once appoint a committee to undertake this work and report to the Society four times during the year in order that the members be posted on the changes to be laid before them in 1925, or if it is deemed best, to employ an attorney to draft an entire new set of by-laws, with the assistance of the President and a small committee of advisers, anything to make absolutely certain that this work will be accomplished during the year.

On the subject of dues, I would recommend that they be raised to $2.50, a very small fee as compared to the advantages obtained through membership in this Society.

That the Life Memberships be increased to $30.00, and they are easily worth it.

Membership Lists to be sold at $5.00 per copy.

The United States Philatelic Agency reports a business of $125,000.00 for the past six months, an increase of $25,000.00 for the period, and as this is probably over ninety per cent profit it is recommended that a committee be appointed to confer with the present Post Office Department officers with the view of having the Philatelic Agency give free service as to postage and registration on orders. Matter from other departments are sent free.

No satisfaction was obtained from the Treasury Department in regard to duty on United States used stamps received from abroad. So our Member Congressman, Ernest R. Ackerman, has come again to our aid by introducing Bill No. 9159, in the House for the removal of this seemingly very unjust duty. Those who have not as yet written to their representatives should do so at once, asking their support for the passage of this Bill. You may not buy stamps from abroad yourself, but you will probably obtain better prices from dealers when this tax is removed.

The formation of branch societies will, I trust, be continued to be pushed as splendid feeders for the membership increase.

Ethics is a word freely spoken, but perhaps the meaning is not very clear in many of our minds. It is defined as "the science that treats of the principles of human morality and duties." Fortunately this report will be printed, so I trust everyone not present will read it. This subject has been brought to your attention from the many petty complaints laid before your Directors. If these members were not cloaked behind the mail, the cases would never occur as they would not try such tactics in the presence of the parties with whom they deal. The "substituter" would be very much offended if the term "thief" were applied to him, but he is one of the lowest sort, and should fear the law as much as the man who takes your auto. You must assist in stamping out this pest, and in using greater care in selecting new members. With this warning may the Society be free from these complaints next year.

My heartiest thanks are extended to the officers and members for their support during my term of office.

Always with the interest of the A. P. S. at heart,

Sincerely,
C. FREDERIC HEYERMAN,
President.

WHY NOT A THIRD PARTY?

I want to state that I am not going to take sides in the Rich-Macrymichalos controversy. No! Positively not! The basis for the arguments on both sides rests on too shaky a foundation. History may sometime reveal that M. erpin 'way back in '65 got both his spiration and his Greek from the blue amp on a package of Turkish cigarettes which soothed his nerves while attempting to classify some minor varieties. On such trivial things sometime hang the fate of nations, the causes of war, cetera.

But all this discussion has made the ne most opportune to launch a Third arty and serve American collectors with truly American word, not compounded om any foreign language and not the sis for any argument as to its source.

"Fillatalist", "fill at a list"
Significant, sound, simple, sane, sonoris! Many of us have been called orse and not half so euphonoous a me. But, "Fillatalist"! How sympathetic, how descriptive of our pursuit! 's the "Better 'Ole," as our British iends would put it.

Knowing how great will be the appropriation and enthusiasm arising from my forts I must ask you to "kindly omit powers."

Those wishing to join this great and od movement are most welcome. hose desiring to contribute in a pecuniary manner will become "founders" in iother pet measure of mine, i.e., a home for the I. THE BRUSSELS EXHIBITION.

By DR. FRANCIS P. RENAUT, F.R.P.S.L.

The Royal Federation of Philatelic Associations of Belgium decided last year to commemorate the 75th anniversary of the introduction of postage stamps in Belgium by organizing an International Philatelic Exhibition in Brussels at the end of the spring. This Exhibition, held from the 24th of May to the 1st of June, was a great success. The Belgian societies displayed strenuous activity in order to give to this event a national as well as an international character. For the Belgians, it was not only the commemoration of the use of postage stamps, but also the commemoration of the first stamps issued, the famous "Epaulettes" so finely engraved and splendidly printed that they can be regarded as the finest stamps produced in the early days of Philately.

Nearly all countries, and the most prominent collectors in every country, had gladly responded to the appeal of the Belgian Committee; so the most marvellous philatelic gems were to be seen in Brussels, and though I have visited all the important philatelic exhibitions held since the war I must confess that, except in London, I never saw quantity and quality united to such an extent as in Brussels. The Palace of Arenberg, now known as the Palace of Egmont, was put at the disposal of the Committee for the display of the collections, and though it contains many large rooms and halls it could barely hold the numerous sheets sent by the exhibitors. A hall, two large rooms, and nine smaller ones were devoted to the Exhibition.

One of the most conspicuous features of this international competition—and one of the most encouraging—is the effort of scientific Philately to assert itself and take its real place, leaving in the background the mere accumulation of stamps, or even rarities. I note with pleasure the relative decline of the exhibition of general collections, or of complete collections of one country. Such exhibits only afford satisfaction to their owners, and give to visitors neither new impressions nor new knowledge. Also there was no tendency to exhibit whole sheets of great rarities, "big guns," as such stamps are often called on the Continent. Rarities cannot be really appreciated among lots of other rarities, and their real place is in the frame of a normal issue or of a general study of the country.

There was a very interesting display of specialised collections of one country or of a single issue, with full explanations about the production of such issue, varieties, discoveries, etc.; there were also scientific studies of great value on single stamps, or on postmarks connected with political events. In this line, the first issues of Belgium were fairly represented, as were the postmarks used in this kingdom during the war and after the armistice. A fascinating exhibit was that of the provisional postmarks, provisional stamps, and split stamps used immediately after the German retreat.

I recognized in the relative abundance of postmark displays the favourite hobby of the Dutch collectors, a hobby which perhaps is slowly gaining favour with Belgian collectors. In this instance I saw interesting postmarks of the Dutch Indies, exhibits where postmarks were happily mixed with philatelic research about the different issues of Postage Dues, and the various overprints and surcharges of this country. So I learnt the position of the varieties: missing dots on the "E" of "NED. INDIE" in the 1898 issue; 10 cts., seventh stamp of the ninth row—15 cts., one stamp on the sheet (first vertical row). Also numerous varieties of the overprint ½ on 2 cents and 2½ on 3 cents; defective printings, shades, etc.

Though there were more than two hundred exhibitors, all the countries of the world were not represented. Europe, and especially old Europe, took the first place; old German and Italian States, France, and Spain were exhibited. Among the curiosities of this section was a marvellous collection of the "Habilitado por la Nacion" overprints of Señor Gustavo Ros, and the Carlist stamps genuinely postmarked of Señor Ruiz de Arcante. All the old issues of Switzerland, the frame of the oval at the left and, in land were also fairly represented. On the contrary, there was only a very limited display of the American countries; the two most important items in this section being a collection of the old issues of Chile (Mr. Riesco), and the famous collection of Confederate States, already exhibited last year in London, Brunn, and Vienna (Mr. A. L. Adutt, J.P.). Asia was absolutely neglected, but, strange to say, Africa occupied a rather large place with splendid collections of the early issues of Egypt, of all issues of Abyssinia, and of the various European colonies.

The British Empire was by no means absent; general collections of the Edwardian or Georgian types were to be seen, also fine specialised collections. Especially noticeable were the early stamps of Victoria and Transvaal, those of the Cape of Good Hope, a fine collection of Cyprus (with numerous forgeries of the first overprints), of Sudan, and of Palestine. This last was the last word in specialism, as not only the minute defects of each plate were presented, but nearly every day of each year was represented by a different postmark for all the lower values! Nevertheless, it was of interest to see the curious and un-sent, as were the postmarks used in this kingdom during the war and after the armistice. A fascinating exhibit was that of the provisional postmarks, provisional stamps, and split stamps used immediately after the German retreat.

common Service stamps of the Hedjaz Railway and of the Ottoman Public Debt Department, and collectors were well rewarded by the sight of these scarce items with various postmarks.

The two sections where advanced philatelists expected to learn much were, of course, those of Belgium and of Belgian Congo. If there was really no exceptional array of "Epaulettes" and of the following issues, the advanced philatelists were rather disappointed as nothing new was to be learnt from these magnificent displays. Much has been written about the earlier stamps of Belgium, yet it seems that new studies are possible, especially for the issues between 1870 and 1900, and for the most recent ones. I saw full sheets of the 1860 issue, and all varieties of colour, perforation, retouches, etc., for the three first issues of Belgium.

I noted with surprise that though the more recent issues were well represented numerically, they were not studied. Especially in the 1915 issue, no distinction was made between the various printings of London, Mechlin, and Haarlem, which seem to remain utterly ignored in the country of issue! Even Belgian specialists do not give much attention to this issue, except to collect shades.

The case was similar with the Belgian Congo. The various printings of the Picture Series are utterly ignored; shades and perforations are not classified, and even the difference of perforations are frequently neglected, as are the variations of colour of the centres from deep black to yellowish grey. It is true, on the other hand, that great attention is given to the eight different hand stamps used for overprinting the stamps of the

TEN YEARS WITH NICARAGUA.

By JOHN L. STROUB.

(Read at the S. P. A. Convention)

Our wonderful hobby of stamp collecting, is not enjoyed by many of the women folks, but when their judgment is needed, even in Philatelic matters, one can rest assured it will be the best. One evening, about ten years ago, a young lady after looking over a very large general collection, turned back to Nicaragua and stated that this was "her ideal" country. The reason given at the time has long since been forgotten, but the selection was worthy of consideration, and has brought its just reward.

A thorough examination of the nineteenth and twentieth century albums revealed the same incompleteness, missing rarities, average conditions, plenty of "headache and eyestrain" varieties of perforations, watermarks and papers; with "questionable" well in evidence. In other words, a mediocre collection starting and ending—nowhere.

The suggestion was fast taking root, and the ultimate result was the weaning away from the mother collection, of several of the "seebeck" countries. Our "ideal" country showed greater nourishment than her colleagues, in this small special group collection; then all the others were abandoned. But Nicaragua was as a waif lost in a large city, with no beacon to guide or data to work with. The confinement to a single effort, assisted by individual notes, the special knowledge gained from the intensive study and constant plugging, brought the goal within reach. In time the public will share in this large subject.

Nicaragua can boast of over 1,100 major and countless minor varieties, and ranks as one of the largest stamp issuing countries. The honor of being the first of the Central American Republics to use postage stamps is hers. This great number of stamps are distinctive of dated periods, and each group owe their existence to some economic, monetary, progressive, or provisional condition. The word "Seebeck" has always been applied to Nicaragua, and these stamps have had both a good and bad effect on the country, which most of us know. The numerous surcharges and overprints have also belittled her, as she made good use of this reliable way of solving her postal emergencies, which were due to her poor financial condition existing from 1890 to recent date.

Of these 1,100 stamps, a dozen or so are rarities of the first water, the known copies of these can be counted on the fingers of one hand, while a possibly fifty, are more in demand, leaving the balance in a readily obtainable class. The catalogues have always maintained low values, making the undertaking comparatively easy for the serious collector. To the specialist is offered a fertile field with the intricate elements, characteristic of other countries omitted. A deep interest is to be found in the colorings, attractive designs showing historical events; the prominent features of a Nicaraguan

A LIFE SUBSCRIBER.

Our friend John W. Prevost, of Springfield, Mass., has made us a proposition that we have accepted in the spirit in which it was made. We quote from his letter:—

"I have read about your Five-Year Honor Club and have also noted that you have two or three ten-year subscribers. Now I want to go them a little better and am asking for a life subscription if you can arrange it. You could of course consult an actuary to find out what is the mathematical expectation of my life, but I propose something easier. The Good Book says that our allotted term on this earth is three-score years and ten, and shall we start with that as a basis?

I am therefore sending you my check for * * in payment for a life subscription to the WEEKLY. Are you a good sport? Of course I expect to live much longer than seventy, but are you willing to affirm that I shall not? I do not know how long your paper has been coming to me, but I do know that it is ever since the Weekly Philatelic Era was taken over by MEKEEL'S."

Of course we accepted Mr. Prevost's offer with alacrity and appreciate the sincere compliment that he is paying our publication by becoming a life subscriber. We hardly need to refer to Mr. Prevost's many activities in philately. He is a staunch member of the Springfield Stamp Club and the Boston Philatelic Society, and is a life member of the American Philatelic Society and the Societe Francaise de Timbrologie, Paris. He has written numerous articles and pamphlets and has a secure place in any American, "Who's Who in Philately" that might be published.

collection, and the tracing of the post progress is depicted in the many issues from 1862 to date, and no discouraging high face valued stamps.

The rarest stamp in my own collection is a "double error" variety of Scott's No. 343. A number of sheets (100 stamps) of the 50 centavos blue official stamp was decreed with other to be changed to a 2 centavos postage stamp, pending the arrival of the permanent or palace type issue in 1911. This particular value was the first to receive the 2 centavos surcharge, and on the initial few sheets, one stamp read 0.12c instead of 0.02c; this error was immediately corrected. Included in this small batch, by mistake, was one sheet of the 20 centavos blue official stamp, and this sheet showed the same 0.12c error also. This latter stamp was used on mail, and is the only one in existence, while on the 2 centavos official a half a dozen are known.

Many errors are found among the surcharges and overprints, because of ignorance and inadequate methods employed in their making up. The overprint used in the departments of Blue fields and Calo Gracias, contain the most desirable, resulting from a governmental order requiring a handstamp on all their stocks on hand. The silver peso was used in these department whereas in the remainder of Nicaragua the paper peso was current, and a profit was derived by the merchants of buying their stamps in the other parts and using them at home. This fraud was thus ended, and it is among these overprints, so ordered, that the writer needs four stamps to complete the major stamps of Nicaragua, in his collection.

"A word to the wise is sufficient, and when the facts are known and supported by a published check list, man regrets will exist caused by the neglect in the best selling of the Central American Republics. It would be improbable for the present prices to remain stationary forever.

Today we find the Postal Department of this country formulating plan for modernism, and the funds needed are being collected to this end, so that the surcharge and overprint will soothe customs of the past. The economic situation of Nicaragua is at its best assisted by our own country, in the form of a Protectorate, and the U. S. gold dollar is the money standard there, which needs no further recommendation.

UY NOW Summertime is the time to pick up old U.S. at very low prices. Let me prove it to you.

CONFEDERATE MONEY.

By F. H. E. WEBSTER.

MEKEEL's of July 28th, I read with interest Virginia Lee Cox's article on the Confederate printing press now in museum room of the Dietz Printing Company, at Richmond. In this connection I might add a few items as to the money and by whom Confederate money was produced.

he author refers to "a number of designs and proposals submitted by North Carolinians." That some of these were printed is proven by a twenty dollar Federal Bank of Virginia note dated August 6, 1860, bearing the initials of the American Bank Note Company, and a Monticello Bank Note dated Charlottesville, Oct. 1, 1860, was made by the same concern. No doubt there were at the battery of presses, of which 3 seems to be the only survivor, could meet the demands made upon it is shown by the fact that a dollar note at Richmond, June 2, 1862, was made by Mr. Duncan, of Columbia, S. C. Virginia Treasury Note issued Oct. 1862, by far the best example of engraving and printing I have seen in Confederate money, is a product of Keatinge & Co., Columbia, S. C., while a State of Georgia fifty cent note dated Montgomery, Jan. 1, 1863, was engraved (and not printed) by J. T. Paterson & Company of Augusta, Ga.

might be interesting to note that the two bills I mention were evidently circulated in Virginia prior to the secession adopted by that state on April 17, 1861, five days after the bombardment of Fort Sumter.

February 4, 1861, according to the Virginia, a league with the title of the Confederate States of America was declared and a provisional constitution was adopted with the capitol at Montgomery, Ala. As the first and second notes mentioned in this article were issued August 10 and October 1st, of the same year, the over eight months before the establishment of even the provisional government, was this money legal tender in Virginia and adjacent states at that time. Perhaps Miss Cox, or some other, can answer the question.

NEWS GLEANINGS.

Mon. E. R. Ackerman of Plainfield, N. J., sends us greetings from Paris. The face of the card bears a complete set of Olympic Games stamps. The set is obsolete.

about Sept. 15 the Fellowship Stamp Club of Mountain View, Calif., will have a stamp shop in the business district of Fresno, Calif. We extend congratulations and well wishes. Mr. Lampman, the manager, protests at the biased unreasonable opposition that is being shown Mr. Sherman and the Soviet contracts. Referring to the editorial in a contemporary he writes: "and we wish you would write

PURELY PERSONAL.

Charles J. Phillips of New York was an outstanding figure at the convention. He was thoroughly at home in all the changing scenes of the occasion and as a philatelic personality, he is ne plus ultra, as the ecstatic reporter would have it. Mr. Phillips is the embodiment of enthusiasm for our pursuit and he believes that proper publicity for philately is the slogan for us all. He had with him a grand lot of stamps and we were particularly impressed by his showing of U. S. locals which he bought in the Ferrari sale.

H. L. Lindquist, New York, whose work as editor of the journal of the Collectors Club has made him a nation-wide figure was followed by the usual crowds who impeded his progress, when tired of the gaze of hero-worshippers, he sought to slip off to a solitary spot for meditation. "They must think I am Jackie Coogan," he said pettishly, thus showing that true greatness is modest withal.

Charles E. Hatfield certainly was not going to withhold Boston as a convention seat when nominations were few and he arose to the emergency in a way to warm the cockles of the heart. We have reason to believe that accustomed as he is to swinging conventions, he would have prevailed if he did not think that the west was entitled to preferment next year. As one of his adulators said: "Keep the invitation on ice, Charlie."

A. F. Lichtenstein, New York, loaned his presence to one of the sessions and it was with no little difficulty that he succeeded in leaving early to keep his appointments elsewhere. Mr. Lichtenstein is one of the prime movers of the great forthcoming exhibition in New York and his fame as one of the truly great collectors made him, to use a highly original expression, the cynosure of all eyes.

Eugene Klein, Philadelphia, renewed acquaintances that he has made through faithful attendance at previous conventions and his views, tempered by experience, were often solicited. As official expert his report was a feature of the convention and proved that he is well placed in the official family of the society.

B. L. Voorhees, Chicago, disappointed in not having his usual auctioneer on hand, scurried around until he found a substitute. Then, due to the lateness of the return of members from the boat-trip, he was compelled to mark time for an hour before beginning the sale. When the sale began, the auctioneer missed a bid here and there to further burden the aching heart but a total realized from the sale of nearly $8,500 was a pretty good poultice.

Henry A. Diamant, St. Louis, lived up to his reputation of chief exponent of philatelic publicity. When he found that Jackie Coogan was in the hotel, he went post-haste for a stamp album and a batch of stamps and then proceeded to pierce the Coogan entourage until he was face to face with Jackie himself. On Mr. Diamant's knee, Jackie expressed his glee for the present and was soon placing stamps in the book; and Jackie knew certain of the stamps, especially the Belgian issues. In our humble opinion, Mr. Diamant deserves to have fair philatelia pin a rose on him.

John A. Klemann, New York, presided at the convention of the American Stamp Dealers' Association most ably and kept things progressing at an interesting pitch. From Detroit, Mr. Klemann proceeded to the Pacific coast and it is easy to see that no grass grows under his feet.

Laurence B. Mason, Cranford, New Jersey, was a welcome visitor and his credentials were of the highest kind as his collection of United States, especially locals on cover, is a superb aggregation, with some of the items so rich that they vie with rare-bits as dream producers.

Alvin Good, Cleveland, was present to look over his friends old and new and he found plenty of them; and while he does say that some of us show that time will not be denied his liberties with our thatches, he is not at all catty about it.

W. C. Stone, Springfield, Mass., the historian de luxe, is still the Admirable Crichton of the A. P. S. He began with the society and he ends each convention and he has succeeded to the proud position of omniscience in its chronicles. Mr. Stone says that perhaps Springfield will not be content to wait until 1932 before asking for its next convention; they must like us there.

W. Hamilton Barnum of Cleveland, took delight in renewing old acquaintances and circulated around with his accustomed verve. It is a far cry since we went with him to the conventions in 1896 at Lake Minnetonka but he still has his hand on the throttle.

Henry C. Crowell, Cleveland, punctuated the sober moments of the convention with his lightsome laugh and by his timely intervention stilled the rising tumult when cool heads were at a premium. As a mediator, he should be retained for convention use at a salary in keeping with the dignity of the society.

L. A. Hanford, Cleveland, that great champion of the proprieties enacted as usual in his austere manner the role that he sustains so well. Yet, after all, those who know the gentleman well say that beneath his gruff exterior there beats a heart that does not always frown upon the weaknesses of his fellowmen.

Donald R. Heath, Monroe, Michigan, added another notch to his convention record and further laurels to his fame as an amateur photographer. Not a few of us remember Dr. Heath, the famous father of this young man and the son is carrying out the traditions of the name.

Dr. E. J. Weschcke, St. Paul, soon found his bearings and several caches of Confederate covers for which he has an affinity. It takes some time to make the proper connections in a crowd but it is not long before the willing buyer will never again be in a position of splendid isolation.

Prof. Henry A. Meyer, Evansville, Indiana, was a busy person at the convention and the idle moment knew him not. He showed himself to be tireless in his search for the stamp theme and the various exhibits had in him an appreciative observer. Come again, friend.

N. B. Paulson, Chicago, the plutocratic purveyor of philatelic gems, was one of the attractions of the occasion and the finesse that he displayed in salesmanship was too beautiful for words. He throws a glamor around the transaction that removes it from the realms of reality.

AT DETROIT

The Detroit conventions attracted some hundreds of plain and assorted philatelists from almost all quarters of the habitable globe, France, Canal Zone and the flung states of our own country having sent their representatives to the pivot spot. The 299 registrants at the convention, of whom 226 were members, made a stir as they milled around the lobby of the Statler Hotel. The attendance was embricative and "just folks" were the majority. A "wise" commercial traveler friend, sated with sensation who happened to be at the hotel, said: "I'll be plastered with prescriptions if ever heard such a bunch of fire-cracker before. If they are dreamers, they will out-dynamite 'Dynamic Detroit' if he wake up." Playfully, we introduced him to visitors whom we dubbed as commanders, commandants and counts; mayors, magistrates and maesters. Speechless with awe, he whispered: "President Coolidge here?" and when told him that he was not but that his revered relative was, we could have borrowed money from him had we been base. There were Wolsieffer and War Seely and Stone; Lichtenstein and Lindquist; Phillips and Paulson; Voorhees and Vowinkel; Filstrup and Farnham; Barnum and Bailey; Mason and McLaren; Klein and Kleeman; Good and Guest; Eilers and Elliott; Hammatt and Hennan; Diamant and Davis; Perry and Payne; Caudell and Crowell; Spence and Sylvester; Nevin and Noske; Dr. Heath and Davenport; Linn and Landvatter; Flierl and Flerlage; Atherton and Adres; Johnson and Jones; Hatfield and Heath; and so on. Our record, by means complete, shows the following names, in addition to those given: Barnes, Bell, Burmeister, Ball, Barto, Beals, Cassel, Crouch, Evans, Greer, Gundlach, Galbraith, Hart, King, Keton, Kennett, Kranz, Lachasse, Ka Brodstone, Brown, Meyer, Merell, Cost, Mozman, Nelson, Ohlman, McCrill, Weiss, Whittaker, Wagner, Windhor, Weschke, Schaffner, Rech, Schliecke, Smellie, Staab, Seagrave, Tubman, Henry, Finlayson and a large representation of Detroit members, who were tiring in their efforts to provide for comfort and convenience of visitors. We expect to have a copy of the register from which to get the names that are now omitted.

THE WORK OF "M. T. DOME".

The literary work of R. L. Huston who writes under the nom de plume "M. T. Dome" has been a prominent feature of the WEEKLY during the past year. No fewer than sixteen humorous articles, both prose and verse, have appeared in our columns. He has furnished us with some cartoons and extracts from his letters to Warner Barnum have occasionally been featured. We take this opportunity of acknowledging the splendid work that he has done and feel positive that his clean humor has done much to cheer the pathway of the philatelist. It is very patent that the nom de plume in no way fits the measure of his literary genius.

EARLY LOW VALUES SPECIALIZED.

By WARNER BATES.

R. L. Hustis, of 757 Marshall Street, Milwaukee, Wis., has again submitted a lot of minor varieties on the 2c red brown, 1883. The following selections from the editor's comment on the important item of the lot will interest the variety specialist:

Am returning your very fine showing of the two cent red brown, of the 1883. You certainly have gone far in assembling a minor variety collection and, in time, will be something you can be proud of. Personally, I consider minor varieties quite as fascinating cancellations and it often amuses me to go over some large lot from dealer or collector, which have been priced according to cancellation, and to pick out for my own collection some fine minor varieties worth dollars for a few cents, because the other fellow had his eyes open only for the cancellation. It seems to me that the chap who collects cancellations and minor varieties of single stamp or a small group of stamps building up his collection wisely and doubt the blue paper. I have a few of the three cent green on a bluish and also on pinkish paper, but to mind these differences may have been caused by the stamps having been soaked from bluish or pinkish envelopes. Less I can later find better proof, I will have to doubt this variety.

Our pages of shifted transfers is a very fine showing. On the first page the two specimens which show marks distinctly in six pearls to the left of oval, blue lines between six of the short, horizontal lines of shading at the left of the design, doubling of the lines of shading on Washington's cheek and elsewhere, marks in six pearls at the right between some of the short horizontal lines at the right, etc., are fine gems. Have never seen much more interesting shifts. Also, there is another resting thing which shows the short horizontal lines at the right shifted to right so that they show outside the design—fine! I should call this a "cancellation shift to the right."

There are many others on the two cent shifts which are similar and also showing of more minor shifts. It seems to me as I glance through these in haste that you perhaps have missed the other minor shifts in this group which occur at the lower left and left of design and also in the upper right hand corner of the design. These shifts are easily seen in the vertical and horizontal lines of shading and outlines of design in the positions mentioned and ought not to have much trouble finding a few plain specimens to add to your collection.

do not note the big shift that comes in your stamp in your showing. H. C. of Buffalo has one. As I remember, the horizontal lines at the top of stamp are so doubled as to show the stamp, all the letters of the "U. S. Postage" at top are finely doubled, and the letters and figure at bottom of the stamp show traces, there are traces of doubling elsewhere. It is a fine thing and rare.

I question your designation of double shift, just as I question such terms as "triple transfer" and the like. To my mind any kind of a shift is just a shifted transfer, and that is all. At least, I have never seen a stamp which I thought showed any traces of three distinct impressions of any part of the design, which is what I think you mean when you say "double shift" and what is meant by those who speak of "triple transfers." That would be quite a stamp, indeed. But the chances are that if such a thing could exist it would be so badly blurred that no one could say what it was.

Guide lines and dots are very interesting, very legitimate to collect and bound to become popular in time. I note the various positions of the guide dots in the lot you send, and also the stamps showing horizontal guide lines running into the design from the left and extending clear into Washington's chin. Have never seen this variety before and consider it a fine thing. On the next page of the lot I notice the trace of a vertical guide line running up through the white some cases, crossing the horizontal line. These are all nice things.

The three cent green of the 1870-71 is prolific in these guide lines and dots and some examples that I have are quite interesting. Also, in the three cent green, 1873, I have specimens showing crossed vertical and horizontal guide lines misplaced in Washington's forehead.

Question the copy you call "diagonal guide line." Doubt if there ever was such an animal. Perhaps this is something else, a scratch, or something of the sort.

Glad to see that you collect pairs and strips showing various oddities of guide dots and lines. I consider such pieces interesting—such as, for instance, the strip of three you show which has a shift on one stamp and none on the other two, and a guide line at left on another stamp. Such things, in course of time, will be considered real "auction pieces." I have a strip of five of the three cent 1870-71 showing a guide line running through various location dots outside and underneath the designs of the stamps, and crossing the entire strip at the bottom. It is a unique thing, in my opinion.

You have a nice showing of shades. In this, Mr. Andrews could help you as he could tell you better than I which ones you lack. I remember in my former 2c 1883 collection I had a much lighter yellow brown and a somewhat deeper rich red brown than you show—also, I believe, a deeper blackish brown or chocolate.

Under "odds and ends" you show some nice things. The nick in the bottom line under and to the left of the figure "2" is interesting. Some of our correspondents have previously mentioned it.

As to the light, but wide line which runs along the entire stamp to the left of the design (running from top to bottom) I have no idea what it is. Have seen it before on No. 210 but on no other stamps. Inclined to think it was some defect of the plate. It seems lighter than the shade of the stamp. Perhaps it might have been a ridge on the perforating machine which might have become slightly inked through wet stamps passing over it and left this trace. That is just a wild guess, however.

Your pages of large-size stamps, arrows, imprints, etc., are interesting.

I failed to see "M. T. Dome's" poem until you directed my attention to it. My compliments to him, whoever he is. It was kind of him to say what he did, but really the compliments are undeserved. I think that in starting "Early Low Values Specialized," which department will very shortly be edited by one of our best known specialists and a very good friend of the writer's, I merely did what many other fellows had wished for before. I doubt if it was an original thought with me. The thing that pleases me most about such praise as "M. T. Dome" expresses in verse is that the department itself is appreciated." (Mr. Hustis knows well who M. T. Dome is. So do we.—W. O. W.)

30c Postage Due, perforated 10, O. G.
50c Postage Due, perforated 11, O. G.

One stamp that has been elusive for many months is the 30c Postage Due, perforated 10, watermarked, Scott's No. 2263b, which they list in the 1925 advance sheets at $2.00 each. I have never had a stock of this variety, but was able to pick up a few in Detroit and now offer fine mint copies at $1.25 each, block of four at $5.00, and a top plate block of six at $8.00. Only one plate block is available. The stamp is out of issue, it has always been scarce, and there is not much likelihood of any quantities coming upon the market.

At the same time I obtained a few of the 50c, perforated 11, Scott's No. 2273, cataloging at $1.00, and offer a few of these at 80c each, or $3.25 a block of four. Like the 30c, these are mint O. G. and in fine condition.

If you have not obtained the 2c Postage Due, perf. 11, in the very deep lake shade, I can furnish this at 5c per stamp, or 20c per block.

Always in the market to buy anything fine in United States postage stamps. Top notch prices paid for top notch things.

The Bi-Monthly Journal

A house organ with an inimitable style and charm, published every two months. Each issue consists of from 32 to 48 pages, every one containing a formidable array of unusual offerings in medium and scarce sets, packets and special collections, dealers' stocks, single stamps, philatelic supplies, etc., etc.

Albert C. Munson, 412 Broadway, Houston, Texas, writes:
"I enjoy the Bi-Monthly as much as MEKEEL'S; there is no other paper, house organ, journal or circular of any kind wherein one can find such extraordinarily good stock—and at such reasonable prices."

C. A. Ralston, 164 Vaughn St., Waterloo, Iowa, says:
"I am paying subscription charges for two large house organs, but would rather get along without both of them than to lose yours. If necessary, I know that I could pay a substantial subscription to the Bi-Monthly and save all of it on stamps offered in a single issue."

The Bi-Monthly Journal is a distinctive publication and absolutely free to patrons. You can't afford to be without it!

United States.

Salary Changes Will Require New Postal Rates.

The Postal Bulletin for Friday, August 15th, presents the Salary Bill recommended to Congress by the Postmaster General. It will be recalled that the bill passed by the last Congress was not approved by the President of the United States, and the present bill having been recommended by a member of the Cabinet supposedly will meet with approval of our Chief Executive.

The part which will mainly interest the philatelist is that portion which recommends certain increases of postage, some of which will possibly result in one or two new postage stamps, providing the bill becomes law. In the first place, he suggests that the registration fee which is 10c at present be not less than 12c, and if Congress should even increase this amount it no doubt will be perfectly to the Department. At the present time, the sender of a registered letter or parcel may receive a return receipt on request without charge. It is now suggested that there be a fee of one cent charged when such a receipt is desired.

It is now further suggested that to secure the immediate delivery of mail matter weighing in excess of two pounds and not over ten pounds, the value of the stamps to be affixed (in addition to the regular postage) shall be fifteen cents and for the special delivery thereof 11 cents may be paid to the messenger or other person making such delivery; and to secure immediate delivery of articles of mail weighing over ten pounds, the value of the stamps to be affixed shall be 20 cents (in addition to the regular postage) and for the special delivery thereof 15c shall be paid. I have quoted almost word for word the recommendation insofar as the special charges are concerned, and it looks as if the Department suggests a sort of tax amounting to 15 cents and 20 cents on certain mail, and the special delivery fee will be 11 cents and 15 cents on the two specified classes.

If these changes meet with the approval of the Congress, we will no doubt have in addition to the prevailing 10 cents special delivery stamp, new ones of 11 cents and 20 cents denominations.

Certain other changes are suggested in the classification and rates of postage affecting other classes than the first-class mail, which seems to remain as at present. Whether the above special charges which are to be collected in addition to the regular postage will be prepaid by regular stamps or special ones remains a question that will possibly be settled by the Department later.

We are today paying a higher registration fee than any other country in the world, and it is to be regretted that the Department suggests a change in this rate.

Increased charges for money orders are also suggested.

Transcontinental Air Mail Service.

I am informed by the Post Office Department under date of August 16th, that arrangements have just been made between the Postmaster General and Major General Leonard Wood, Governor General of the Philippines, whereby letters intended to be carried by airplane mail from San Francisco, will be accepted in the islands. The additional postage will be collected in the Philippines at eight cents an ounce or fraction for each zone or part of zone. The mail will be enclosed in a sealed pouch labeled "Via Air Mail" and handed to the seapost clerk for delivery in San Francisco. While the Department does not state, it is my impression that this extra postage will, of course, be paid by regular Philippine stamps.

Under date of August 7th, the Postmaster General reported that the first month's operation of the continuous air mail service from coast to coast inaugurated on July 1st was, in the main, successful from every standpoint. Despite adverse weather conditions during much of the night flying, the schedule was maintained without interruption. During the thirty-one days the planes flew 173,910 miles. When the army aviators complete their trip around the world they will have covered 25,000 miles.

Out of the first twenty nights of flying there were only six with clear weather straight from Chicago to Cheyenne. Most of the time the air mail pilots encountered cloud-bursts, tornadoes and severe electrical storms, which prove a greater menace to aviation than most severe rain and snow storms experienced in other seasons of the year. But despite the obstacles encountered, the average time westbound was 39 hours and 49 minutes, and the average time eastbound was 36 hours and 21 minutes. The very best established rail schedules are 38 hours westbound, and 90 hours eastbound. While the poorest performance westbound on July 18th was 55 hours and 40 minutes, there was a saving of 30 hours and 20 minutes over the combination of rail schedules. The poorest record eastbound was made on July 12th when 57 hours and 39 minutes were consumed, which compares favorably with the best rail schedule, which would have taken 32 hours and 21 minutes longer.

In the report attention is called to the fact that part of the delay is brought about because there is no lighted airway either into San Francisco or New York, this airway extending only from Cleveland west to Rocky Spring, Wyoming. The course is now being lighted from Mather field, in the Sacramento Valley, to San Francisco. This route is also being lighted across New Jersey into New York, so that ships arriving near their destination early in the evening may receive the proper lights to guide them.

During the first month of operation no accidents worthy of the name were reported, the nearest approach being a forced landing in Nebraska.

The gross income from the service in the first month of its operation is substantially less than the cost of maintenance, but the Postmaster General mentions that it would be unfair to lay too much stress upon the exact balance between the income and outgo until they have had the benefit of at least four or six months intensive traffic solicitation.

The Postmaster General further called attention to the fact that more or less difficulty is being experienced with sorting the air mail from the regular mail and that a large number of letters intended for the air mail have found their way to the trains. He distinctly states that this is partly due to the fact that the air mail stamps are not distinctive enough when they pass through the hands of a clerk handling a large volume of mail. This is one reason why we should change our general make up of air mail stamps or adopt a large colored sticker of some kind, such as suggested by the Third Assistant Postmaster General, and mentioned in this column under date of August 18th.

Major Joseph A. Steinmetz sends me a copy of a communication that he has addressed to Mr. Glover, suggesting the adoption of this recommendation would be a solution to the prevailing difficulty.

At A. P. S. Convention News. Those who attended the A. P. S. Convention at Detroit during the week August 11th had the pleasure of seeing a good number of their fellow collectors, and learning much and seeing in the way of items of interest to the heart of the United States collector. Our genial friend, Mr. Fratcher, of Michigan Stamp & Coin Company, largest dealer in town, seemed to be from morning until night, and had a really wonderful lot of United States. Many of the choice pieces were on the spot, and the nicest that I obtained from him was a pair of four and pair of the 10c, 1857, on a beautiful cover. He had an unusually large lot of locals and the choicer pieces being some Boutons used in combination with the 5c, 1847, went to Mr. L. B. N., one of our foremost collectors of stamps.

While in Detroit, I also learned the value of the part sheet of the 2c 1922, vertically, which came out of it earlier in the year. I find that part sheet of fifty was sent by the master at Orin, Michigan, to DeForest for redemption, where it was sold by a postal employee. While he had a good thing, unfortunately it did but little benefit from the find, or one who knew of its value was to talk him into disposing of it for a song. Unfortunately, a good number of the sheet had a second row of perforations which ruined a part of it. As at the auction held on Tuesday evening ruled high, and I will be glad to give these in my next Chronicle.

An attractive little item that I have seen heretofore was a copy of the 10c, 1869, used in Japan. The 10c is known but these other two values did not come to my attention.

ALGERIE.—Mr. A. A. Wasserscheid advised of the appearance of the 50c blue present Pasteur issue with the surcharge "ALGERIE" in red at the top of the stamp.

AFRICA.—These stamps were definitely withdrawn from use and replaced by those of Belgian Congo.—Whitfield King & Co.'s Bulletin.

PARCEL POST.—Mr. Henry Hooreman reported the appearance of two new items in Parcel Post series: 2fr 70c, grey, and 30c, brown.

On July 2nd a postage stamp was issued to commemorate the centenary of the Independence of Brazil, in which Brazil took a prominent part in helping to establish, and on the day a public holiday was declared to celebrate the same. The stamp was photographed locally at the Casa da (Mint) and is printed in four COSTA RICA.—Mr. Emil J. Rall sends us a copy of a new 2c stamp of a lilac color. The shape is oblong and pictures a map in the centre. Above in the left corner are the figures "1924," and the date of this year in the right. Within a frame at the left centre is the inscription "Centenario de la Incorporacion del Partido de Nicoya" while at the other side is the figure of value and at the base "Centimos." The stamp is the work of the American Bank Note Co.

FRANCE.—The Olympian Games stamps were withdrawn from sale on July 31st but will be available for postage up to Sept. 30th.—Whitfield King & Co.'s Bulletin.

GIBALTAR.—The 1sh, 2sh, 4sh and 8sh stamps on script watermarked paper were put on sale on June 20th and simultaneously the same values with the old watermark were withdrawn from sale, for what reason is not clear, as there is no change either in designs or colours, the only difference being in the watermark. No previous notice of withdrawal was given to the public, and it would be interesting to know in what manner the withdrawn stock will be disposed of.—Whitfield King & Co.'s Bulletin.

NIGERIA.—We have received from Mr. R. Roberts the 1sh, jet black on emerald, script watermarked.

SALVADOR.—Mr. A. A. Wasserscheid has shown us the 1 colon value, type A-101, with the surcharge "20" at each side and "Veinte centavos" at the base. The overprint is in black.

SEYCHELLES.—The 18c purple on yellow is being printed on script paper, as also are the current 75c and 1r 50c, according to Stanley Gibbons Monthly Journal.

SIDE-LIGHTS OF S. P. A. CONVENTION

By N. R. HOOVER.

We who know, have to smile at the labored way newspaper reporters have of asking questions so as to understand the intricacies of stamp values. The wonderment on the face of the lady reporter from the Christian Science Monitor was very funny.

Mr. Thos. Evans deserves much credit for securing 300 lines of "copy" on the convention in 210 newspapers throughout the United States. This we feel is the largest stamp publicity act ever pulled off by any stamp organization.

The Fox Film two-scene act for their Weekly News Reel showed (1) J. M. Bartels turning the pages of his wonderful Venezuela specialized collection; (2) the group of officers, Messrs. Hoffman, Lycett, Hoover and Hussey. Bach tried hard to get his magazine in it but the operator kicked.

Mr. Vahan Mozzian got the fever so bad he paid for a gold medal Life Membership. This is the spirit that will bring the society back fast.

Genial Ex-President Kissinger was on hand from Reading. Those who came the furthest were W. C. Henry of Los Angeles, W. C. Moirt of Kitchener, Ontario and Dr. A. E. Hussey of Cincinnati.

Dr. Serge Avazon, 140 W. 42nd St., N. Y. City, displayed the most valuable stamp during the convention, that of British Guiana, No. 14.

The swappers had a great time Tuesday night. There were over 100 of them at it and much goods changed hands.

Miss E. Cook of Easton, Pa., had a wonderful assortment of general stamps and some remarkable precancels with her.

At the Auction prices started off so high several men got disgusted and went up stairs. They wandered back just at the wind-up and kicked themselves when they discovered the sale wound up with some wonderful values which they missed. The heat tired out the high bidders and the lean ducks cashed in on their laxity.

Some mathematical person figured up the number of agate lines of publicity the convention got at not one cent of cost. The local newspapers printed 2,039 agate lines about the S. P. A. The Herald-Tribune printed on their picture page an excellent photograph of Walter Scott on the auctioneer's table with Max Ohlman auctioneer, helpers and a part of the bidders. The International News Service ran 300 lines on the convention in 210 newspapers throughout the United States. Fox Film Corporation ran a picture news reel of the convention which service is sold to 1,800 movies throughout the country. The S. P. A. Convention got more free publicity this year than have a half dozen other conventions of any society.

OUR HOBBY.

By C. H. HOLDEN, Detroit, Mich.

Gathered are we from near and distant lands,
Drawn by the magnet of a subtle power,
That eye sees not but the heart understands,
Like the fragrant breath of a blooming flower.

He who would say that we worship in vain,
That the objects we love are things of earth,
As well might say the mission of sun and rain
Is devoid of aim instead of new birth.

Deep is the love for the goddess we cherish,
Abiding our faith in the joys in store,
For we know that our ship can never perish,
Guided by the lights we see on the shore.

What other field of interest and pleasure,
Of sun-kissed meadow where the daisy grows,
Can in its confines begin to measure,
With the innate joy our hobby bestows?

Most men, like the eagle, soar high and alone,
In quest of what they call legitimate prey;
That they cannot agree was plainly shown,
When in New York the Democrats grew gray.

But we, of but one faith and kindred mind,
Agree upon stamps of rare perfection;
But when we find there's but one of a kind,
We confess we feel slight dejection.

Wisdom has guided you to Detroit of fame,
To hold this the thirty-ninth convention;
What you see you should hang up in a frame,
For it will act as an inspiration.

(A. P. S. Convention, August 14, 1924.)

STAMPIDIOSITIES CONVENTIONALIZED.

By T. M. R. L.

W. C. Henry, Los Angeles, Calif.—While he was the first to sign the register, there was a particular attraction in the water of the 5th floor.

Karl K. Koslowski, Detroit, Mich.—For some time folks did not know what the three K.K.K.'s on his Convention badge meant.

J. E. Guest, Dallas, Texas.—A chap whispered to me that J. E. was praying at the time he had his fling on the floor of the Convention.

H. A. Davis, Denver, Colo.—We deduce that Holland doesn't collect stamps at all, forgetting the 3c vermilion, U. S. John A. Klemann, N. Y. C.—The report that our John is buying paper for a paper mill is all wrong.

Chas. J. Phillips, N. Y. C.—Our esteemed friend Charlie of the Rotary Club only mentioned London once all week.

W. F. Fratcher, Detroit.—Note the ad in the A. P. S. Program—you had the three kinds there, but, William, we like 20th Century, even in calico.

Chas. K. Nevin, Boston, Mass.—The only chap at the Convention who came from there who did not come over on the Mayflower.

O. F. Moses, Cleveland, O.—Speaker of the Jury on By-Laws, was punctuated by a Long Horn, during his speech.

C. C. Keller, Detroit, Mich.—Representing the Keller Bees Wax Co., was there, etc.

J. H. Blackney, Saginaw, Mich.—At first we thought the cigars came from Saginaw, but now we don't. J. H. only sells 'em.

C. F. Heyerman, P. P., Detroit, Mich.—Since the Convention C. F. is thinking of going into the Steam Roller Business.

Alfred F. Lichtenstein, N. Y. C.—A young lady who dresses in 2-cent Jackson color cancelled with cross bars was supposed to have said that it's too bad so nice a fellow as Al should publish those labels with his name on them.

L. J. Brodstone, Superior, Neb.—Twenty-five years ago Beck, Severn, Wolsieffer, Barnum, Fratcher, were at a Convention of the A. P. S. in Detroit and were lost for three days, and a merry time they had. Judging from the letters L. J. writes even to this day, that he must have taken a terribly large supply back with him.

Roy C. Frank, Minneapolis, Minn.—Roy refuses to be as confidential as his success as was Mac of an Ohio p. F. E. Farnham, Chicago, Ill.—sensational appearing gentleman still a few U. S. left.

B. L. Drew, Boston, Mass.—please prepare a paper for the next convention on, "How to vote without proxies." . . . Please Ham.

L. A. Burmeister, Jr., Milwaukee, Wis.—This chap was not here 25 years ago, but managed to be lost and 50 proxies in his pocket, perhaps St. Louis.

P. M. Weiss, Cincinnati, O.—The man to get money from a certain manager, the rest of us had to give Wilbur F. Cannon, Davenport, Iowa. The heavy artillery was kept in reserve and the light brigade was advanced the Lake Coast.

Paul P. Murray, St. Louis, Mo.—good reason for the convention not to St. Louis, he carried his arm sling the second day.

R. J. Wagner, Fostoria, O.—The pronounced him the best looking Head at the convention.

THE BRUSSELS EXHIBITION.

Independent State with Congo Belge. Complete collections of this issue were exhibited, some of the varieties being extremely scarce. I saw also large blocks of the scarce 5 and 10 centimes of the Picture Series in blue and brown, also some stamps with inverted centre.

I was surprised to note that in the recent overprinted series, no attention was given to the variety; missing point under the "c," a variety which occurs regularly on two values—the 50 centimes on 25 and the 25 centimes on 15. In the local overprints of Boma, there are two varieties of the 10 centimes on 5, and 25 centimes on 40, the distance between the value and the "c" varying as much as 2 or 3 millimetres.

As for the Belgian Occupation of German East Africa, there was a fine display of the Kigoma, Urundi, and Ruanda stamps, numerous studies of field postmarks, etc. But the two different printings of the London overprint were missed, yet the first one, to be recognised by the close position of the words, is much scarcer than the second (except for the 15 centimes value). Specimens of the variety "OCCUPATION" were shown revealing that this error is due to a speck of dust giving to the "c" the appearance of an "o." The long "t" variety is a genuine one.

I noted as varieties uncatalogued of the Belgian Congo. Bilingual Series: 3 francs vertically imperforate, 10 francs on dark grey paper used for formulas (exists also with the 1921 overprint). Issue of 1916, 25 centimes vertically imperforate, horizontally imperforate (exists with the 50 centimes surcharge). Boma provisionals: 10 centimes on 5 centimes inverted and double with one inverted—25 centimes on 40 centimes inverted.

Among the Belgian stamps, very little was to be discovered. I saw the great rarities: inverted overprint on the Olympic Games stamps 5 and 15 centimes—also the 2 francs of the 1915 issue horizontally imperforate.

Luxemburg, as a neighbouring country of Belgium, was largely represented. A magnificent display of the Official stamps revealed very scarce varieties, such as double overprint on the Allegory stamps:

5, 12½, 20, 25, 50 centimes, 1 and 5 francs; inverted overprint on the 25 centimes, and the same value with double overprint, one being inverted. In the 1911 issue, double overprint on the 12½ and 17½ centimes. A further curiosity was the 4 centimes of Grand Duke Adolf with double perforation "OFFICIEL."

Entires and essays are usually neglected in philatelic exhibitions, but they were largely represented at Brussels, especially the essays of Greece, Sardinia, Spain, and the United States. M. de Raay was the chief exhibitor of entires with his famous Orange River collection, and M. Cozterus took the second place with a general collection of rarities and curiosities.

On the contrary, Air Mails held only a modest place with the usual displays of Dr. Paganini and Dr. Renaut. It can be inferred from this fact that either this branch of Philately develops slowly or that its adepts are rather shy of entering international competitions.

The same remark applies to the collections presented with the intention of illustrating historical events or to serve philatelic propaganda. Only two or three exhibits could be put under this heading and practically disappeared under the bulk of specialised collections. It is to be hoped for the sake of Philately that much encouragement will be given to these valorous pioneers.

Though no less than eleven rooms were occupied by the Exhibition, and though there was much space available, the classification of the exhibits was a very imperfect one, and reference to the catalogue was necessary in each instance. In many instances, the same exhibit was displayed in two or three different spots, breaking the unity of a collection. Also the rule of anonymous exhibitions was so strictly observed that it was often difficult to distinguish the collections of various exhibitors and to identify them. Notwithstanding these slight criticisms, the presentation of the stamps was most agreeable to the eye and was a great factor in the success of this Exhibition.

A curious feature of this philatelic event was the complete absence of official participation; not even the Belgian postal administration was represented by exhibits. The presence of Belgian postal authorities was only felt by the extreme

ESSAYS of the old CLASSICAL STAMPS of the EARLY ISSUES of SPAIN up to the so called DON CARLOS STAMPS which are included

WE ARE KEEPING OF THE SAME

The Finest Collection Existing in the World

The said ESSAYS, which I could acquire only by chance, belonged to Mr. Moens, the oldest stamp dealer of the world, who no doubt may be considered as the symbol of the philately.

There are many ESSAYS which are lacking in the biggest specialised collections, some items are quite unique. Many in different colours and designs which are unknown since they were not adopted at the time. There are essays in lithography, engraving, typography, copper-print, embossed—printing, etc., misprints in most interesting executions. Further, the early stamps of the Deputy Chamber and the Senate, things of Andalusia, etc.

The Colonies are also represented profusely.—The forgeries are especially interesting, more particularly those of the classical issues which were made with a view only to do prejudice to the Postal administration. There are many used items, some were produced in a very sly way. In most cases the Postal administration did not notice the forgeries.

As we have stated already, the collection contains many unique pieces of which there exist but one or two copies altogether. Remarkable among the unknown proofs are the marvelous designs and colours, the fiscal, police and commercial stamps in all possible colours, including essays of the latter. The collection is of the highest interest and of an inestimable value. It contains, moreover, scarce telegraph stamps, as well as essays of the same Brief. You are offered here a unique collection really fit for purposes, containing hundreds and hundreds of different kinds. A specialist in Spanish stamps cannot do without such a collection; he must have it.

I am ready to send the collection out for examination upon request against postage should it not be possible to come to business.

Perhaps it would be possible for me to retail in the case of a considerable purchase.

activity of the special post-office. It seems impossible to omit it from a thorough description of the Exhibition, as not only was a special postmark used, and Belgian and Congo stamps sold, but also a special stamp was on sale exclusively at this post-office: a 5 francs stamp of the Montenez type printed in yellowish brown and issued in small blocks of four. These blocks were taken from the plate used for the normal printing of 5 francs stamps.

There was a precedent in the issue in 1921 of the 50 centimes in dark blue prior to the regular issue in slate-blue. This time there was a real rush of the Brussels (if not of the whole Belgian) population to buy these famous sheets. All the streets leading to the Exhibition entrance were placed under police control, and groups of twenty persons, under the guidance of policemen, were allowed to have access to the post-office at one time. Only one sheet was delivered to each visitor to the Exhibition, but more than nine-tenths of these visitors never thought of visiting the Exhibition.

The idea worked splendidly; the postal authorities must have sold one or two thousand sheets, and the committee received an equal number of entrance fees. But from a purely philatelic point of view, it can only be regretted that such a course was adopted. This stamp seems to have no real postal status though issued by the Government, and it will never be regularly used, except by some enthusiastic philatelists. It was not sold at regular post-offices, and the only postmarked specimens will bear the special postmark of the Exhibition; it can be considered in the same light as the Italian and French stamps issued for the philatelic exhibitions of Trieste and Bordeaux. A wild speculation in this stamp took place during the Exhibition, copies being offered at prices varying from 20 to 100 francs a-piece!

Philatelic literature and philatelic material were also exhibited in two special rooms, almost invisible to the visitors; little was to be seen in these sections apart from entries of the British firms, our publishers being represented by various albums, the Colour Guide, and the Monthly Journal.—Stanley Gibbons Monthly Journal.

OUR HONOR CLUB.

Our First Honor Members from Great Britain and France.

TEN APPLICATIONS FOR THE CLUB.

John L. Chatfield, Painted Post, N. Y.
Fred'k G. Rechten, Jersey City, N. J.
John W. Prevost, Springfield, Mass.
A. Leon Adutt, Great Shelford, Eng.
Gustave de Lachasse, Avignon, France.
T. J. Gundlach, Buffalo, N. Y.
Mrs. J. W. Stanford, Piedmont, Calif.
Charles Huscher, Golden, Colo.
A. A. Wasserscheid, N. Y. City
D. Vila, New Orleans, La.

On August 14, we received two applications for membership in the Honor Club. One came from Frederick G. Rechten of Jersey City, N. J., and the other from John L. Chatfield, postmaster at Painted Post, N. Y. Mr. Rechten appreciates our paper particularly because of its news matter in connection with unused U. S. stamps and because of the many attractive advertisements found in our columns. Mr. Chatfield considers the WEEKLY indispensable and he closes with the sentiment, "May your shadow never grow less."

The acquisition of Mr. Prevost to our Honor Club is fully described elsewhere in this issue. We consider his application for membership in the Honor Club as one of the most striking testimonials ever furnished the WEEKLY. We hope Mr. Prevost will live long beyond the allotted term of three-score and ten years.

To A. Leon Adutt belongs the honor of being the first British member of our Honor Club. As a remittance of $7.50 is required to take this step the acquisition of Mr. Adutt is considered quite a compliment to our publication. We welcome him to the honor of M.H.C. He is one of the most prominent British philatelists, being a Fellow in the Royal Philatelic Society and a member of various other organizations. Many philatelic honors have been achieved by him.

We had barely written the above paragraph when opening a letter from Mr. Severn we found an application from Gustave de Lachasse of Avignon, France, who was attending the A. P. S. convention at Detroit. He is the first long term subscriber from France. Mr. Lachasse will be remembered by many of our readers as formerly residing in California and his presence at Detroit was greatly appreciated.

Mr. Severn's letter enclosed also two other applications, one from Mrs. J. W. Stanford, of Piedmont, Calif., and one from Theodore J. Gundlach, Buffalo, N. Y. Mrs. Stanford in making application said:—"I am dangerously near the firing line so I hurry on my $5 with my best wishes." Mrs. Stanford's certificate of confidence in philately and in the WEEKLY is gladly received. Mr. Gundlach is assistant superintendent of the Prudential Insurance Company of America and is a keen philatelist who has attended the last two conventions of the A.P.S.

We have without doubt a very large and very happy family in the makeup of our mailing list, but in Charles Huscher of Golden, Colo., we have the 100% happy subscriber. He makes his application for membership in our Honor Club and gives us this remarkable word of commendation:—"For seventeen years I have been a subscriber to the WEEKLY, and have never missed a single number in all these years. Good luck and many years of prosperity." To which we respond a hearty "Amen," and thank Mr. Huscher for his word of appreciation.

A DECADE IN STAMPS.

Ten years ago, on August 18, 1914, there appeared in France a stamp that marked the beginning of a new epoch, not merely in stamp-collecting, but in the history of the world. It was a special issue in aid of the Red Cross, the forerunner of countless others arising out of the Great War and its aftermath. The postage stamps of the last ten years are fraught with historical interest. They tell the fateful story of war and peace, of destruction and reconstruction; of the spoils of victory and the price of defeat. Not a few of these significant scraps of paper have attained a price equal to that of old masters or first folios, but, apart from any question of intrinsic rarity, the stamp issues of the war and post-war periods will be treasured for their associations.

ARMAGEDDON.

From the German occupation of Belgium to the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month, each stage in the progress of hostilities is perpetuated in stamps. Most significant of all are the series of former German possessions of Togo, Cameroons, Samoa, and New Britain overprinted in token of their seizure by the Allied forces; Turkish stamps superinscribed "Baghdad in British Occupation," and the special issue by the Egyptian Expeditionary Force for use in occupied enemy territory. These include such outstanding rarities as the unique one-mark stamp of Togo overprinted "Occupation Franco-Anglaise," valued today at £5,000; the three and five marks of the same series, worth £1,000 apiece; the one mark values of New Britain and Marshall Islands (from £100 to £200 each); the "one shilling" Samoa (£150); and the Baghdad series, which originally cost about 7s6d, now realizes close upon £400.

On the other side of the picture figure there are contemporary postage stamps of Germany bearing distinguishing imprints for circulation in occupied districts of Belgium, France, Russia, Poland and Rumania; those issued by Austrian military post-offices in Serbia, Galicia, Rumania, and Italy; Bulgar stamps used in Rumania and Turkish in Sinai. A notable series of war stamps was that provided for use by Indian Army post-offices in the field in the form of British Indian vignettes overprinted "I.E.F." (Indian Expeditionary Force). Of a like nature were stamps issued by the Nyasaland Force during operations in German East Africa.

Scarcely less interesting are the stamps created in those stirring days as a means of contributing small donations to war charities, or yet that other considerable group of war tax stamps which helped to provide the sinews of war. All have their place in this remarkable record.

AFTERMATH.

With the coming of peace and the application of principles of self-determination, a flood of new postage stamps was poured forth. New pages were added to the stamp album almost daily to receive the latest philatelic emissions from Czechoslovakia, Poland, Latvia, Yugoslavia, or the Ukraine, until, after innumerable essays, something approaching finality was achieved in the postal currency of the New Europe. Historically considered, these tentative stamp issues of Young Europe are amongst the most fascinating and instructive known to collectors.

The Treaty of Versailles gave rise to yet another absorbing series of stamp issues as a direct outcome of the plebiscites and mandates ordained by the Supreme Council. To this we owe the addition to the stamp-issuing countries of the world of Danzig, Memel, the Saar, Eupen and Malmédy, Nauru, Upper and Eastern Silesia, Marienwerder, and the rest. More recently the Russian renaissance, the French occupation of the Ruhr, and the collapse of the mark, the coup d'Etat at Memel, the independence of Transjordan, and the Italian annexation of Fiume, have all left their imprint upon the stamps of their respective nations.

The conquest of the air has called into being new and distinctive stamps for the flying post. In all the years 1914-24 have produced something like 14,000 separate varieties of postage stamps emanating from almost every country in the world.

NEW AND FORTHCOMING ISSUES.

Designs have been submitted for a new series of combined postage and revenue stamps for the Crown Colony of Barbados, where at present two separate sets are current; that destined for purely fiscal purposes being printed from the same plates as the postage stamps, but in doubly fugitive inks, and with the word "Revenue" overprinted. This will be the fourth change of design in the Barbadian stamps during the present reign. The original Georgian series of 1912 shows the King's head in a medallion in conjunction with the old Seal of the Colony, branches of sugar cane and coconut palms. It was superseded four years later by a reproduction of the newly engraved Colonial Seal, on a large scale, but in 1920 this, too, was temporarily displaced by a set of "Victory" stamps of symbolical design. The present issue, consisting of a modified version of the seal design, was first placed in circulation in November, 1921.

The use of special adhesive stamps for denoting deficiencies in postal prepayment is gradually extending to a number of the British possessions overseas. The latest to be provided with a set of postage due stamps is the Federated Malay States, whence have been dispatched denominations of 1c purple, 2c black, 8c red, 10c orange and 12c blue. Colour changes in current British Colonial stamps are foreshadowed as follows:—Bermuda 3d, from purple on yellow to blue; Federated Malay States 2c, from green to brown; Sierra Leone 1d, red to blue-purple, 1½d, orange to red; Straits Settlements 2c, green to brown.

The long-promised set of Siamese Air Post stamps is apparently within measurable distance of materialization. A design has been finally approved which represents a ferocious dragon with an eagle's head flying in space. It is executed in traverse oblong format with the inscription "Siam Air Mail," and value across the top and the same repeated in Siamese characters at the foot. The values will range from 2 satangs to 1 baht.

When the Government of the United States first established an administration in the leased territory of the Canal Zone (Panama), American postage stamps, overprinted "Canal Zone—Panama," were brought into use. The Republic of Panama took exception to this and accordingly subsequent stamp issues for the Zone have consisted of Panama types similarly distinguished. Now, by mutual agreement, a return has been made to the original procedure, and nine values of current United States postage stamps have been overprinted "Canal Zone" for use in that territory.

LITERARY STAMPS.

To the lengthening list of commemorative stamps with literary associations will shortly be added a series in honour of the tercentenary of the birth of the Portuguese poet, Luiz Camoens, author of the celebrated epic poem, "Os Lusíadas." The Camoens tercentenary stamps are to be placed on sale by the Portuguese Post Office in November, in 31 denominations, from 1 centavo to 20 escudos, and will embody seven pictorial subjects—viz., Camoens fighting against the Moors at Ceuta; the salvage of "Os Lusíadas" from shipwreck off Cambodia; contemporary portrait of Camoens; binding the first edition of "Os Lusíadas"; last moments of Camoens; Camoens's tomb; monument to Camoens at Macao. A single miniature of Camoens already figures upon certain postage stamps issued in Portugal in 1898, to mark the fourth centenary of Vasco da Gama, the navigator.

The centenary of the Conference of the Equator has just been celebrated in Brazil by the issue of a special 200 reis stamp, printed in four colours, and bearing the device of the revolutionary banner of 1824, with its motto "Religio—Independencia—Uniao—Liberdade," flanked by branches of sugar and cotton. Uruguay has seized upon a somewhat remarkable pretext for the creation of a set of three commemorative postage stamps in the victory of the Uruguayan football team at the recent Olympic Games. The series is to consist of the values 2 centesimos, 5c and 12c, which will remain on sale for a period of three days only.

Preparation of a definitive postage stamp issue for Syria in pictorial subjects is now well advanced, the work having been carried out in Paris by the heliogravure process. Meanwhile, a new type of overprint has been applied to the French postage stamps now current in the postal departments of both Syria and Lebanon, the superscription being rendered for the first time in Arabic as well as French.

Propaganda stamps, sold at a premium of 5 centesimi upon face value in aid of the Italian Colonial Institute, will shortly be introduced in the colonies of Libya, Eritrea, and Somalia.

ORGANIZED PHILATELY.

Many British philatelists will be among the exhibitors at important international stamp exhibitions to be held next month—at The Hague on September 6 to 17, and Christiania September 19 to 28. The Dutch exhibition coincides with the 40th anniversary of the Union of Dutch Philatelists, and will be located in the galleries of the Society Pulchri Studio. The secretary is M. E. Bonn, 7, Cornelis Speelmanstraat, The Hague. The first international philatelic exhibition to take place in Norway is to be personally opened by King Haakon, in the library of the University of Christiania; M. Rolf L. Berentzen, 6B, Kirkegatan, Christiania, is acting as secretary. International exhibitions of postage stamps are also being organized to take place in Paris in May, 1925, and New York in October, 1926.

The annual report of the Royal Philatelic Society, London, gives particulars of the awards of the Society's medals for the past year. The "Crawford" medal, for the most notable contribution to philatelic literature, goes to Colonel G. S. F. Napier, for his erudite study of the "Stamps of the 1843 issue of Brazil." Mr. B. Goodfellow receives the "Tapping" medal for his paper on the types of the 4 skill. stamp of Norway, 1863-66, whilst the "Tilleard" medal, for the best display given before the Royal Philatelic Society during the previous year, falls to an American philatelist, Mr. A. Lichtenstein, of New York City, who showed a notable collection of the early "Peace" issues of Canada.—London Times.

CONVENTION PUBLICITY.

Never before has a convention of the American Philatelic Society received newspaper treatment of so interesting, intelligent and liberal a kind as by the press of Detroit, whose enterprise is well reflected in its newspapers. Practically all of the big papers recognized the news value of the meeting but one paper shines forth resplendent, the good old Detroit Free Press, known the world over since the days of "M. Quad," the pen-name of Mr. Lewis, whose death, it happens, has just occurred in the east, where he went many years ago to a New York paper, at what was a fabulous salary at the time. When it is said that our old pal, W. C. Richards, who is a special writer on the Free Press and is no mean philatelist, himself reported the big story, from our point of view, the reason for the happy circumstance becomes evident. Mr. Richards paved the way for the convention with a feature article in the paper of Sunday, August 10th, dealing with the coming meeting, which reviewed Detroit in a philatelic sense in a setting of general stamp news. The article was illustrated by a portrait of President Heyerman. Each day thereafter Mr. Richards buckled to his task and sifted the chaff from the wheat in a way to command admiration. We believe that in presenting the continued story of Mr. Richards, we are at once recognizing the talent and great consideration of Mr. Richards and giving our readers a graphic illustration of how an able writer on a famous newspaper can present the theme that we are so close to, in a way to appeal to the public. The Free Press showed a picture of a dozen or so of the delegates. May Mr. Richards' collection of Holland and colonies increase and may the circulation of the Free Press boom.

PHILATELISTS HERE MONDAY.

Don't Give Sonny Any Thousand Dollar Bills This Week; He'll Buy Stamps.

Stamp collectors from all parts of the United States, a loquacious cavalcade of hobby riders, began arriving in Detroit Sunday for their annual convention at the Statler.

They have the philatelic complex. To most persons a stamp, when it has been used, is something to drop into the wastebasket. Not to these fellows. It is a thing to be sold and resold, cleaned, hinged, mounted in an album and "pointed to with pride," and become known as a "hard to get," a "fine copy," a "queer cancellation," and have friends "ah" over it.

No More Than a Goldfish.

In fact, after a stamp enters an album its privacy is done for. Strange men poke at it, count its perforations, hold it to the light and survey its watermark.

Somewhere on the page the specialist will write the name of the stamp's father, if you can call the engraver that, and somewhere else it will tell how common or exclusive it is by jotting down the numbers of copies printed.

Crowned heads find solace in their stamp albums. A golf player this week must mourn his lost opportunity. What do the trophies of leisure hours amount to? A little cup recording that he won the July handicap in Class B. If he had not taken to nibbicks he might be an authority on postal issues.

Max Ohlman, one of the best known philatelists of New York, was telling some of this in his room at the Statler Sunday. The convention will not open until Monday and will continue through Thursday, with an auction Tuesday as an unusual feature to Detroiters.

"Old stamps issued by cities are very valuable. The common ones," he said, "were issued by St. Louis, Providence and New York. New York has only one, a 5-cent black on bluish paper issued in 1845 and valued at $50. Post-office clerks used to sign these special stamps, but one of the series signed by the postmaster, R. M. H., is worth $1,000.

Others Worth $10,000.

"Two very valuable stamps were issued in Alexandria, Va., in 1845. The valuation is placed at $7,000 and $10,000. Congressman Ernest R. Ackerman, of Plainfield, N. J., has some of both issues.

"Baltimore issued two stamps on a thin strip of paper bearing the signature of James M. Buchanan in black ink. The 5-cent one is worth $800 and the 10-cent copy $8,000.

"This country decided to issue all new stamps at the start of the Civil War, but these issues were out only two weeks when it was decided to change the die. Consequently, these stamps, which originally sold from 3 to 12 cents, are now worth $25 for the 3-cent and $1,500 for the 12-cent. In 1869 the stamps of the United States were printed in two colors, and one sheet of each stamp, except the 90-cent, was printed upside down. The 15-cent stamp thus printed is worth today $3,000 unused, and $750 cancelled. The 24-cent stamp unused is worth $3,500 and cancelled $500. The 30-cent one will bring $4,000 unused and $1,750 used."

Lost Stamps as Ship Sank.

When the yacht of Colonel Edward H. Green, son of the late Hetty Green, sank recently, he lost part of a sheet of inverted 24-cent aeroplane stamps. The value of one of these is $750, but they cannot be bought because individual collectors have them stowed away. Green had paid $20,000 for the sheet of 100.

The moral of the story seems to be that if your child collects postage stamps

PHILATELISTS DISPLAY $1,000,000 IN STAMPS.

"Crowned Heads" of Hobby Dangle "Crown Jewels" at Convention.

The crowned heads of stamp collecting dangled before one another last night their crown jewels.

An exhibition of cancelled and unused postage stamps that probably took in every nation on the globe and had a philatelic value of more than $1,000,000 climaxed the first day of the American Philatelic Society convention at the Statler.

About every name of note in the hobby in this country was present—Phillips, millionaire dealer, of New York; Klein & Wolsieffer, of Philadelphia; Bartels, of New York; John A. Klemm, who made philatelic history a year ago by starting and winning litigation against a man who had sold him, for $65,000, some early Hawaiian stamps that a California judge and stamp experts considered counterfeits; Severn, editor of a publication which is the philatelist's bible; E. L. Taylor, in charge of the postage stamps of Canada at Ottawa; Kay, of Detroit; J. C. Morgenthau, T. B. Mason, of Cranford, N. J., famous for his collection of United States locals which were issued before this government began to print stamps; Diamond, of St. Louis, who has 200,000 Mexican stamps printed prior to 1883; Klemm, again, who was awarded a gold medal at the Vienna exposition for his collection of Philippines, being the only American to be singled out for the distinction; J. Kenneth, who does most of the buying for the world famous collection of Arthur Hind, of Utica, attending all the notable auctions abroad, and so on.

Noted Frenchman Here.

Came G. de Lachasse, of Avignon, France, at 74 years of age, who is in America as a sort of a memorial to his deceased wife. He is covering the ground they traveled here.

During the day, incidentally, a stamp collection was presented to Jackie Coogan, young film celebrity.

The night's exhibit contained numerous rarities and oddities. Probably the most unusual was a circular on which was a stamp of the City Dispatch Post of New York of the period when stamp-making was a private enterprise.

That is, one of the Post company's messengers would call and get your letter for a fee of seven cents. Two cents of this would go to the private company, which would affix a stamp to your letter. It would then deliver it to the post-office, pay the remaining five cents for an official government stamp, and the transaction was closed.

The circular on which appears the City Dispatch Post stamp and which belongs to L. B. Mason, contains on the reverse side an appeal to New York business houses for the favor of their business.

Dr. Babcock Has Display.

A remarkable collection of United States stamps on the old envelopes was shown by Dr. W. L. Babcock, superintendent of Grace Hospital.

It is internationally known and probably will be added to shortly, for Babcock is now in Europe digging for new treasure. Probably the prize of the volume is a 90-cent United States stamp of 1869, valued at $1,500.

Karl Koslowski, another Detroit, showed a novel assembly of the stamps of Latvia, and among them complete war maps with stamps printed on the backs and stamps printed on war money.

The $10,000 collection of Fred R. Schmalzriedt, Detroit attorney, which takes in United States issues in single copies, pairs, strips and blocks from 1847 to 1907, also received close attention. F. T. Norris exhibited a collection of the postage of Canada, which is said to be unequaled in this country or anywhere, and W. T. Livingston showed Falkland Islands and Seychelles.

Other Detroit men showing were: John Kay, Newfoundland and Great Britain; F. T. Norris, Newfoundland; Z. Dworkowski, Poland; J. A. Jungwirth, foreign covers dating back to the days when it required six months, as the postmarks showed, for a letter to travel from Haiti, for example, to the United States; Robert O. Meyer, German colonies; Henry Look, revenues; J. E. Scott, used blocks and larger pieces; William M. Swan, revenues; C. F. Heyerman, Boston Tea Party stamp, which was indirectly responsible for the American revolution, and metered mail; H. J. Kaufman, Harding cancellations; L. A. White, revenues; Herman W. Boers, Harding memorial stamps. C. H. Holden showed a one shilling stamp of Newfoundland among other things, cataloging $500.

Auction Tuesday Night.

The convention will have an auction Tuesday, following a trip to Bob L. the afternoon and a morning business session.

The American Stamp Dealers' Association, meeting in conjunction with the Philatelic Society, elected J. M. Bar of New York, president, and W. Slusser, Fort Hancock, N. J., secretary and treasurer, at its morning session. It is understood the Philatelic Society elect P. M. Wolsieffer, of Philadelphia, president.

FOUR STAMPS SOLD FOR $476.

Philatelists' Auction Gives Inkling Fortunes in Old Offices, Attics.

Inking of the vast, neglected for that are hidden away in dusty attic trunks and aged offices was given last night the Statler when American stamp-collectors paid thousands of dollars in the auction for unusual specimens of used and unused stamps that long ago passed out of issue.

The major piece—a block of four New York five-cent stamps issued in 1851 with extra stamps attached at the right of the upper right and upper left stamps making an irregular block of six—sold to John A. Klemm, New York, for $476.

Stiff Prices Rule.

Stiff prices ruled. A horizontal block of New Yorks on the envelope brought $146; a single copy, two pairs and a set of three of the three-cent United States stamps of 1865 on an envelope which had the cancellation, "Raritan and Delaware Bay railroad, July 26, 1867—Steamboat sold for $116; 30-cent United States stamps of 1853 on a fancy patriotic cover bearing the pictures of Lincoln and Johnson in medallions brought $75; 10-cent confederate stamp with Missouri cancellation sold for $130; Swiss stamps of Zurich, 1850, net $102; a block of four of the 10-cent green United States of the 1861 issue brought $216; a block of four of 90-cent stamp printed by the United States from 1871 to 1879, fetched $100 and Phillips, of New York, paid $100 a block of six of the unused Confederate stamps of 1861.

Prices for foreign issues were considerably lower than United States, except for a copy of a four-pence scarlet vermilion of Newfoundland, which brought $106; a mint block of eight of the five-cent blue of Nova Scotia, 1863, which sold for $61, and a copy of two-pence blue of Mauritius issued 1848 which netted $61.

Many $50 Stamps.

Stamps which brought close to $50 mark were numerous, and the shaded down to 75 cents for a block of four of Civil War revenues.

Some of the prices for late issues of United States held out encouragement.

HARDING PRECANCELS.
By N. R. HOOVER
aper on Harding Precancels read by Mr. er at the S.P.A. Convention on August 24. There are some striking statements and valuable tips on present day values. (O. W.)

verybody will concede that Harding ancels were the philatelic sensation 1923-24.
is not easy to give the reason for the ement that developed over this ch of stamp-collecting. It is doubt- if it was due to any artificial stimulus e man or group of men. We know has been done at times in the past other specialties. Netherlands No. d Norway No. 1 have been played and successfully cornered to the ex- of attracting the interest of a wid- circle of philatelists. Spain No. 1 ecently gotten its current sale price o catalog through persistent, cond- interest in it. Some collectors that the excitement over Danzig of due more to manipulation than to tual shortage.

ne of the reasons for the interest in issues can be ascribed to the initial given to Harding precancels. e was no corner of any particular ings at first.
e novelty of the color of this stamp, ement attached to the untimely of ex-President Harding, and the hat there was but one stamp in the conspired to focus attention on it. it must be acknowledged there is no h of philately which has in it a ier, more enterprising body of ers than those who concentrate their ies on precancels.

e monthlies and weeklies of Stamp- last Fall began to show increasing nces to Harding precancels. Early e winter want ads for their ex- e started. We all recall how in vinter the sales ads started.
e excitement over peak prices car- on for about two months, and since e have noted a gradual decline to er and more stable price. This de- does not indicate a drop in interest n intrinsic decline in actual value. peculative "water" has been squeez- f certain items in Harding precan- d the saner quotations which are ring now probably reflect a reason- safe condition.

n not prepared to say, however, that uch reduced present day values are rrect ones. We can understand elphia, Pa., normal electro selling v as 15 cents because it is generally i that many of them were issued ith the quantities still on the mar- will probably be many months be- scarcity of this stamp shows itself. ame goes for Houston, Texas.

METROPOLITAN STAMP CO., 7 WEST 42 STREET, NEW YORK CITY

in heeding instructions from Washington and issued Harding Precancels only upon a legitimate order from a regular permit holder. Such cities are going to be popular as the years go by. The inverted San Francisco, believed to have been unintentionally printed upside down, is going to be worth more than 75 cents each because Frisco Hardings are all gone, no more are there to be printed and what are not now will have to suffice. Kansas City 10x10 rotary, while probably put out in considerable quantities, is now obsolete and what were issued will be all we will have. New York City three line electro (not hand stamp) is bound to be in big demand as the years go by because no postmaster was more strict in watching these 2 cent blacks than Postmaster Morgan. The New York City Post Office claims to have issued only eight Harding permits for the electro precancel, all of them to known permit holders who presumably used them immediately on mail.

These examples of various conditions show the elusive possibilities that exist in the Harding precancels. Except in the cases of those who paid big prices for Hardings that, it developed, were pure fakes and I am sorry to say these are known to exist, I doubt if anybody has really paid more than what Hardings will in time prove to be worth.

It has been recently stated that a total of 2,607 varieties of Harding precancels has been tabulated. These cover about 2,400 Post Offices. There are at least 50 Harding precancels that are of questionable origin.

All of us would be interested in knowing which are scarce at the present time, as indicative of which would be desirable stamps to acquire if chance threw them our way. A conservative list would cover the following as being scarce now:

San Francisco, Cal., inverted; Des Moines, electro rotary normal; Des Moines, electro rotary inverted; Florence, Ala., inverted; Torrington, Ct. electro; Galya, Ill.; New Albany, Ind., inverted; Waterloo, Ia., electro rotary; Boston, Mass., electro; Potosky, Mich.; New York City, three line electro, Mott, N. D.; Farrell, Pa.; Philadelphia, Pa., electro inverted; Philadelphia, Pa., electro double; Denton, Texas, normal, blue ink; Denton, Texas, inverted, blue ink, and Waco, Texas, hand stamp.

As to what the above are worth retail today, it is difficult to say. Some of them have been advertised as low as 20c each while at least three are difficult to get at $3.00 each.

The next list will consist of Harding precancels which should bring at least $1.00 each today based upon their known supply:

Fort Smith, Ark.; Santa Rosa, Calif., rotary; S. San Francisco, Calif., double; S. San Francisco, Calif., invert; Trinidad, Col., electro; Canaan, Ct., rotary; Lakeville, Ct., normal; Lakeville, Ct., invert; Pocotello, Idaho, small type; Kankakee, Ill., double; Boone, Ia., electro invert; Britt, Ia., electro invert; Elyria, O., invert; Waco, Tex., electro; Richmond, Va.; Milwaukee, Wis., rotary; Grinnel, Ia., rotary; Muscatine, Ia., rotary; Fort Scott, Kan., invert; Althal, Mass., double; Salem, Mass., electro; Holland, Mich., rotary; New York City, three line electro; Albert Lea, Minn.; Cloquet, Mo., rotary; Crawford, Mo., rotary; Kansas City, Mo., rotary; Devils Lake, N. D., up; Denton, Texas, blue invert; Charleston, W. Va., electro, and Weston, W. Va.

I could name some that are worth $5.00 each today, but will not for obvious reasons.

Here is a limited list of known speculative Hardings on which one may have to gamble when making an investment in them:

Van Buren, Ark., red ink; Forest City, Ia.; Anamosa, Ia.; New York City, hand stamp; Denver, Colo., all except the normal and invert.

The appeal in Harding precancels seems to have intrigued collectors of all types. Without a doubt it has been responsible for hundreds of regular stamp collectors taking an interest in precancels who previously had treated this branch of Philately with scant courtesy. Those interested in promoting precancels report that the sport has received an extraordinary impetus since the Hardings came on the market. The chief collectors of Harding precancels in the country are C. A. Mees, of North Carolina, L. R. Saunders, of Iowa, A. E. Gamber, of North Dakota, H. S. Wheeler of Mass., G. W. Linn, of Ohio, J. L. Sanford, of New Hampshire, Harry Robson, of Iowa, A. C. Holly, of Iowa, and Adolph Gunesch of Illinois.

Harding precancels are a good investment. My advice is to hang on to what you have and acquire what others you are able to at the lowest prices possible. There is a widespread interest in them and as time passes all legitimate issues will simply have to appreciate in value because the Harding stamp itself has disappeared from the large cities and is available now only in small hamlets where precancels are not used and today is practically through as a possible source of additional supplies.

My prediction is that five years from now a collection of 1,000 Harding precancels which may cost you $250.00 to get together at present will then be worth four times as much. They are an excellent investment.

EDITORIAL.

The convention of the American Philatelic Society held in Detroit, August 12th to 16th inclusive, was an occasion marked by a judicious admixture of business and pleasure. Its sessions, measured in terms of accomplishment, were satisfactory, and while it was remarked that the business meetings were somewhat curtailed, it was apparent that little time was lost in discursive discussion. However, one member alleged that he would have brought a subject or two to the attention of the body, if it were not that he feared that by doing so he would consume time that was demanded by the entertainments. In this connection it was supposed that a resolution would be presented asking that convention cities in the future not emphasize the social entertainment in a manner that would necessitate that the business meetings be interfered with in any way. While the attentions that the members of a convention city show the delegates are always appreciated, yet the business of the meeting has precedence. However, no resolution of the kind was handed to the committee on resolutions and none originated in the committee itself.

At the Tuesday morning meeting, Mr. Charles J. Phillips in an interesting address held the attention of the members while he told of the plans already under way for the great international exhibition in New York in 1926. It was apparent that the forthcoming event is to be America's crowning achievement, from Mr. Phillips' outline of the scheme of procedure. The work is to be projected on a scale of magnitude that must gain for our pursuit a recognition in all quarters. An idea of the scope of the project may be gained from the statement that a floor in one of the largest exhibition buildings in New York has been engaged for the display. The financial foundation of the great show will be a firm one and we are certain that all of our collectors will have a pride in aiding the gentleman having the work of active preparation for the exhibition in hand, by a liberal support. When Philadelphia decided that New York rather than it was the logical place for the international event, the Association for Stamp Exhibitions, Inc., New York, N. Y., which was founded in 1912, undertook the fulfillment of the contract. It is as little as we can do to identify ourselves with the great occasion by sending in our subscription for membership in the association with two dollars for one year or six dollars for the years 1924, 1925 and 1926.

* * *

The appropriation of one thousand dollars that was voted for publicity purposes is the culmination of the determination of Mr. H. A. Diamant to submit the case of philately to the people. In his support of the subject, into which he has flung himself wholeheartedly, he brought many compelling points to bear in favor of the publicity suggestions that he has developed; and the feeling that he displayed in explanation of his aims brought a response from the members. It is needless to say that the tentative plans are ambitious in their sweep and we have confidence that the investment will be a good one. The wording of the resolution follows: "Resolved, That a committee on publicity be appointed by the president and that an appropriation of one thousand dollars be made to carry out a publicity campaign under the auspices of the American Philatelic Society." Thus it will be seen that the definiteness of the resolution admits of no alternative but to vote the money from one of the funds, all of which, with the exception of the general fund, are of healthy size. In our opinion, the time has come to put to a test the question of general publicity; and if it is found that the results are not commensurate with the effort and money expended, the outlay may well be charged to experience. However, we anticipate a favorable verdict, as the publicity that will be sought will not alone be through the customary channels of print but by means of radio and other advanced methods. The ready acquiescence of the members to the proposal is indicative of the belief that directed publicity may now be put on trial and that it is fitting that the American Philatelic Society be placed on record as sponsoring the idea. As for details that have been discussed in connection with the publicity sweep, they will become public later but the subject has engrossed the attention of a few of the members for some time and they are prolific of suggestions that cover a wide range of endeavor.

There were a number of resolutions that while of minor importance are not without interest. It was resolved that the society request the post-office authorities at Washington to issue an order providing for the placing the date of receipt and delivery of all mail matter carried by air post, inasmuch as such a record will educate the public to an understanding of the advantageous use of such transportation. It was felt that the suggestion would be helpful in the campaign of the department to make popular the air mail service, although it was said that the authorities had under consideration the postmarking as outlined. The suggestion that the stamps of Canal Zone and the Philippines be sold at the Washington agency was not pressed, if we remember rightly, as it was pointed out by Mr. Ward that an action of the kind would necessitate a bookkeeping change that might not be easily made.

* * *

The adoption of a resolution that the American Philatelic Society disclaim any responsibility for damages or losses of any kind incurred in connection with auction sales, bourse, entertainment or any other affair or function held in conjunction with the annual convention was based no doubt upon the unsatisfactory outcome of the auction sale held at the convention the year previously. Some of the members whose stamps were sold are still awaiting their money, although it is said that payment of the claims is proceeding. The situation is intolerable in some respects but it was shown that the time was not propitious for discussing any question of moral responsibility on the part of the society. By passing the foregoing resolution, the organization is in a position to disclaim liability under the contingencies mentioned and is placed so as to judge dispassionately upon cases in which it may be involved in a moral sense. In the report of the board of vice-presidents, the procedure in the case resulting from the auction at the convention last year was described and we suppose that any discussion here is out of bounds. Suffice it to say that the safeguards surrounding the Detroit auction and others that may be held at future conventions are such as to ensure a proper accounting.

* * *

The report of the committee on by-laws disclosed the fact that the by-laws of the society which as a governing code were pronounced almost flawless, in years gone by, have outlived their usefulness. It is apparent that a new set of rules is necessary and a committee will proceed to scrutinize them in the light of the necessities of today and make wholesale changes. Altered conditions, due in great part to the unparalleled growth of the society have made some of the provisions of the by-laws antiquated and these factors, taken in view of the material wealth of the American Philatelic Society make it incumbent upon the present members to fortify the financial position of the society and equalize power in a way to avoid future entanglement. Organizations must keep step with the developments of years, and the present by-laws of the society, admirable and watertight as they were in the past, must be strengthened, in order to cope with newer problems. Aside from any philatelic aspects, the society is now a financial institution that needs a management whose powers should be set forth explicitly in the code of laws by which the society is governed.

BRIDGER & KAY, Ltd.

In one respect, the convention was subject to comment and that was that it doubtful whether a third of all the members entitled to vote were represented. At least the figures were close and two thirds of those who might vote on amendment would have to be one-third of the total membership in order to legalize any action of the kind. Notwithstanding the admitted interest of members in their organization this condition prevailed. Whether the reason the showing was due to the lack of political interest in the election or the absence of any issue known beforehand on which there might be a division of opinion is not be known with certainty but something may be said without fear of contradiction. All the members should be represented at the convention in person or by proxy, regardless of how they vote or what instructions they may give their proxies. This statement is self-evident and if the seeming lack of interest just shown was typical of the feeling of the members generally, a danger signal is hoisted. We prefer to believe that the case is exceptional and not be explained on the score of carelessness and not apathy. At least, those who have been known to solicit proxies saying that in doing so they are actuated to some extent in getting out a working representation at the convention have another arrow for their quiver, in the light of the Detroit convention.

The selection of the place of the next convention gave some of the members cause for pause. The only real contention was Los Angeles and the absence of other nominations was due to several reasons. It is true that several cities were nominated from the floor by friends of the society who delight in entertaining members, but outside of Los Angeles preliminary campaigns were launched. The committee, aware that some opposition existed to Los Angeles, solely on account of its distance from the center of population, referred the question of choice to the convention; and after champions of the different cities had their innings, a proxy vote was called for. After it was seen that the vote favoring Los Angeles, the motion to make that city the unanimous selection was carried. One of the members called that at the convention held a year or the year before, it was tacitly agreed that the far west be given date this year if it desired it, as 1926 allotted to the city of the exhibition which at first was supposed to be Philadelphia, but which is now known to be New York. Behind all the thoughts connection with the convention is the

DANZIG REARRANGED

The Advance Sheets of the 1925 Catalogue show such remarkable increases in the prices of most of the Danzig stamps, that any collectors will no doubt be greatly surprised. To us, it was quite evident for some time that these changes would come, because we have been familiar with wholesale market prices which in several instances were 2-3 times that of Scott's 1924 prices. Knowing that a readjustment of prices was inevitable, we have been for many months accumulating a fine stock of Danzig, which has now been rearranged and priced on the basis of the 1925 Catalogue and is now available under our successful system of INTENSIVE APPROVAL SERVICE, in envelopes marked 1/2c, 1c, etc.

In our opinion—a number of stamps still underpriced by Scott and as in 7 cases they are good property, we can only recommend that you apply for an approval selection of Danzig.

YONKERS EXCHANGE, YONKERS, N. Y.

unremitting work and no little financial support are required to provide entertainment for some hundreds of visitors. The task is becoming one that tests the abilities and resources of any philatelic community and already a drift has begun to give more time to the convention sessions and less time to the pleasures of social kind, in the remarks of those who attend the annual meetings usually.

For months before the convention the Detroit members worked to arrange a program that would have a general appeal and when it is said that they planned a schedule that was carried out successfully, the words are said with conviction. An individual as well as a collective effort, the Detroit members were the soul of hospitality and they were untiring in responding to the wishes and wants of their visitors. Dr. W. L. Babcock, the chairman of the committee on arrangements, under the necessity of being abroad at the time when he wished that he could be in Detroit; and it is needless to say that his presence was missed. Herman W. Boers, publicity, was one of the most active working units imaginable, and through his enterprise many thousands of publicity before and during the convention were secured. Dr. H. H. Hoskins, secretary of the Michigan Stamp Club, was always available and was unceasing in his attentions. Mr. A. C. Hutchinson, who had the enjoyment in charge, discharged his responsibilities in a way to contribute to general good feeling. John Kay, known to so many of the old members most kindly in his hospitality while T. Livingstone was his cordial self made many of us feel indebted to him by his courtesies. Henry M. Look kept busy with his duties in connection with hotel arrangements and the quiet and Fred Schmalzreidt had his days full with the exhibition. J. E. White, finance and L. A. White who had the revision of the registration were important factors in the success of the convention and deserve a place in the song of remembrance. J. A. Jungwirth and H. J. Kaufmann had a good share of responsibility which they carried well and as for General Coolidge, his attentions were appreciated particularly by his cronies who after having seen him at home, amidst the philatelic atmosphere of his study have a picture that will not be erased from the mental tablets. Detroit did well and maintained the high plane that it established at previous conventions of the A. P. S.

Now that the society is well over the three thousand mark in membership, with every sail set for a good voyage, the decision that quality is to be placed before quantity is a wise one. Each year there are expulsions and in the reports of some of the officers references are made to weak sisters. With the present rate of increase in membership assured for some time to come, it is desirable that applications be subjected to close scrutiny. While we suppose that perfection in membership as a whole will never be attained, the idea is to prevent the one whose reputation is questionable from allying himself with a body whose standards of philatelic conduct are high. For one thing the interchange of information concerning collectors makes it easier now than formerly to separate the unfit from the healthy body and it is not long nowadays, in comparison with the somewhat free and easy methods that prevailed in the past, before the delinquent is under suspicion; and when circumstances justify, he is ostracized.

The Bi-Monthly Journal

A house organ with an inimitable style and charm, published every two months. Each issue consists of from 32 to 43 pages, every one containing a formidable array of unusual offerings in medium and scarce sets, packets and special collections, dealers' stocks, single stamps, philatelic supplies, etc., etc.

Albert C. Munson, 412 Broadway, Houston, Texas, writes:
"I enjoy the Bi-Monthly as much as MEKEEL'S; there is no other paper, house organ, journal or circular of any kind wherein one can find such extraordinarily good stock—and at such reasonable prices."

C. A. Ralston, 164 Vaughn St., Waterloo, Iowa, says:
"I am paying subscription charges for two large house organs, but would rather get along without both of them than to lose yours. If necessary, I know that I could pay a substantial subscription to the Bi-Monthly and save all of it on stamps offered in a single issue."

The Bi-Monthly Journal is a distinctive publication and absolutely free to patrons. You can't afford to be without it!

veloped from the recommendation of Mr. Weiss that the inexperienced or temporary dealer be discouraged by a resolution to be sent to philatelic publishers; and the subject was enlarged to the extent that the question of wholesale offers in publications designed for collectors was argued. While it was recognized that abuses exist, due to the course now pursued, no definite action was taken. However, the discussion will be resumed later, no doubt, when some equitable means may be adopted looking for relief. The report of the stamp expert, Mr. Klein, showed that he had an active season and the general warning was given that dealers should buy their new issues from dealers of established reputation as with the increasing number of new issues, the authority of some of which is debatable, great care is necessary in passing judgment. Suspected sources were named and the statement was made that our common two cent stamp had been counterfeited at Toledo, Ohio, to defraud the government. Plans were discussed for drawing the lines closer around frauds generally and it is expected that in the coming fiscal year a revised list of names on the pages of the black book will be published which will be kept up to date thereafter by supplementary lists. The secretary emphasized the need for the existence of the association and proved that the present status of the organization is such as to merit recognition on the score of service to the members. We quote the conclusion that he has reached: "It seems clear, then, that our mission as A. S. D. A. members is to support this organization for the lasting benefit of Philately—an organization whose business integrity cannot be questioned, and an organization whose ideals can never be lowered by the ulterior actions of a possible few who may sojourn with us for a while."

A proposal to hold conventions in the future, apart from the A. P. S. period, was dismissed as it was thought that any action based on this suggestion was premature. Mr. Phillips gave an interesting account of the plans and preparations already under way for the New York international exhibition of 1926 and the support of the association was extended. Proxies to the number of seventy-six were received and this number, with the members present, made a good showing. The convention picture was taken after the morning session and in this connection it should be said that an afternoon session was made necessary in order that the business coming before the convention could properly be disposed of. All in all, the meetings indicated that the probationary period of the association has passed and that it is now a going corporation whose influence will be augmented with the lengthening of the membership roll.

50c Postage Due, perforated 11, O. G.

One stamp that has been elusive for many months is the 30c Postage Due, perforated 10, watermarked, Scott's No. 2263b, which they list in the 1925 advance sheets at $2.00 each. I have never had a stock of this variety, but was able to pick up a few in Detroit and now offer fine mint copies at $1.25 each, block of four at $5.00, and a top plate block of six at $8.00. Only one plate block is available. The stamp is out of issue, it has always been scarce, and there is not much likelihood of any quantities coming upon the market.

At the same time I obtained a few of the 50c, perforated 11, Scott's No. 2273, cataloging at $1.00, and offer a few of these at 80c each, or $3.25 a block of four. Like the 30c, these are mint O. G. and in fine condition.

If you have not obtained the 2c Postage Due, perf. 11, in the very deep lake shade, I can furnish this at 5c per stamp, or 20c per block.

Always in the market to buy anything fine in United States postage stamps. Top notch prices paid for top notch things.

Detroit Convention Auction Sale

On Tuesday, August 12th, the second evening of the American Philatelic Society Convention, Mr. B. L. Voorhees sold a very attractive lot of choice stamps including some very unusual United States items.

Possibly the rarest lot in the sale was lot number 64, an irregular block of six of the 5c black New York on the entire cover. While the piece was in very poor shape, this is the nearest approach to a block known, for heretofore an irregular block of three which was in the Gibson collection was the best that a block collector could obtain. All of the stamps were defective and the lot sold at $476.

A copy of the 3c 1851 used on the day of issue, July 1, 1851, beautifully tied to the cover; brought $55, a cover of the same stamp with the well known New York, 1853 year date cancellation found a new owner at $20.50, while $52 was paid for a copy of the 3c orange brown on cover cancelled, "Troy & New York Steam Boat" in addition to "2 cts" in double circle. A cracked plate copy lightly pen cancelled on a neat cover brought $6.50.

A copy of the 3c 1857 cracked plate, type I, sold at $8, although the perfs. were somewhat trimmed. A single, two pairs and a strip of three, all on neat cover, of the 3c 1861, each stamp cancelled "R.&D.B.R.R.—July 26 1867—Steamboat" in circle, a cancellation used by the Raritan and Delaware Bay Railroad found a new owner at $116.

A 30c 1857 on patriotic cover, used from Cleveland to Paris, changed hands at full catalog price, namely $75. A block of the 3c 1869 on cover sold at $25, while railroad cancellations on our early issues sold from $2.50 to $20 each, the latter price being paid for a "Raleigh & Gaston R. R." in blue on a 3c 1851. An "East Tennessee & Va. R. R." on the same stamp sold at $10, while a "Concord & Montreal R. R." brought $18.

The three vertical rows reconstructed from the left pane of plate III of the 3c 1851 sold at $51. The 5c stamp varied from $8.50 to $52, in accordance with condition. A copy of the 1c 1857, showing the big crack in nice condition, although centered north, sold for $50. A magnificent vertical pair of the 30c in mint condition brought the extraordinary price of $98. A block of four, pen cancelled, of the 10c August sold for $216. A block of the 6c 1869 without gum, and badly centered, sold for $51. A perfection block of the 90c 1873 changed hands at $101, while a cancelled block of the 5c Taylor on hard paper sold at $17. A block of the 1c surface print, imperf. vertically between, sold at $37. Pre-cancels were not in very great demand for a lot of three hundred varieties of the 2c Harding valued at $150 brought $26. A collection of ninety-nine varieties, all in pairs, valued at $125, sold at $12, while $25 was paid for ninety-two fine blocks of four, which the owner claimed were worth $225.

Department stamps on the entire cover as usual were much in demand and $18 was paid for a horizontal strip of three of the 1c Post Office, used on a large official cover.

In the way of Confederates $100 was paid for a fine block of six of the 10c 1861, while $28 was paid for a mint block of forty of the 2c 1863. A fine use copy of the 10c outer lines with tow cancellation sold at $66, while a copy of the same stamp showing the line on a four sides, nicely tied to a cover with Mobile cancellation, brought $130. As whole, fine things brought fine prices, and where items were described as perfection, catalog price seemed to make little difference.

2c, Issue of 1894-1895.

Mr. A. H. Zimmerman, a collector of U. S. stamps since 1883, writes me that he has examined thirty-five thousand of the 2c issue of 1894-1895, and in this lot has found one copy with the right triangle blank. I have not seen the stamp in question hence, cannot advise as to whether the defect is a plate defect or defect in printing. The latter is possible the case, for had there been a defect in the plate of such importance, we no doubt would have discovered the variety before this time.

AFGHANISTAN.—A correspondent states that the new stamp recently listed was issued to commemorate the sixth anniversary of the reign of the Amir Amanullah. The wording at top significance "Postage for the land bestowed by God and at foot, "6th Year of the Reign of Perseverance." The stamps are said to have been on sale for only one day, and none were sent to the Afghan P. O. in Peshawar.—Stanley Gibbons Monthly Journal.

BELGIUM.—Mr. Henry Hooreman sends us the 75c, in the design of Scott A59, in a light blue shade.

Our correspondent also adds a copy of the 2fr parcel post stamp that has just been placed on sale in an olive brown color.

BRITISH SOLOMON ISLANDS.—We have received from Mr. R. Roberts the 1½ red, a new value on script watermarked paper. Also a 2s6d in a new shade, the time the color is olive grey on pale blue multiple CA watermark.

CEYLON.—A Ceylon correspondent Mr. W. C. Pritchett, kindly sends us the appended cutting from the Ceylon Morning Leader of June 30th:—

"It has been brought to the notice of the postal authorities that great inconvenience is being caused by the want of a 1,000 rupee stamp. As a result of these representations the Postmaster General has decided to issue a 1,000 rupee stamp which will resemble the 10 rupee stamp in colour—namely, red. The stamp will be issued shortly to the public.

"The new 12c stamp will also be issued shortly."

The reference to the colour of the existing 10 rupees stamp is, of course, not correct; actually this value is in purple and black on red paper.—Stanley Gibbons Collecting.

COLOMBIA.—Mr. A. A. Wassersche has forwarded to us a cover mailed in this country with a 3c blue of the current issue used for payment of postage and with another stamp of a ½c red denomination that he advises is used for improvement of government works—something similar. At the top of the stamp is the two line inscription "Comite de Ornato Ymejoras Publicas" and the base below the value "Por Barrera quilla."

CONGO.—We have received from Mr. Henry Hooreman a 20c in a new shade the color of this issue being olive green.

HEJAZ.—Our Cairo Correspondent, Mr. Charles Julien Hunt, informs us that he has found different values of the overprinted to commemorate the Institution of the Caliph in black. The number of sets printed is not known, but is presumed two printings were made at least of some values. The Gold Dust so badly applied that it is sufficient to catch a stamp to get gilt figures!—Stamp Collecting.

MONACO.—Mr. Henry Hooreman advises of the appearance of the following visionals: 45 on 50c, 75 on 1fr yellow 185 on 5fr dark green. All are of 1891-94 type, and the surcharge is in ink.

PERU.—Mr. M. Buenano sends us a copy of a decree authorising the issue of a new set of stamps, printed by the American Bank Note Co. The values, subjects, and quantities are as follows:—
Rivadeneira, 100,000
Mariano Melgar, 800,000
Iturrigui, 100,000
A. B. Leguia, 8,000,000
J. Olaya, 800,000
Bellido, 200,000
P. Saco, 150,000
J. Leguia, 20,000
The gentlemen thus honoured by postal are patriots who have in one way or another served the cause of national independence.—Stanley Gibbons Monthly Catalogue.

ROMANIA.—Mr. A. Popescu tells us that the 3 and 6 lei Dues on greenish paper, listed recently, have been withdrawn from circulation, only 116,000 of them being actually issued. They are worth about three times face value in Romania.—Stanley Gibbons Monthly Catalogue.

RUSSIA.—Our Moscow correspondent tells us a 2 roubles value in the Work's head type, rose and green, perf. We are informed that the 5kop on 3les (blue) and 15kop on 1 rouble (strut) aerial adhesives, foreshadowed in our issue for April 19th last, appeared six weeks ago, and that the quantified surcharges comprise 450,000 of the 5kop and 950,000 of the latter. Of the 15kop on 5r and 20kop on 10r, the quantities are 450,000 and 1,450,000 respectively.—Stamp Collecting.

THE ASSOCIATION FOR STAMP EXHIBITION, INC., NEW YORK, N. Y.

An Association formed for the purpose of financing and administering International Stamp Exhibitions in New York City. J. C. Morgenthau, Pres.; A. E. Owen, Vice-Pres.; John A. Klemann, Sec., 116 Nassau St., New York, N. Y.; T. E. Steinway, Treas., 109 E. 14th St., New York, N. Y.

Doubtless a great many of our brother Philatelists are unaware of the existence of this Association which was formed in 1912 for the purpose of administering the business affairs of the Stamp Exhibition held in New York in 1913. It is an Incorporated Society and thus able to sign contracts, negotiate leases, etc., for the Exhibition. It has been kept alive by a few members who have paid dues since 1913, with the idea that if another International Stamp Exhibition should be projected at some future time, the Association would be ready to function in taking over the business affairs of the exhibition.

As it has been decided and announced in the Philatelic Press that there will be an International Stamp Exhibition in October, 1926, the time has arrived for the Association to come to life in earnest and take over the management of the forthcoming Exhibition.

During the years that there were no exhibitions held in this country the Association lent its support and financial aid to recent exhibitions which were held in other parts of the world. The Association contributed liberally to the recent exhibitions held in London, Brussels and Vienna.

At a recent joint meeting of the Association and the Collectors Club of New York, when the projected exhibition was decided upon, it was deemed advisable by the President, Mr. J. C. Morgenthau, that the membership of the Association be greatly enlarged with a view toward interesting every stamp collector in the United States of America to further and support the coming exhibition by becoming a member now of the Association for Stamp Exhibition. To this end we solicit you herewith to become a member at once. The dues are $2 a year. Herewith you will find an application blank which please fill out and mail without delay to the Treasurer, Theodore E. Steinway, 109 East 14th Street, New York, N. Y., in the addressed envelope that accompanies the blank. Surely no collector who has the interest of Philately at heart can refuse to support our cause for the modest sum of $2 a year.

So send along your $2, or, better still, send $6 for the years 1924, 1925 and 1926, which will cover your membership for the exhibition period.

OUR BOOK REVIEW.

By PHILIP H. WARD, Jr.

"United States Envelopes" published by J. M. Bartels Co., 116 Nassau St., New York. Price $1.00. At the Detroit Convention, Mr. Bartels handed me for review a copy of his new publication entitled "United States Envelopes," being a priced catalog of the entire 20th century envelope issues from 1901 to 1924 inclusive. Every collector interested in envelopes, and those who are likely to have varieties pass through their hands and desire to know their value should have a copy of this little forty-page booklet at hand.

We are glad to see that the arrangement is now such that one can readily collect the main cut square varieties and eliminate the watermarks by simply using a catalog number. Heretofore every envelope was given a separate number but under the present arrangement, each variety is given a separate number with the watermarks designated by means of a letter.

The booklet lists and describes the knives, illustrates all of the watermarks and gives a detailed description of all dies. In addition, practically everything is priced and one glancing over these pages will be surprised to find that certain envelopes which are very common cut square are really rare in certain sizes.

The 1920 revalued varieties are well illustrated and this paragraph alone is worth the cost of the booklet, namely, $1.00. Prices are patterned somewhat after Scott's figures but we understand from Mr. Bartels that in the case of his publication, the quotations are net. An added feature is information regarding the number known of certain of these scarcer varieties.

Counterfeiter of Stamps Had Banked $450,000

CHICAGO—Frank Juschinsky, alleged head of a counterfeit strip stamp and fake whisky label ring, arrested Monday night, has made $450,000 through his operations in three years, according to detectives, who said he has confessed. He was arrested when he attempted to withdraw $450,000 which federal officers said they have traced to a dozen banks here.

NEW YORK, May 16—Junius Gutttag, of this city, has a cent that he values at $10,000. "It is the first coin to bear the letters U. S.," says Mr. Gutttag, "the first coin upon which the decimal system was based. The date of it is 1783. It is the size of a dime and is made of silver, worth about three cents." Howland Wood, curator of the American Numismatic Society confirms Mr. Gutttag's opinion of the rarity of the coin.

PURELY PERSONAL.

D. C. Hammatt of Topeka, Kansas, showed his albums replete with examples of interesting early U. S., including covers with unusual cancellations, such as ship, railroad and steamboat. Mr. Hammatt is a student of Americana in a philatelic sense and his holdings would compel the attention of anyone with half an eye for historic suggestions, combined with philately.

W. H. Schaffner, Marion, Ohio, renewed acquaintances that he has made during a long collecting career and he found himself following closely the progress of the convention and attendant pleasures with enthusiasm. His reminiscences are of much interest and his large collection is likewise, as it shows the effect of consistent application to stamp ideals.

L. T. Brodstone, Superior, Nebraska, publisher of the West, made his appearance on the scene at the right moment and he soon was the center of a knot of friends who listened to his rapid-fire comments with open ear. Mr. Brodstone is unchanging and the hope is expressed that the years will continue to deal lightly with him, in order that he may illuminate this vale of tears with his infectious smile.

A. W. Filstrup, Benton Harbor, Michigan, is one of the king-pins of philately whose stamps, if placed end to end, would extend from Ada, Ohio, to Zada, West Virginia, even though he collects U. S. principally. His early U. S. represent a succession of thrills and those who lingered over his treasures know why Benton Harbor is in large red letters on the philatelic map. Each year his albums become bigger and better.

Old Doc Hennan, Chicago, whose Holland and colonies beat the Dutch found time to steal away to the convention even though the sick and suffering could not countenance his absence. Having tasted blood at previous conventions, he was not to be withheld from repeating his experiences and he kicked up a good bit of dust at Detroit.

Ralph H. Ellers, St. Louis, loaned his aldermanic presence to the meeting and his friends rallied to his support in a cheering manner, showing that he is unanimously elected to a high place in the estimation of his philatelic constituents. When through Mr. Diamant's efforts the collectors in St. Louis are multiplied many times, we shall see that this earnest collector of penny blacks is nominated for mayor of his fair city.

William A. Johnson, Washington, had as many friends as a five cent New York at the festivities, and it is needless to say that he contributed to the good cheer that abounded. As a general collector, he is an exemplar of a grand old type of collector and there is none but who would do him reverence. He typifies radiant philately and is one of the best philatelic illustrations that could be offered.

Father Kaib, St. Vincent Abbey, Beatty, Pa., was in attendance we are pleased to say and we had the privilege of hearing some interesting philatelic reminiscences from this worthy man and true philatelist. Father Kaib's record for convention loyalty is a good one and may it never be otherwise, as it is good to have him among us.

Jno. J. Spencer, Saginaw, Michigan, who has many active years in philately to his credit, was a welcome addition to the ranks of delegates, and he brought with him his book of line varieties on U. S. stamps that furnished the material for his article in the American Philatelist on them. Mr. Spencer is working in an interesting field and is placing on record details that ordinarily might escape many of us.

Henry Seagrave, Pontiac, Michigan, who was treasurer of the American Philatelic Society before many of its present members were born circulated about the meetings. Mr. Seagrave is known for his great affection for proofs and essays, especially of our own country, and has many fine collections of them. Moreover, Mr. Seagrave has many stories to tell about persons and places in philately, as he has kept his weather eye open for many years. A cover that was sent to Mr. Seagrave while he was treasurer, evidently by a member who had registered the amount of his dues to him that bore a strip of four of the three cent vermilion, was sold at the convention for something over forty dollars we are told—but Mr. Seagrave was not the seller.

Reverend Clarence C. Silvester, All Hallows Rectory, Wyncote, Pa., was greeted on all sides and while the occasion did not offer for him to fill in the breach by acting as deputy for those whose voices could not rise above the tumult, as on occasions past, we live in hopes of hearing his bell-like tones at coming conventions. We wish he would feel it incumbent to speak for himself, now and then.

Howard H. Elliott, Winchenden, Mass., who steers the financial bark of the society so capably was not swollen with pride at the thought of the tremendous trust reposed in him and he had ear for the humblest member once he was assured that no designs on the strong-box were entertained. As custodian of the coin, he is happy, and if he is ever harassed by responsibility, he does not show it.

P. M. Wolsieffer, Philadelphia, the new president of the A. P. S., was as popular as the man who knocks a home run with three on base for the home team, when it is three runs behind, in the last inning. A sigh of relief was heaved by the members when they knew that they had got him where they wanted him—in the president's chair. For many a day

P. M. has dodged the lightning but last it struck him. He is the most popular man in the society and we believe when he lays down the duties of office in years to come, he will have made fine record for himself. His experience of many years will guide him to avoid any pit-falls and his sincerity of administration will be felt by all.

Doctor H. A. Davis, Denver, Colorado, officiates in the secretary's office so that it seems as though he were made for it. For faithful performance of duty in sunshine or rain, he stands forth a society worker of rare ability and all it is hard to find his like. His work appreciated by the members who lose chance to acclaim him and his service.

FIVE-YEAR HONOR CLUB.

Daniel H. Greenberg, N. Y. City.
Joseph E. Nute, Fall River, Mass.
H. A. Robinson, M.D., Hingham, Mass.
Clark W. Brown, Ashland, Mass.
Samuel J. Smith, Shamokin, Pa.
P. H. Chase, Philadelphia, Pa.
J. G. Scott, Aberdeen, Wash.

Daniel H. Greenberg, when remitted his check for $5 in payment for membership in the Honor Club, wrote "Whenever I read MEKEEL'S WEEKLY feel the pulse of the stamp world," this is a pretty good sentiment. Greenberg drops into poetry a la Voltaire as follows:—"Here is my gift, will, Expressed with a five-dollar bill cannot do without MEKEEL, Because I my weekly thrill." Thanks, Mr. Greenberg.

On Thursday, August 21, the proprietors of the WEEKLY held a conference in Rochester, N. Y. and stay of the Managing Editor was longed somewhat by reason of engagements in the city, including an address before the Rochester Rotary Club on Tuesday, August 26. Upon his turn home in the accumulation of business he finds various applications for membership in the Five-Year Honor Club. These all come to us with little data upon which to base individual mention, and we are conscious of that the following paragraph pays sufficient recognition to the loyalty of these friends who are so confident of stability of the WEEKLY as to enter applications for five-year renewals their subscriptions.

We add to the membership of Honor Club our Rotarian friend who we met at Toronto, Joseph E. N. associated with the Fall River Gas Works Co., at Fall River, Mass.; Henry Robinson, M.D., of Hingham, Mass.; G. Scott, Aberdeen, Wash.; Clark Brown, Ashland, Mass.; Samuel Smith, Shamokin, Pa., and P. H. Chase, Assistant Engineer of the Philadelphia Electric Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

It is our intention to publish a list of members in our Honor Club some this month.

CONVENTION PUBLICITY.

prospective collectors and the kid stamp swappers of today who will become the philatelists of tomorrow. In 1902, the United States issued some 5-cent imperforated stamps. Last night a block of four of these sold for $16. Six $1 stamps issued as recently as 1915 were bought for $17, and a collection of 300 Harding precancelled stamps found a purchaser at $26.

It was Detroit's first view of a large stamp auction and both men and women were present.

Two extreme rarities, one valued at $7,500 and the other priced at $8,500, were on view yesterday.

One was an unused vertical strip of four 10-cent stamps of 1847, from the corner of the sheet, which was acquired recently by a New York firm of stamp dealers when it bought the United States collection of J. F. Lozier, automobile manufacturer, at a price said to be $110,000. It was for sale at $8,500.

New Discovery.

The other unusual feature was a New Haven postmaster's provisional exhibited by Harold C. Brooks, of Marshall, Mich. Brooks obtained the copy through newspaper advertising. Two stamped envelopes were issued by New Haven in 1845. One was a five-cent red, which catalogues at $3,500; the other a 5-cent blue on buff, which catalogues at $7,500. The Brooks discovery is a new variety—a 5-cent blue on white paper.

Another variety shown by Brooks was a New York postmaster's stamp issued in 1845. The postmaster at that time was R. H. Morris, and all the stamps were initialed in red ink to insure extra protection against counterfeiting. Most of these were initialed A. C. M. by A. C. Monson, a postal clerk, and only a few got the pen of the postmaster. Those initialed R. H. M. catalogue $600; those signed A. C. M. are worth only $50. The old folded letter bearing the Brooks copy is dated August 20, 1845, being one of the earliest dates on which this provisional issue was used.

Delegates to the convention held a business session yesterday morning and went to Bob-Lo in the afternoon. It was announced that the mail ballot on the presidency of the society had resulted in the overwhelming election of P. M. Wolfieffer, of Philadelphia, to succeed C. F. Heyerman, of Detroit, as president for the ensuing year.

A warmly welcome arrival yesterday was Jacob Keller, who came to Detroit in 1872 and moved to Calgary in 1920, after keeping a little stamp shop on Randolph street, that was for years the rendezvous of adolescent philatelists.

business session in the morning; in the afternoon visiting stamp collectors were driven to the Ford plant and Belle Isle.

WORLD STAMP SHOW PLANNED.

Philatelists Outline Proposal for International Exhibition in United States.

Plans for an international stamp exhibition, the first to be held in the United States but no novelty on the continent, were outlined by Charles J. Phillips, of New York, before the American Philatelic Society at the Statler yesterday.

Philatelists of every stamp-issuing country of the world will be invited to the exhibition, which will take place in 1926 and which will go similar European affairs a bit better by offering medals or other durable recognition for research work in philately.

Motion Pictures Planned.

Motion pictures dealing with the geography and history traceable through stamps will be another feature, the films to be supplemented by a corps of speakers who will address school children of New York and environs on the minute phases of stamp collecting.

Among yesterday's arrivals was William H. H. Schaffner, president of the Marion County bank, of which the late President Harding was a director. Schaffner was rich in reminiscences of the departed executive, having an acquaintance with him that dated from the arrival of Harding in Marion in 1881.

"He came as a poor boy, and I remember that way back in those days it wasn't at all easy for him to meet $5 or $20 drafts," said Schaffner.

Ford Plant Visited.

Schaffner never interested the president in collecting stamps himself, but his collection is replete with correspondence from Mr. Harding. Whenever the president when a member of the senate went to foreign lands he always bought some stamps, stuck them on an envelope and sent them to Schaffner.

After a morning given over to discussion of the proposed international show and to receiving invitations for the society to hold its next convention in Los Angeles, St. Louis, Boston and Atlantic City, the society went to the Ford plant in the afternoon and held a "Dealers' and Traders' night" afterwards.

The Precancel Club announced the election of B. Gordon Bushnell of Indianapolis as president and John Spaulding of New Berlin, N. Y., as secretary and treasurer.

The convention closed with a dinner tonight in the Statler ballroom.

COLLECTOR TELLS OF THRILLS.

By ZOE BECKLEY.

"A primrose by a river's brim
A yellow primrose was to him,
And it was nothing more."
A stamp upon an envelope
Is fraught with joy and health and hope,
If you but know its lore.

A postage stamp is—well, just a postage stamp, you think. Well, dear children, you are wrong. A postage stamp is geography. A postage stamp is history. A postage stamp is travel. And it can be a love story, too.

We didn't know it ourselves until we talked with Arthur O. Litt, chairman of the Committee on Arrangements for the Stamp-Collectors' Annual Convention here August 4 to 6, with meetings at the Hotel Continental and trips to Luna Park and everything.

Mr. Litt is a cotton converter with a prosaic office at No. 487 Broadway. He is also an expert on stamps and has so much fun playing around with them that we wonder he has any time to convert cotton.

He did, however, convert us to stamp collecting in just nine minutes. We are going right out this payday and buy a dollar-and-a-half envelope of bargain stamps and a chubby catalogue, which is the way to begin, Mr. Litt says. After that we shall snap our fingers at business worries, personal problems, hot weather, and all swats of fate. Stamps are the quickest things to get interested in we have ever seen.

"Here's a sample of the thrill," says Mr. Litt, hauling a stampbook from a drawer of his desk and pointing to an engraved oblong in red with French words on it.

"This is a copy of a Haytian stamp given by a native while I was in the diplomatic service at Port au Prince during the war. I sold the original a few weeks later for $50.

AND OH, THE PROFITS!

"And look here. This is a sheet of Haytian stamps worth normally five cents each, or about five American cents for the lot. I have refused $275 for it."

We gazed in awe. Mr. Litt explained about "surcharge." It seems that sometimes a locality will have too many high denomination stamps on hand, for example, and wants to raise some money quickly. The stamps are re-valued, the new value being printed across the face. And so the stamp ultimately becomes something for the collector.

"But that," Mr. Litt tossed the book on his desk, "is nothing. You know the classic story about the British Guiana stamp that had lain upon a love letter in an attic for years and years. It sold in Paris the other day for $32,500 and had belonged to Count Ferrari de la Renotiere, a millionaire of Austria, whose collection was among the finest in Europe.

ONE COLLECTION WORTH MILLIONS.

"The Count, living in Paris, employed five secretaries to collect stamps, and his place was guarded as though it held the crown jewels. He had willed them to the Berlin Museum, so they were confiscated and are being sold by the French Reparations Commission. Over $2,000,000 has been realized thus far, and it is thought a million more will come.

"The wonderful Guiana stamps were bought by Arthur Hind, of Utica, who has the best collection in the United States. Senator Frelinghuysen and Congressman Ackerman, of New Jersey, are stamp fans, too, and have good collections. So has Mrs. Harding, the President's widow. I have given her some Haytian stamps which she wanted.

"Women are going in for stamp collecting more and more. Perhaps the idea of there being valuable stamps lying around in attics, as the Guiana one did for generations, appeals to them. There is plenty of thrill in stamps."

Mr. Litt ought to know. He put himself in business on stamps. Not professionally; quite by accident. Like all school boys, he hoarded stamps and traded them round the neighborhood. Then he went to California, studied law and forgot about his old albums. The war came and he was sent to Hayti, and like a flash the old longing to dig up interesting stamps came back.

"I went to the Post Office," he relates, "and bought a complete set of Haytian stamps just for fun. They cost about $1.20. The natives stood around wondering who the American millionaire was who could afford to invest a fortune in something he wasn't even going to use!"

"Then I got a catalogue and studied it. Right off the bat I found half a dozen stamps described in the catalogue, each worth several times what I had paid for the whole outfit. Then I determined to study Haytian stamps thoroughly, with the result that I sold for over $5,000 odd ones I picked up for practically nothing."

Do you begin to get the fever? Why, it's like Wall street and Monte Carlo rolled into one! Makes you itch to rummage through old letters and see what's there. Mr. Litt says you ought never to throw away ANY stamps. They all have some value, to some one, somewhere. Even plain, every day two cent U. S. stamps get distinguished occasionally. Mr. Litt has one with "5 cents" on it instead of "2 cents"—sort of a slip of Uncle Samuel's engraving machine—and worth somebody's fortune.

Expert Litt asks you just to think of the sick and crippled of all countries who can lose themselves in stamp study and stamp trading. And the old folks who haven't an interest. And retired

CANADA TO THE FORE.

A most enjoyable surprise was enjoyed by those at the banquet, held on the evening of August 14, 1924, at the Detroit convention, when the presence of Mr. E.
L. Taylor, Ottawa, Canada, in charge of the Postage Stamp Division, was disclosed by Mr. Livingstone, the toastmaster. Mr. Taylor upon invitation read briefly from a valuable paper that he had prepared and it is needless to say that his courtesy was appreciated. In conversation with Mr. Taylor he expressed his satisfaction in having attended the meeting and he mentioned especially that he had made many friends in the United States through the offices of his stamp clearing house. Mr. Taylor has allowed us to use the following series in its entirety; and readers will follow his course telling of the stamps of Canada from their introduction to the present day, as well as the country's early postal history, followed by a description of the stamp manufacture of his country and ending with a note on the Ottawa stamp agency, brought into being for the benefit of stamp collectors.

Our postal system in Canada is based on that of Great Britain. When in 1760 Canada became a British possession, a postal system connecting the older British colonies in North America and linking them with Great Britain was in operation, under the control of the British Postmaster General, but administered by deputies of his own choosing. One of the earliest of these deputies was Benjamin Franklin, whose headquarters were at Philadelphia, and immediately on receiving word of the signing of the treaty giving Canada to Great Britain, he came up to Canada, for the purpose of extending the British postal service to this country. He opened a post-office at Quebec and subordinate offices at Montreal and Three Rivers, and placed them in charge of a young Scotchman named Hugh Finlay, who had been a few years in this country. Finlay thus became our first resident Deputy Postmaster General under British rule, and as a matter of fact, a few years later he succeeded to Franklin's own position, on his leaving office.

Owing to Franklin's prompt action, the postal service was the first of the institutions of government which was placed on a settled footing after Canada became a British province.

Postage stamps were introduced in Canada in 1851. Our first issue of postage stamps consisted of three values, namely: three, six and twelve pence. The first and the most typical of Canada was designed by Sir Stanford Fleming, civil engineer and draftsman. The central figure is a reproduction of the beaver in its native haunts, over which the royal crown of England rests on the thistle, rose and shamrock, with the letters "VR" (Victoria Regina) on either side. It would seem, after second thought, that it is perfectly right for this animal to be the first on the stamp of the country, who as a colony, depended on its fur

as a never failing source of revenue.
The colour of this stamp is red. The six-pence is of the usual upright size, and has for the main design the portrait of Albert, the Prince Consort.
The artist of the original painting is unknown. The colour of this stamp is slate violet. The twelve-pence is similar in shape and design to the sixpence, and has the head of her Majesty, Queen Victoria, taken from a full length painting by Alfred Edward Chalon. The colour is black.

On the first year of the issue of these stamps the demand for them was not very great, and it would seem to demonstrate that the use of postage stamps in prepayment of letters was not going to be a success, but about the year 1855 an increase of about 75% in the stamp issue was shown. These first three stamps were ordered from and engraved on steel by Messrs. Raw-don, Wright, Hatch and Edson of New York City, the firm who had been awarded the contract for printing the first 1847 United States stamps, a fact that no doubt had its influence upon the early day postal issue of this country. These stamps were printed in sheets of 100, ten rows to a sheet.
The first supply of three-pence stamps were received on April 5, 1851. The next supply arrived two weeks later, and made a total of 250,200. These stamps were placed on sale on April 23, 1851. The first six-pence stamps were received May 2nd, and totalled 100,400. These were issued on May 15th and were used for postage on letters to the United States, except Oregon and California. The twelve-pence stamp was received a few days later and the total number received was 51,000 stamps. They were placed on sale about June 15th, and were used for postage on letters to Great Britain via Quebec and Halifax. It would almost seem more natural to call this a one shilling stamp, but the chief reason for not doing this was the depreciated state of Canadian currency at that time, added to this fact that the shilling in Boston was worth 1/2 dollar or 16 2/3 cents, while in New York it was worth one-eighth of a dollar. As a matter of fact, the French in Lower Canada used the 15-pence shilling, while the English in Upper Canada used the standard shilling. This 12-pence stamp has become a rare specimen to the collector of today, doubtless due to the fact that so few of them were issued. Of the 51,000 received from the New York contractors only 1,510 were ever issued to the Postmasters for sale to the public. The rest, numbering 49,490, were burned by government orders.

In 1859 the issue and use by the public of postage stamps had increased with great rapidity. Decimal stamps to the value of 1 cent, 5 cents and 10 cents for ordinary correspondence, and 12½ cents and 17 cents for British postage were obtained in readiness for the commencement of the decimal postage law in July, 1859, and these stamps were used in place of the penny stamps from that date. The 12½ cent stamps were used on letters to Great Britain by Canadian boats, and the 17 cent on Cunard boats from New York and Boston.

Post-cards were placed in the issue in the year of 1870. And in 1875 three registration stamps were issued, 2-cent red for the prepayment of registration charges within the Dominion; 5-cent green for registration to the United States, and 8-cent blue for registration to the United Kingdom. The 20-cent and 50-cent stamps were issued in 1893, and the $1.00 stamp in 1923. The Jubilee stamps were issued in 1897; a large number of these stamps of higher denominations were burned by Government orders. A Special Delivery stamp to the value of 10 cents was issued in 1898. This rate was increased to 20 cents in 1922, when a stamp of that value was issued. Postage Due stamps to the value of 1 cent, 2 cents and 5 cents were issued from July 1, 1906. The 3-cent Confederation stamp and post card were both issued in 1917, to commemorate the 50th anniversary of Confederation. While the postage rate in Canada was 2 cents the war tax of 1 cent was introduced in 1916, and a stamp combining the postage and war tax stamp was issued, having the value of 3 cents. This stamp was discontinued in 1919, and a new 3-cent stamp was made part of the regular issue.

THE MAKING OF POSTAGE STAMPS BY CANADIAN BANK NOTE COMPANY, LIMITED, OTTAWA.

Designing. The first step in the manufacture of postage stamps is to prepare a model or design showing as closely as possible how the finished stamp will appear. The main features of the design are settled in conference with the Postmaster General and his leading officers and the drafting is done by an artist specially skilled in this class of work.

The model is submitted to the Postmaster General, and, if satisfactory, approved by him in writing.

Engraving. The approved model forms the basis for the engraving.

The first operation is to engrave the design in reverse on a small piece of blank steel. This is known as the original die. A proof is taken from the die on completion and submitted to the Postmaster General in colour. After approval of this proof, the die is hardened and a soft steel roll is passed over it; a special machine being used in this operation. The stamp is taken up on the roll in relief and the roll is hardened. After that a blank steel printing plate one-quarter of an inch thick is chosen, by means of special machinery, the engraving is transferred from the roll to the printing plate where it appears again in reverse.

The printing plate is then hardened, cleaned and polished. It is given a serial number for identification purposes and is then filed away in a carefully protected vault for printing when required.

A postage stamp die represents the work of two and sometimes three specialist engravers. Extreme specialization is encouraged as this naturally makes reproduction by any one engraver more difficult.

Printing. With the preparation of printing plates the work is ready for the steel plate printing press. Engraved plates are issued under careful supervision and direction, and the system is such that it is impossible for the printer to obtain or retain possession of plates without the constant supervision of higher authority.

All orders from the Postmaster General are given in writing and are carefully checked before the factory order is prepared. The latter carries full details as to size, denomination, colour, paper, etc., and is consulted at every stage of the work. A condition of all orders is that engravings remain in the custody of the contractor and are only surrendered after cancellation. In this way responsibility is undivided at all times.

Each printing plate will produce from 20,000,000 to 30,000,000 stamps, according to quality of steel, kind of ink and other technical matters. The printing is checked carefully day by day and at the first sign of wear the plates are given a special examination. If unfit for use they are at once set aside for cancellation. Cancellation of plates is carried out under the joint authority of the Post Office Department and the Contractor.

Protection. Plates, paper and all materials are under careful check and supervision at all times and the system is such that all orders are balanced twice a day. In case of discrepancies the employees concerned can be at once located and if necessary detained until the discrepancies are adjusted.

Exceptional care is taken of every stamp spoiled in process of manufacture it is destroyed at regular intervals under strict supervision.

Paper. Postage stamp paper made in Canada, by specially selected mills. Water-marked paper is employed for Canadian stamps.

Ink. Plate printing ink is manufactured by the Contractor from day to day as required. Dry colour and seed oil are the principal ingredients. All colour, oils and other materials chemically tested and the ink is thoroughly ground before being used.

Gum. The gum or mucilage for postage stamps is prepared by the Contractor from a special recipe; basic material being dextrine or potato flour. The mixture is brought to boiling point and a small quantity of pure fish glue added. A small amount of wintergreen is also used. All materials are carefully tested by a chemist and the conditions surrounding manufacture and application of gum are clean and wholesome. Tests are made at various stages papers of varying quality and under sorts of conditions in order to insure that the gum will work satisfactorily in all parts of the country. AVIES STAMP CO., TOLEDO, OHIO

With climatic variations, there is real difficulty in making a gum that will be satisfactory in all places and at all times. If stamp users will stop to think about this they will see just what is involved. Canadian stamps circulate in the damp climate of the seacoast and in the dry, clear air of the western prairies and they are also used in summer heat of 90° to 100° and at winter temperature of from zero to 20° below.

Gum for the postage stamps is manufactured so that it will flow easily in water is applied to the envelope in small quantity. If the water is applied with a brush or roller to the stamps themselves there is always danger that the gum may be washed off, and the same thing applies where the stamps are "licked" by the user.

Perforation. The stamps which have been printed in large sheets come to the perforating machine already trimmed. These machines are necessarily delicate and require frequent adjustment. First, the large sheet is run through one way and cut in the centre. Then the cut sheets are run through the other way and again cut, leaving a sheet of stamps with 100-on, perforated both ways and ready, after slight trimming, to be delivered to the Post Office Department.

LET'S STRAIGHTEN OUT THE BANK NOTE ISSUES

So many U.S. collections are very weak in their showings of the stamps issued between 1870 and 1888. Most of the spaces may be filled, but examination shows that in a large majority of cases stamps are misplaced, and National, Continental, American and Re-engraved series are hopelessly mixed. If you want those stamps where they belong, here is the opportunity to put them right. Fine copies for the condition, good, clean, sound stamps for the man who is not so particular about the fine points of centering and cancellation.

Postage extra on orders under $1. Your money cheerfully returned if you do not want the stamps. All orders subject to prior sale.

Examination. Between the printing, gumming and perforating operations the work is examined by specially skilled employees and all defective work is accumulated and destroyed at regular intervals.

Packing and Delivery. Stamps in sheets are counted and arranged in bundles of 1,000 sheets. The bundles are labelled and placed in the delivery vaults where they are kept under the custody of confidential employees. A requisition is sent in writing to the Contractor by the Post Office Department each day calling for the supplies needed and these supplies are taken out of the stock vault, checked, packed in specially locked boxes and delivered by motor truck under the guard of experienced men to the Postage Stamp Branch of the Post Office Department in Ottawa.

In April, 1923, the Post Office Department established a Philatelic Branch somewhat similar to that already in existence in the United States where well-centered specimens of the present issue, along with those of other issues which the Department have on hand, could be obtained. At first we had quite a large number of stamps of former issues which had been in the hands of the Department or procured from Postmasters, and the sale of these stamps was consequently large as most of them were sold at their face value. In this way the Department disposed of quite a large number of obsolete stamps. These now have been pretty well disposed of, and the Department has to depend largely on stamps of the present issue. Canada does not change her postage stamp issue very frequently and it is not easy to carry out a philatelic branch successfully unless this is done. I think on the whole we have given satisfaction because a large number of correspondents have expressed appreciation of the stamps that they have received. Here and there though, we have had a complaint, although not of a very serious nature.

I can say, though, that since this Branch has been established I have become acquainted with a large number of philatelists, both personally and by correspondence, and I have always found that they are ever willing to co-operate in bettering the Agency.

THE DETROIT BANQUET.

The convention banquet was held in the ball-room of the Hotel Statler on the evening of August 14th and every seat in the spacious hall was taken. The scene was an inspiring one and was such as to incline the outsider to the belief that philately had attractions to bring together so worthy a group of ladies and gentlemen. The menu certainly was a well-ordered one and put the banqueters in a gracious mood towards the speakers, judging from the evidences of approval of the efforts of those who were called upon for something to say. The toastmaster, Mr. W. T. Livingstone, was a graceful master of ceremonies and his dictum that the talks should be limited to a short space of time was observed. Mr. Livingstone called upon the newly-elected president, Mr. P. M. Wolsieffer, for a response and after the applause had subsided, Mr. Wolsieffer spoke in a way to show that he realized the responsibilities of his eminent position. He promised that he would proceed carefully in an administrative way and bring to bear on the problems that would confront him an unbiased mind; and that his procedure would always be calculated to serve the society as a whole. He allied himself with progressive principles but insisted that the slogan of the society should be quality as well as quantity in soliciting new members. He indicated that he would reappoint the present officers and showed that he had a comprehensive idea of the duties of his office.

The retiring president, Mr. C. F. Heyerman, knew by the reception that he received that his work during the past two years was appreciated and while he must feel a relief in stepping aside, he expressed himself as being glad to be able to speak so highly in praise of his successor.

The editor of the WEEKLY was introduced as one who was known through his regular attendance at conventions and he took occasion to say that after seeing a good part of a thousand people before him, the attainment of a circulation of ten thousand for a stamp paper did not seem to be an accomplishment worth boasting about and that the incentive was given for a figure twice that of ten thousand.

Mr. Charles J. Phillips made an interesting address which reflected his long experience and exceptional interest in our pursuit, and he interspersed a number of lighter touches in his remarks that went well. Speaking seriously, he told of the recent death of his friend, Hugo Griebert of London, that philatelist sans reproche and said that he thought it fitting that a message of condolence be sent the family of Mr. Griebert; and the speaker's suggestion was acted upon.

Dr. H. P. Hopkins, president of the Michigan Stamp Club, made a telling speech in which he slammed around in a way to excite the risibilities of his audience or as our actor friend would say, to get a laugh. His allusions to local philatelic conditions were filled with good humor, and it is easy to believe that the philatelists of Detroit who are members of the several societies are one happy family.

Mr. Taylor, who has charge of the stamp agency at Ottawa, Canada, expressed his pleasure at being among so many friends who had patronized his office at different times, and he said, withal, that he derived great satisfaction in mingling with so many who exalted the stamp and its suggestions. He read briefly from an interesting article that he had prepared on the stamps of Canada and their manufacture.

W. W. MacLaren, Cleveland, whose reputation as a stamp hunter is secure and really founded on fact, promised to tell the secret of his success in running the elusive rarity to earth. It was apparent from his remarks that he proceeds in a somewhat devious way to land his quarry but his explanatory finish was comprised in these words: "I cultivate the old ladies."

There were further features of the banquet that are worthy of notice but we have rather sketchily indicated that it would have been impossible to have improved on Detroit's festal affair, and the memory of the feast will be a lasting pleasure. Two hundred and thirty-one ladies and gentlemen were present, according to the count.

FIVE-YEAR HONOR CLUB.

ANOTHER LIFE SUBSCRIBER.

A. W. Filstrup, of Benton Harbor, Mich., is entitled to the honor of being our second life subscriber. His negotiations with our Chicago office began some three weeks ago, but it fell to the lot of J. W. Prevost of Springfield, Mass., to come under the wire as No. 1. However, Mr. Filstrup will not begrudge him that honor. We are sorry that we have no facts available in connection with Mr. Filstrup's philatelic activities. We know they have been numerous and we hope to prevail upon him to give us in the near future an account of the things that interest him in philately. We enter Mr. Filstrup's name for a life subscription with great appreciation of the estimation in which he holds our publication. We trust that he may round out the century mark with the WEEKLY, both going strong.

Supplementing the above just as we go to press a letter comes to hand from Mr. Severn in which he says:—"I may say that Mr. Filstrup latterly has gained a collecting eminence through his exceptionally fine collection of early United States that places him on one of the topmost rungs of the ladder. He has shown his collection in part at different meetings of societies in various cities, and he is billed to appear at the meeting of the Chicago Philatelic Society to be held December 4, 1924. Mr. Filstrup is always alert to say a good word for philately, and his actions tell of his sincere belief in it. He wanted to be assured of receiving the WEEKLY as long as he lives, and it is needless for us to say that we hope he lives for a long, long time."

A. W. Filstrup, Benton Harbor, Mich. (LIFE).

Charles H. Smith, Brushton, N. Y.

A. A. Belser, Havana, Cuba.

August Dietz, Richmond, Va.

Wm. L. Kinkead, Ridgewood, N. J.

N. McD. Freeman, Chicago, Ill.

G. G. Bergman, Jalapa, Mexico.

Paul MacGuffin, Libertyville, Ill.

We acknowledge the receipt of an application for membership from Charles H. Smith, publisher of Facts and Fallacies, a weekly newspaper at Brushton, N. Y. Mr. Smith is also in the printing and stationery business and writes us that he would "feel a severe loss at not receiving the paper every week."

Every once in a while we make reference to some event in the life of the WEEKLY that seems like a milestone as regards the esteem in which our publication is held by its subscribers. No sooner do we record one happening than another presents itself to view. Whatever adjectives we might attempt to use, all would be wasted in expressing the great regard in which the WEEKLY is held by its subscribers. No other stamp paper in the world, indeed no other paper in existence, can boast such an Honor Club as it has been our privilege to inaugurate in recent months.

The preceding paragraph is inspired by the fact that on Thursday, August 28, we received in a single mail no fewer than four applications each accompanied with $5 for membership in our Club. In the number were A. A. Belser who is connected with Price, Waterhouse & Co., at the firm's Havana office; August Dietz, of Richmond, Va., the head of the Dietz Printing Co. of that city and a philatelist noted for his research work, especially in connection with Confederate issues; Wm. L. Kinkead of Ridgewood, N. J., whose name has occasionally appeared in the WEEKLY as interested in the educational phases of philately and who is very active locally along these lines; and the last of the quartet of new members is N. McD. Freeman of Chicago, Ill. We welcome all four of these new recruits.

In making his application for membership in the Honor Club G. G. Bergman, Jalapa, Mexico, expresses the belief that he is probably the first member of the Five-Year Club from Mexico, and we are very glad to accord him this honor. Mr. Bergman is a member of the Collectors Club, of New York, and is also A. P. S. 2526. He is the general representative of Arbuckle Bros. at Jalapa.

Through Mr. Severn's office we have received the application of Paul MacGuffin, Libertyville, Ill. This place is situated near Chicago and Mr. MacGuffin is a frequent and welcome visitor at our local office. Through years of collecting he has accumulated one of the best collections of older stamps that can be found in his vicinity.

NEWS GLEANINGS.

—Through a mistake made several weeks ago, we elected Mr. Charles Phillips as one of the directors of the American Philatelic Society, when in reality it was our old friend, Mr. Henry B. Phillips of California, who was crowned with the laurel. Mr. Charles Phillips was elected vice president of the American Stamp Dealers Association and we think that temporarily that honor enough for any man; and so make this correction.

—From the Philatelic Institute, 2 Plumstead High Street, S. E., 18 London, we have received the little book, illustrated, with over thirty pages entitled "The Post-War Stamps of Germany" by W. Gardner. This little book is number 18 of the Philatelic Institute Papers and is sent post-free for 7 pence. A work of this kind brings Germany down to date and in view of the large number of stamps that have been issued during the past few years from Germany, the book is of particular interest. We find the stamps from 1919 through the 1924 govt. values listed with more or less explanatory text. In the consecutive way the stamps are described, there is no little instructive reading and we welcome the book which will be consulted for information that does not appear in the catalogue concerning these prolific issues that is quite advisable to know. The popularity of German sheets no doubt will make this book of particular interest to many of those who want the German issues, literally by the hundred.

—The department at Washington has just sent out an order saying that air mail may be forwarded to the address or returned to the sender by the same methods where the delivery of the matter will be expedited if carried by air. "No additional charge for postage is to be made for the forwarding or return of matter in this manner except in cases where it is forwarded or returned to place beyond the air-mail zone for which postage was originally paid; in which event the matter shall be rated with postage due, sufficient to cover the amount chargeable for the carriage of the matter by air from the point of original mailing to the office of final delivery."

—The Horn Pipe, published by the Joseph Horne Co., Pittsburgh, Pa., has recently opened a philatelic department. We have received several subscription to the WEEKLY as a result of the publicity.

—Attention is called to the new Jackson Heights address of the Home of the Postage Stamp. The company is permanently located at the new address and is justly proud of its new home.

—While the Managing Editor was away upon his Rochester, N. Y., trip, the office of the WEEKLY was favored with a call from Rev. G. E. Richter, pastor of the Second Congregational Church, Coventry, Conn. We regret the absence of known Mr. Richter through correspondence for many years.

—H. C. Buttermore, 129 S. Whitcomb Ave., Youngstown, O., would like the address of R. E. Lancaster, formerly Louisville, O., more recently at Canton, O., and at the present time unable to be located. Who will help Mr. Buttermore out?

—A subscriber has an 1861 cover with the cancellation "Charleston 4 Corners. Who knows where this place was located?

—On July 31 Emily King received from H. Sklar, 93 Crosby St., N. Y. City, a request for an approval selection Under date of Aug. 5, Mrs. King wrote

clarr that she would consider his request if he would first return a selection to him at 72 Williams Av., Brooklyn, N. Y., some two years ago. The letter is returned with indications of having been opened and examined, but with the O. marking "Removed, present address unknown."

"I wonder how many American philatelists have ever visited this little country? In population it is smaller even than San Marino, but the people are, of course, far superior, as illiteracy is unknown here. Of the last 'gold' set the 15, 20, 25, 30, 35, 40, 50, 80 centimes and 1 franc are still on sale while the 10 values are sold out and the 7 1/2 and 10 have been overprinted 5 and 10c respectively. The Liechtenstein stamps are now being printed in Switzerland, instead of Austria. The 10c has already appeared in the old design on the Swiss marked paper (cross) in a different shade of green; the 20c will soon appear red and the 30 in blue, (Postal Union colors). Unsurcharged Swiss due stamps issued for Postage Due."—A. O. TITMANN, Vathy, Liechtenstein.

—R. L. Hustis sends us a rather unique stamp gotten out in Germany. It shows a picture of a trumpeter and the figure made up of portions of postage stamps various colors. Mr. Hustis was informed that this is quite a fad in Germany, some very complete and ornate figures of fair size having been made in pieces of stamps, as the result of repetitions in connection with which prizes have been offered. He suggests that this is one way of ridding the stamp market of some of the worthless material available.

—F. W. Reid has sold his home in New York and will leave Sept. 6 for Honolulu, where he will open a stamp shop. We shall be sorry to lose our old friend in the States but presume he will continue his wonted activities at the new address.

The firm of Walter W. Anderson & Co., Princeton, Ill., has removed its office to Peoria, Ill., as per the advertisement elsewhere in this issue. Note that the firm has now changed its name to Waco Stamp Co., and our readers will doubtless hear from the firm during the coming season.

—As a matter of news it might be interesting to know that the annual convention of the Metropolitan Philatelic Association, Incorporated, will be held at Philadelphia, Pa., on Sept. 17 and 18, 1924. Mr. Aaron E. Carpenter will be named chairman of the Entertainment Committee and P. M. Wolsieffer will be chairman of the Credentials Committee.
JOHN A. FOWLER.

If you have not already received the information I thought it might be of interest to those who collect permits, that the Mail-O-Meter Company, Detroit, Michigan, has sold out to the Pitney-Bowes Postage Meter Company of Stamford, Connecticut.—JOHN W. HAARER.

THE 2c BROWN 1883.
By C. J. HOHENSTEIN.

The high spots of your WEEKLY are, for me at least, "Early Low Values Specialized," Ward's New Issue Comments and News Gleanings. These are read first and with avidity. The latter two departments are present in nearly every number. But Early Low Values comments are frequently missing. Their absence always is a pungent disappointment to me. No doubt, at times you are without material for this column. (No. The trouble lies in the fact that the Pre-cancel fan, the British Colonial specialist and various other interests must be given attention.—W. O. W.) Couldn't some more latent scribes among the U. S. specialists be induced to contribute notes of interest along this line? It is surprising how many are taking to specialization in these values. We may not all be as loquacious and able to present our finds as intelligently as a Ward, Bates, Bonesteel, Hustis, et altera; but there is a long range between the vernacular and perfection of the American language.

Anent the 2c brown, 1883, I wish to chronicle a few notes. This stamp offers a wide scope of interest, more so, I think, than the 2c green, 1887, not as long in use as the former, altho many characteristics are identical in the two issues. I have recently paged an unpicked lot of some 1,200 to 1,500 of the 2c brown which have accumulated with me during about twenty years.

The shaded and unshaded shield varieties are about equally numerous.

As to the dotted varieties described by Mr. Kuhn in Dec. 10th issue and Mr. Hustis July 28th last, I find that most of the shaded shield variety have them, ranging from just inside the medallion to the outside on left of design in a general latitude of the 5th pearl, altho some reach as far south as the 7th pearl. The dots appear much less frequently on the unshaded variety. On one shaded copy I found the dot 1/2 mm above the design, 1/4 mm to the left of the N. E. corner. This copy has no dots on the west.

Three copies have the shield line broken in lower left half. One copy has no shield line on entire left side, altho the stamp is quite clear otherwise.

One copy has the diagonal lines of the medallion extending northeastward across the white oval, the pearls and the word United unto the edge of design. Might be termed a double transfer. Another copy has the colored horizontal line from the tip of Washington's lower lip running across the white oval, the 5th pearl, and coinciding with the outside horizontal line at left. A third copy has a colored hair line on the left extending from the 6th pearl across the 7th pearl, diagonally down to the perforation at a point horizontally opposite the bottom of Washington's throat. All these lines are invisible to the naked eye, but clearly defined under the microscope.

Ten double transfers were in the lot showing the shield line plainly double at lower left of shield.

One item has a fine upward shift of about 1/2 mm, showing best in northeast diagonal half.

Two copies show part of the plate number inside of perforation, both ending in naught, one at top and one at the bottom, but not enough to make out the number.

One copy has about two-thirds the height of the letters of Note Company of the American Bank Note Company's imprint within the perforation at the bottom.

Seven vertical arrows at top and bottom on left and right sides were in the bunch, one on a horizontal pair.

Stitch watermarks are evasive, not one in the lot.

Cancellations galore, also blue, purple, magenta, and one red. One shows side view of a lion's head with distended jaws; another a bear's head and shoulder with its mouth open for honey or berries; circles, from one to six ringed; spider webs; solid and hollow stars; crescent; a white or hollow cross with white rays of light diagonally falling upon it from northwest; a gyroscope (?); town cancellations, one enclosed in an octagon; year dates from 1883 to 1886; a big, heavy letter S 18 by 18mm high and wide and about 2mm thick; 46 as the highest numeral; to say nothing of the many varieties of figures and letters, filled circles, etc.

Although it took me several days to page and arrange these stamps in my collection, there was some kick of an exhilarating pleasure in it.

Having found recently several double and tripple transfers on the 12c of the lately obsoleted issue, I also paged my U. S. Shanghai set, and sure enough, the o.g. copy of the 24c on 12c perforated 11 has a double transfer, nine horizontal lines faintly crossing the white oval at points between Franklin's chin and the left numeral 12. A used copy on cover is normal.

EDITORIAL.

Now that the conventions are a part of philatelic history, they leave a train of consequences that prove that these annual meetings are well worth the time and energy that make them a success, both from the point of the members in the convention city and those who travel to it. First of all, there is always something of a stir in the city in which the conventions are held, and the result is that there are a number of persons who are attracted by the publicity given the meetings in the local press. Collections of boyhood days, miscellaneous lots of stamps and accumulations in general are brought to headquarters by those who know nothing of systematic collecting or who have long been out of touch with it. Usually, these inquirers wish to dispose of their holdings, but occasionally the caller gets an inspiration from the crowd that determines him to pursue collecting in an orderly way. The newspaper notices that are given so freely are instrumental in bringing letters from those at a distance who speak of stamps in their possession or ask for information about stamps. Several letters of the kind have been received that proves that in a scattered way, there is a good bit of interest in the stamp theme throughout the country; and it becomes incumbent upon collectors to centralize this interest and direct it into the proper channels. Soon after the editor of the WEEKLY got home a message came from the directress of the Chicago Daily News broadcasting station saying that a number of requests had been received for another stamp talk, and no doubt the letters mostly were sent as a result of the newspaper publicity that the conventions received. While it is not always easy to point out just how the general advertising of stamps is going to react specifically to advantage, yet there is no one who will say that the possibilities of publicity for philately are not immense. The cumulative value of advertising is such that it would be utter folly to relax the pressure that is now being brought to bear in behalf of printed information about collecting; and the start that has been so well made must be pressed to a successful outcome.

SCOTT STAMP AND COIN COMPANY

AUCTION DEPT.

33 WEST 44TH STREET,

NEW YORK, N. Y.

At Detroit much was said of the great international exhibition that is announced for 1926, in New York. Mr. C. J. Phillips succeeded in giving a clear presentation of the subject, and it was easy to see that those who heard of the undertaking were impressed by the magnitude of the forthcoming event. While time has been taken by the well-known forelock by the astute managers, it is well that the subject has been presented in order that the full realization of the scope of the exhibition may be gained. Under the favorable auspices of the managers already announced, the assurance is had that insofar as the stamp aspect of the occasion is concerned there will be every reason to expect a proper response; but the details of financing the project and then planning for its success will engage the best effort of those who have the exhibition directly under charge. There is little doubt but that the average collector is thoroughly in sympathy with the exhibition and that he will, according to his means, show a material interest in it. The contributions that will be made will be indicative of the enthusiasm for the plan, and in speaking unofficially for those who will compass the enterprise, we say that offerings such as are made through membership in the Association for Exhibitions will be received in the spirit in which they are tendered. The basic idea of membership in this association is such as to appeal to all collectors, and no matter what the means of the individual may be, he certainly can show his co-operation to the extent of a membership for one year or better or three years in view of the nominal subscription price for each twelve-month, or $2.00. From this time on, the idea of this exhibition will not be out of the minds of collectors; and as the months roll by and the great day approaches, there will be an ascending scale of interest in the great New York celebration.

The absence of Mr. Mount of the Washington Stamp Agency was regretted, but his telegram of good wishes to the A. P. S. was received with appreciation. He told how affairs of state were such that he could not absent himself from Washington at this time, but he said that he had kind remembrances of collectors, not alone because of their heavy patronage of his department but because of the interest that they manifested in general stamp matters. The presence of Mr. Taylor of the Ottawa, Canada, philatelic agency was an unexpected pleasure, and while Mr. Taylor said that he received no little information through his attendance, yet we are sure that the members feel grateful to him for the privilege of meeting him under happy conditions. There is no gainsaying that Mr. Taylor is an ardent partisan of the stamp, and it is fair to say, those who collect stamps; and the understanding of the psychology of the collector is better gained at an annual convention than perhaps anywhere else. The paper on Canadian stamps that Mr. Taylor prepared is an interesting one as we think our readers who will have the satisfaction of perusing it will agree.

We feel that once again we must revert to the hospitality of the Detroit members. That they worked for months before the convention in making preparations for it was evident, and so far as we could see, everything connected with the social side of the occasion was well conducted. The tendency is to take the pleasures that are provided so spontaneously, seemingly, for granted and oftentimes those who enter into them give no heed to the hard work that is necessary to bring them to fruition. We could name many who contributed their share to the success, from the visitor's viewpoint, of the convention, but rather than do so we shall speak in behalf of practically all the members who were present and say that each and every one of those who so gladly did his share in making Detroit the stamp capital for three days are enshrined in grateful remembrance in the hearts of the delegates. Mr. H. W. Boers, who had charge of the publicity at Detroit, favored us with photographs of groups of members as well as information showing how he worked to advantage in running up a big lineage. Mention should be made of Jackson D. Hagg, editorial staff of the Detroit News, for his interest in the sessions.

A book is announced that the publishers say will be unique as a hobby book; and it will include chapters on the collecting of various standard objects, including stamps. The authors are Charles Taussig and Theodore A. Meyer. The latter illustrates the book by his characteristically clever drawings. The publication is to be published this autumn, we are told, and we trust that it will receive the warm reception that no doubt it will deserve. "The Book of Hobbies": Minton, Balch & Co.

We know that the post-office department has been giving some attention to the use of precancelled stamps, and in order that we may present the wishes of the authorities in a proper way we shall quote the following orders, both of which were issued during the month of August:

PRECANCELLED STAMPS MUST BE FACED.

There appears to be a general lack of compliance with article 204, page 29, of the July, 1923, Postal Guide, which prescribes that the precancelled stamps fixed to matter returned to the sender or remained shall be defaced.

Every postmaster is therefore requested to see whether the instructions referred to are being complied with his office and, if not, to take such steps as will assure compliance therewith in order to afford proper protection to postal revenues.

Sale of the Waterhouse Collection.

Through the courtesy of Mr. Frank Godden, I have received a copy of the sixty-page catalog, together with seven pages of illustrations of the wonderful collection of United States postage stamps, gotten together by Sir Nicholas Waterhouse. This collection is to be sold at auction in London the latter part of November, and is without doubt the finest United States property that has come upon the market since the Worthington sale.

The collection is rich in choice pieces, and it is only possible to give in this short column a resumé of some of the outstanding items.

In the case of Postmaster Provisionals, there is a reconstructed sheet of forty of the 5c black New York. I know of but two other such sheets. There are numerous single copies, in addition to several pairs and two strips of three. There are four of the 5c St. Louis and an equal number of the 10c. There is a sheet of the Providence, several singles and a copy of the 5c used on the entire cover.

As for general issues, there are in the neighborhood of one hundred each of the 5c and 10c 1847, including a very wonderful used block of eight of the 5c with stitch watermark. There is also a block of four on cover, in addition to numerous covers with special cancellations. As for the 10c variety, there is a very beautiful cover showing a strip of three in combination with the 5c, making the 35c rate to Belgium. Sir Nicholas also possessed a complete sheet of fifty of the 10c re-issue of 1875.

In the 1851 series, there are some beautiful blocks, as well as very choice single specimens. There are several blocks of the 1c, a used block of eight of the 3c, several pairs and a number of singles, as well as a strip of three of the 5c, a magnificent block of six of the 10c, showing recuts, and a block of eight of the 12c.

In the 1857 series, we have equally as fine pieces, such as a mint block of the 5c, type I, a block of eight of the 12c with green paid cancellation, a block of the 30c and also a used block of six of the same variety. There is a pair on cover and a further part cover showing three copies of this stamp.

In the 1861-67 issues, we find a complete set of the August series and singles in profusion of practically all other varieties. There is a repaired block of four of the 5c buff, that I seem to remember as the damaged block in the Eagle sale, which has since been put into very beautiful shape. Another unusual piece is a block of four used of the 90c with grill.

In the 1869 series, there are the three inverts and used blocks of the rare type of the 15c, as well as the 24c.

In the Bank Note issues, there are numerous attractive pieces, such as a block of the 7c grill, a block of the 12c Continental, etc. All of the special prints are present, including the rare 2c vermilion and 5c Taylor on both the hard and soft paper. The collection stops at 1893.

Practically all of the Departments are present in single copies and there is an attractive lot of Newspapers and Postage Due. In the way of Carrier stamps, there are some very choice pieces, which no doubt will command substantial premiums.

New Envelope Contract Awarded.

Under date of August 27th, the Post Office advises that they have awarded for the four-year period beginning January 1st, next the contract for furnishing the Department with approximately 12,000,000 stamped envelopes and newspaper wrappers. The contract has been given to the Middle West Supply Company, of Dayton, Ohio, the present manufacturers of our current stamped envelopes and wrappers. The company agrees to furnish the Department these supplies for approximately $5,000,000 a year and the contract stipulates that it must be prepared to turn over to the Government in the neighborhood of 10,000,000 envelopes and wrappers each day from the beginning of the new contract.

As the manufacturers heretofore have always incorporated into the watermark the date of the contract, it means that we will no doubt have new watermarked envelopes shortly after January 1st next, when the new contract goes into effect.

HAWKEYE STAMP CO., Cedar Rapids,

When last speaking to those in authority at Washington regarding these envelopes I was informed that there was no likelihood of a change in the dies or design. As this was some months back, there is a possibility of later news upon the subject, and I hope to advise our readers more definitely in an early issue.

Huguenot-Walloon Series.

Mr. E. J. Newcomer calls attention to a very interesting oddity, which appears in the upper right pane of the 5c Huguenot-Walloon series from plate No. 157. It will be noted in the rings surrounding the figure 5, that some of the lines are badly misplaced due without doubt to defect in the transfer roll, for the variety can be seen on several stamps. It is particularly noticeable in the second stamp, it can also be seen in the first and third and Mr. Newcomer mentions a fourth and fifth. He also advises every other stamp on the pane that the inner colored ring is much thinner at bottom than elsewhere.

I have had an opportunity of checking up the varieties, and they certainly are well worthy of notice.

New Confederate Provisionals Discovered.

The Scott Stamp & Coin Company advise me that they have located two new Confederate Provisional envelopes, namely the Atlanta 2c on manila, type E-2, which is a circular rate postage. They have also been fortunate in finding an Aberdeen blue on which with a 5c value in the type E-1. The varieties have not been known heretofore and will be listed in the next catalog.

CHILE.—New Postage Dues have appeared, comprising the following denominations, each printed in blue and red: perf. 12½:—2, 4, 8, 10, 20, 40, 60 and centavos; 1, 2 and 5 pesos.

As in the case of the Dues of 1895-1896, each sheet of 150 contains seven stamps of each denomination, the first row having four of the 5 pesos, four of the 2 pesos, six of the 1 peso, and of the 80c, the second row having seven of the 80c and eight of the 60c, the third row four of the 60c and eleven of the 40c, the fourth row three of the 40c and twelve of the 20c, the fifth row five of the 20c, the sixth row fifteen of the 10c, the seventh row twelve of the 10c and three of the 8c, the eighth row five of the 8c, the ninth row two of the 8c and thirteen of the 4c, and the bottom row one of the 4c and fourteen of the 2c.

New "returned letter" labels have been issued, these being printed in blue for ordinary letters, and in orange, blue, and in vermilion for registered letters. They are perforated (12½x11½) but no denomination is indicated, and should not personally consider them any philatelic interest.—Stamp Collector

COLOMBIA.—Prompted by the note on our issue for July 12th, re the 4c ov. printed "Provisional $003," Mr. G. L. Barraclough informs us that there have been three varieties of this, specimens of which he kindly submits, the letters and figures differing in each. The first (1921) variety is remarkable for having the word spelt "provisional," unlike any of the other "Provisional" issues. The second variety has this altered to "Provisional" in slightly taller type and has also a stop after the first "the figures being rounder. In the third variety (received from Colombia a few days ago) "Provisional" is in much larger type, the "o's" are quite round.

ANDREW SLEDD,

DECATUR, GA.

PHILATELY AT JAYUYA, PUERTO RICO.

By S. P. GRAU.

The collecting of stamps in Jayuya began several years ago and among the first collectors is Mr. J. Estarellas, who possesses a good collection. When he began his collection I gave him every stamp I found, but as soon as my interest was aroused, I began my collection. Since that day every stamp I found I kept for myself.

Later, a general interest was aroused and many persons had collections. There were fine ones, but in a moment the philatelic love decayed and all those who had begun their work with enthusiasm gave up and sold their collections. The only ones who continued collecting were Mr. Estarellas and myself.

Mr. Estarellas' collection is a fine one. It contains a good number of old stamps, specially a series of Puerto Rico during the Spanish government in the island.

My collection, which was begun after Estarellas', is growing very fast and contains good specimens of both the 19th and 20th centuries.

Among the persons who have begun to collect stamps lately are my brother and a friend named Eduardo Martinez Jr. The last named sold his first collection and now he has a second one, although he may be a little uninterested in it.

My love of Philately will never pass away and my collection will grow larger and larger while others fail.

EARLY LOW VALUES SPECIALIZED.

P. M. Hogan, of Kingsport, Tenn., shows MEKEEL'S a cover recently found in some original correspondence bearing what appears to be a precancellation on the one cent blue of 1873. The cancellation apparently consists of a large "8," half an inch or more high, and there are indications of other characters showing on the stamp. None of these show on the envelope and the manner in which this cancellation is applied would indicate that a whole sheet had been cancelled in advance and the stamps then applied to the envelopes. Inasmuch as one cent stamps were used, the envelope probably contained printed matter only. Unfortunately the entire contents of the envelope were not preserved, or we might have the date of this precancellation. A small slip which remains inside shows that it came from Warren, Pa., and was used by a magazine, The Monthly Nation, E. A. Hazeltine, publisher.

NEWS OF THE MONTH.

By JOHN N. LUFF.

United States:—When sending us some varieties of the provisional envelopes of 1920-21 which we chronicle in this number, Mr. J. M. Bartels writes:

"All of these were revalued at St. Louis and obtained at various times, some of them through branch offices, by a collector who made the rounds from time to time picking up odd varieties, though he was not himself a collector of envelopes, nor had he made any effort to do anything with them until now. You may not know that St. Louis is the only office which used not less than three different types for the surcharges, namely, II, III and IV. All of these are represented in this lot. Types II and IV found together on buff and blue envelopes are explained by the fact that some few envelopes which had been previously revalued with type II got by oversight into the machine later and received an additional overprint of type IV. I have seen a used copy of the blue envelope cut square with postmark St. Louis. The latter I have had some length of time."

Belgium:—The rate for a single-weight letter to be sent abroad has been raised to 75 centimes. To conform with the regulations of the Universal Postal Union, the color of the stamp of this value will be changed to blue. This will involve a change in the color of the 50c stamp, which is blue at present. There is a possibility of other color changes. It has not been announced if the colors of stamps now in use will be altered or if the changes will be made in the new issue now being prepared in London.

Canal Zone:—The Metropolitan Stamp Company has shown us a letter from Mr. Gerald D. Bliss, Postmaster of the Canal Zone, in which he writes that the new issue which we chronicled in this number was placed on sale July 1st, and at the same time, all Panama stamps surcharged "Canal Zone" were immediately and permanently retired from use.

Of the recent issue of Panama surcharged "Canal Zone," only the 1c and 2c stamps were issued to Postmasters, though several other values have been chronicled abroad.

Denmark:—The postal service of this country dates back three hundred years, having been established December 24, 1624, by King Christian IV. The third centenary of this event is to be commemorated by a special issue of stamps. We have not, as yet, seen any announcement of the proposed denominations and designs.

Ecuador:—We have received eleven stamps overprinted with an aeroplane. The stamps are the 1c orange of 1915-17 and the 1c to 10c inclusive of 1920. The overprints are handstamped in black or dark carmine and show two types of aeroplane. We have no information about this issue beyond the statement in a European journal that on the occasion of a flight between Quito and Ibarra, stamps of the 1920 issue were overprinted with an aeroplane. We fail to understand why so many stamps, all of low values, would be needed for any air post service and are inclined to think they were for advertising purposes and probably are of private origin. We have read somewhere that Ecuador is suffering from a shortage of postage stamps, especially low values. It might help a little if they would refrain from unnecessary overprinting.

In 1920 eight stamps were issued with the overprint "Casa de Correos." One was a postage stamp and seven were fiscals, five of which were also surcharged with new values. It was explained at the time these stamps did not pay postage but were a compulsory tax on letters and other mail matter to provide a fund for rebuilding post-offices. We have heard nothing more of stamps of this class for some years but recently there has been a new outburst. In June we chronicled cigarette tax stamps of 1c and 2c overprinted "Casa-Correos." In July we described two fiscal stamps surcharged "Casa de Correos," and "Viente Cts," similar to our type A85. Now Mr. D. P. Ball sends us two telegraph stamps, 1c orange and 2c dark blue, with "Casa Correos" and finally (we hope) Mr. A. A. Wasserscheid sends another 2c blue fiscal stamp, with different inscriptions but the same overprint. We feel that this sort of stamp is becoming rather over-abundant and that it may be well not to chronicle any more of them until their claim to a place among postage stamps is better established.

France:—In our European contemporaries we find various reports about French stamps, present and to come. It is stated that the Pasteur stamps, 10c, 30c and 50c are to continue in use as part of the regular issue. The 4c brown of the 1900 type has been reissued, but at present is only sold in quantities and precancelled. L'Echo de la Timbrologie announces the following as soon as issued:

Head of Pasteur15, 45, 75c

"Semeuse" with solid background 10, 30c

"Semeuse" with lined background 50, 60, 85c

Postage Due45c

This seems to include some repetition of values and three stamps, 10, 30 and 50c, which are at present in use. Possibly the colors are to be changed.

We recently mentioned that it was proposed to issue a stamp to advertise the Exhibition of Decorative Arts to be held in 1925. We learn that this is to be worse than we had anticipated. It is now stated that for this purpose there are to be stamps of 5, 10, 25 and 50c and a post card of 30c.

And there is talk of issues to commemorate the poet Ronsard and the entomologist Fabre.

Germany:—The Universal Postal Union was established on October 9, 1874, consequently its fiftieth anniversary occurs this year. We hear that various countries are planning to issue stamps commemorating the occasion. Germany is the first to give shape to the intention by issuing two stamps which bear the portrait of Dr. H. Von Stephan, first Postmaster General of Germany, an ardent advocate of the Universal Postal Union, inventor of the postal card and founder of the Berlin Postal Museum. The stamps are inscribed at the sides, in German, "Fiftieth Year" and "Universal Postal Union."

Greece:—When sending us the new Charity stamp which we chronicle in this number, our correspondent, Mr. P. J. Drossos, writes that it was quite unexpected. It was thought that the 1922 stamp (No. 341) would be re-issued. The printing of the new stamp is limited. Mr. Drossos calls attention to the fact that the stamp is perforated instead of having the serrate roulette. This is the first stamp made by Messrs. Aspiotis to be perforated. They are now preparing new stamps for Greece which also are to be perforated. We feel certain that everyone who has anything to do with Greek stamps will be duly thankful for this improvement.

to be overprinted "Hellenic State." This is supposed to indicate that Greece is now a republic. We fail to see that the overprint does anything of the kind or that it is in the least necessary. With the exception of special issues, like those celebrating the Olympic Games, Greek stamps have always been inscribed simply "Ellas" and their values. The overprint "Hellenic State" will be merely a superfluity. We fear the 1922 surcharges proved to be an easy and profitable way of getting rid of old stock and have prompted a similar effort now.

Honduras:—We are indebted to Mr. F. W. Budde for samples of the new issue which we chronicle this month. When sending them, Mr. Budde writes: "These stamps ought to have made their appearance last August but the outfit in charge found it more profitable to raise small values, like 1c to 10c, 2c to 50c, and 5c to 1 peso. This was illegal and there was a grand row in Congress, which at last brought on the Revolution and the overthrow of the Government. I think the 5c and 15c are missing in the set; anyhow, they have not made their appearance as yet."

"I also enclose blocks of four of the 1920 issue countersigned 'Santiago Herrera.' This is the name of the official that handles the Government money matters in this Department. This was done to protect the new Government against the sale of $16,000 worth of stamps stolen during the fighting around here. They are very scarce. None are to be had now and they go out of use on June 7th."

The countersigning is a reproduction of a written signature which is hand-stamped in violet. It extends across four stamps. As a rule, only a small and illegible part of it appears on each stamp. We fancy that any stamp with a few scratches in violet ink would be accepted at the Post Office. At best, this is only a control mark and we do not feel inclined to give the stamps bearing it a place in the catalogue.

Japan:—Messrs. Yuasa & Company write us that at the time of the earthquake and fire a good stock of 5 sen and 10 sen stamps escaped, though the dies were destroyed. This stock is now about exhausted and it is reported that the Government Printing Bureau is about ready to produce new stamps of these values.

Libia:—This country was recently divided into two districts, Cyrenaica and Tripolitania, and several issues of Italian stamps have been surcharged for both districts. This being the case, the four stamps inscribed "Libia" which we chronicled last month came as a surprise. Possibly they are a belated part of the 1921 issue, in which the four new values are missing. We assume that it will soon be found necessary to overprint these stamps for Cyrenaica and Tripolitania.

When announcing these new stamps one European journal states that "the design is the work of A. Calcagnadoro and the die was engraved by A. Repettati." We agree that these names appear on the stamps but, if the writer will recall pictures that are familiar to us all, we think he will remember that the original of this stamp is one of the sibyls depicted by Michelangelo in his great fresco on the ceiling of the Sistine Chapel in Rome.

Liechtenstein:—The Philatelic Magazine says: "A Central News message states that this tiny independent State with 12,000 inhabitants, between Switzerland and the Austrian Tyrol, has decided in the future to use Swiss postage stamps, and the remaining stocks of Liechtenstein stamps, numbering some nine millions, have just been destroyed."

For this and all other mercies may we be duly thankful!

Russia:—We have received, without comment or explanation, a copy of the imperforate 3 kopeks red of 1917-18, which is surcharged with a star and "1923—Korrespondenzia—filatelista—15 kop." This suggests an effort to get money out of stamp collectors.

Switzerland:—The Berner Brief-marken Zeitung reports that the colors of the 5, 20, 30 and 40c stamps are to be changed and the 25c is to be discontinued. In October stamps of 20c red and 30c blue, commemorative of the Jubilee of the Universal Postal Union, will be issued. —Scott's Monthly Journal.

WHAT ELSE MATTERS?

Whoever has tingled with the prospect of possession of, let us say, a triangle Cape of Good Hope, will regret for a moment his backsliding as he reads the foregoing of the still devoted stamp collectors. He will feel that should be of the cavalcade of holiday riders now mobilized in this city under the banner of the Society of Philatelic Americans.

He will mourn lost opportunities. What do the trophies of his leisure hours amount to? After a thousand hours on the links he can exhibit little cup recording that he won July handicap in Class B. Is it ambitious a fancy that, had he taken to nibbles, he might be as master of an authority on the postal issues of Hayti as the president of the Philatelic Americans?

All the money he has spent on stamps might have distinguished him as owner of some of the rarer varieties of Blood's penny post. The time expended would have been enough for an exhaustive study of the first issues of the Two Sicilies. Had it been so employed he might be a specialist in the first rank on the "Ying Ya" watermark of China. He could have sufficient devotion have obtained a diploma of merit for a dissertation on the rarity of the twopenny postage of Mauritius of 1847.

These are the things that really matter. If they do not, why is it that the crowned heads remaining in Europe, who should be connoisseurs of ennui, find the surest solace in stamp albums? And why is it that Soviet rulers have raised a new slogan "Philatelists of the world, unite!" a world surcharged with trouble gentlemen who delight to concentrate on its perforate and imperforate mutations are not a little to be envied. —Y. Herald Tribune Editorial.

STAR REPORTER COVERS CONVENTION

By O. K. CLARA.

Due to the kind invitation of the Editor of this greatest of philatelic publications, the writer of this "whatever you want to call it" is duly thankful for an opportunity to say a few words as regards that great Convention of Stamp Bugs at Detroit.

While this publication is a stamp newspaper, I believe that there are a lot of its readers who will forgive me if this column doesn't stick entirely to stamps.

As for myself, I went to Detroit to play and get away from stamps for a few days. When one makes their daily bread and butter handling stamps he usually sees enough of them for 360 days in the year and is glad of an opportunity now and then to do something else than chase stamps. Besides, at one of these Conventions, the competition is so keen that it is nothing unusual to see a choice cover sell at $15 one day and see it resell at double that figure on the next day. The buyers simply raise prices every year at these meetings and it's a lesson to any collector to attend one of the meetings.

There are always a wealth of good stories going the rounds of any convention where good fellows get together, and those assembled had the opportunity of hearing Charlie Phillips explain his difficulties with Americanese and English, as she is spoken in dear old Lunnon. It's a good one.

One of the Minneapolis boys is quite a collector, for on a ramble one evening on the way back from a visit to a wholesale cigar store early in the morning this fellow insisted in telling me about how he had planned to walk from Minneapolis to Detroit to attend the Convention.

I refused to listen to such foolish talk and crowned him with the leavings of what had been a first class straw hat before some taxi had walked over it. A bit further down the street this collector picked up a milk bottle, which I am told he set outside his door at the hotel, and when he got up the next morning wondered why the milkman had not left him a bottle of milk.

A certain well-known 3c 1851 enthusiast from a small village on the border line between Ohio and Pennsylvania was lost almost all week while at the Convention. He couldn't find his room, or what floor he was on and when he got outside the hotel he couldn't tell which way to go to get anywhere. If I had not taken this collector in charge and conducted him about the city showing him the sights in a proper manner the poor fellow wouldn't have dared stray away from the hotel.

The Boat trip to Bob-Lo was one of the most popular of the entertainment features and the photograph taken before the dance casino is probably the longest on record, both in time of getting ready and in length of the picture. Those who gaze on the photo this year will note three "imitators" on both ends of the picture.

On the way back John Thomas and myself sat by the dance floor and watched the fairies in the latest steps. You know John is a Music man and has a perfect right to get familiar with all the latest dance music and the proper interpretation of the various up-to-date steps in present-day dancing. We had great sport in trying to find two couples dancing the same steps to any piece that was played. John explained to me that besides the fact that the Music was Jazz the dancing was also Jazz.

I am getting so much written here that I feel that the editor will want to cut some of it out if I don't be careful and since I don't know anything about the stamps that were shown at the Convention, I can't say a lot more except that I had went to Detroit with the understanding that my train home left at 11.50 P. M., since I had to be back in the old home town at 10 the next morning. Before grabbing the grip and tipping the porter at the hotel, I tried to say goodbye to several of the boys and after a hasty exit, the taxi dropped me at the depot at 11:18, where a "red top" grabbed my bag and said, "What train?"—"Columbus"—"Think it's gone, run, mebbey we can catch it." And we didn't catch it. A few minutes conversation with the information bureau soon developed the fact that the only satisfactory information I could get was that I could get a taxi to take me to Toledo where I could get on the sleeper that would be picked up by the Hocking Valley at 4:50 in the morning and get me home on time.
